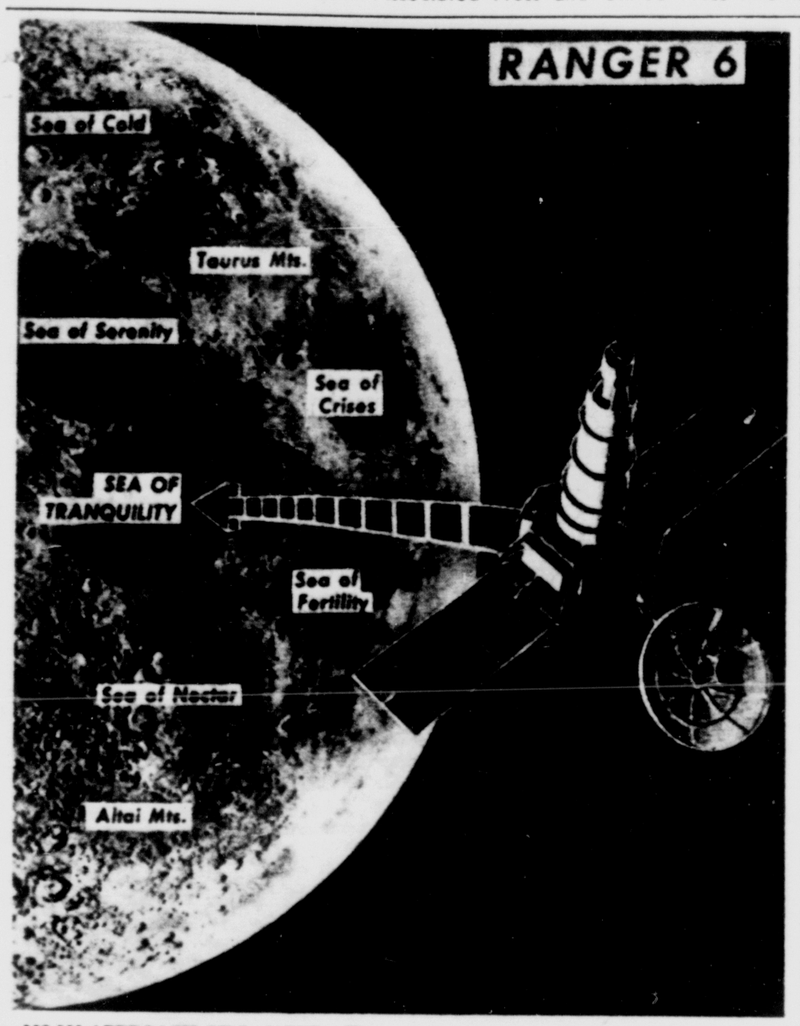
Ranger Set to 'See' Moon



MOON APPROACH OF RANGER—This montage indicates how spacecraft Ranger 6 was expected to approach the moon for a crash landing into the "Sea of Tranquility." The "Sea of Tranquility" is a great flat basin some 350 miles across, a target said to be unlike anything on earth but roughly comparable to California's Death Valley — a vast sand and salt desert rimmed by rugged mountains. By RALPH DIGHTON

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—The U.S. spacecraft Ranger 6 streaked toward doom Saturday with a cargo of cameras that could solve ages-old mysteries before they crash on the moon early Sunday.

The spacecraft was so well positioned in space that scientists at Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which is controlling Ranger 6 during its 66-hour voyage, decided against a planned last-hour realignment of its six television cameras.

After tracking the vehicle since a complicated midcourse correction Friday, officials late Saturday said it would impact within a 90-mile circle in a desert-like basin called the Sea of Tranquility, which lies some 400 miles to the right of dead center on the moon's visible face.

Dr. William Pickering, laboratory director, said the site is only 15 miles north of the original target, at which the space craft was aimed during the midcourse maneuver.

Impact time is still a few seconds past 1:24 a.m. (PST) Sunday.

Pickering gave the spacecraft's 5 p.m. position as 220,283 miles from earth with 23,774 miles yet to go to the moon. Its speed at the time: 2,306 m.p.h.

If all goes well, first prints of the pictures taken by Ranger 6 may be released at 7 p.m. Sunday, Pickering said.

It was expected to crash at 1:24 a.m. Sunday in the moon's Sea of Tranquility, a broad flat basin some 400 miles to the right of dead center of the shining disk.

This dry "sea" is being studied as a landing site for manned Apollo moonships later in this decade.

A spokesman for the laboratory, which is controlling Ranger 6 during its 66-hour voyage, said all systems are in a "go" condition.

As the spacecraft streaks nearer the moon, the pull of lunar gravity will increase its speed to almost 6,000 miles an hour at impact.

Ten minutes before the crash, at an altitude of about 900 miles six small television cameras will begin clicking at a rate of 300 shots a minute.

If everything works U.S. scientists will have the first closeup photographs of the moon. The pictures could disclose whether the surface is rough or smooth, made of lava

CC Given $91,900 National Science Foundation Grant

The National Science Foundation has awarded Colorado College a grant of $91,900 to conduct its ninth annual Summer Institute in Science and Mathematics.

The eight-week summer institute, open to 70 high school science and mathematics teachers, will get underway June 14.

Applications, on regular NSF forms, must be postmarked not later than Feb. 15, according to Prof. Richard G. Beidleman, director of the NSF programs at Colorado College.

He said those applying should have at least five years teaching experience at the high school level.

Professor Beidleman said teachers selected for the program will be able to earn 10 semester hours of credit during the summer. The program was set so that a teacher could earn a master's degree in three summers, he said.

The 70 teachers who took part in the institute last year were selected from more than 800 applicants.

High school teachers taking part in the program this year will have an opportunity to work alongside research scientists at Colorado College. Programs will be offered in biology, chemistry, earth sciences, mathematics and physics.

The Summer Institute in science and Mathematics is one of three summer institutes offered at the independent liberal arts college under NSF sponsorship. The other two include a field biology institute at Aspen and an eight-week institute for high ability high school students.

New Wonder Drug May Cure Common Cold

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Scientists at the University of Oregon medical school said Friday that a number of ailments—including the common cold, arthritis, pain and infection — respond to dimethyl sulfoxide.

The medicinal properties of the drug were discovered by accident at the medical school. The drug, known as Dmso, is produced from wood and has been used for some time as a solvent. The drug was developed by the Crown Zellerbach Corp.

It was discovered that the drug penetrates the body very rapidly by flowing directly through the skin. It was discovered also that the drug will carry other chemicals and drugs with it.

Dr. Stanley W. Jacob, assistant professor of surgery at the medical school, has prepared a paper which will appear in the February issue of Current Therapeutic Research. In it he discusses some of the research that is underway with the drug.

He describes the drug's penetrating ability and said it enhances the absorption of drugs in experimental animals for blood thinning, of insulin, antibiotics and drugs used in the treatment of asthma.

LBJ Slaps de Gaulle's Plan For Neutral Southeast Asia

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson slapped directly at French President Charles de Gaulle Saturday, saying, "It would not be in the interest of freedom to share his view" on neutralizing Southeast Asia.

Johnson, at his first announced-in-advance news conference, said that, "As I understand it, the neutralization talk has applied only to South Viet Nam and not to the whole of that area."

"If we could have neutralization of both North Viet Nam and South Viet Nam, I am sure that would be considered sympathetically," Johnson said.

The President's words left newsmen somewhat puzzled because De Gaulle has called for neutralization of both halves of Viet Nam as well as neighboring Laos and Cambodia.

Thus while Johnson was saying he disagreed with De Gaulle, in essence he seemed to be agreeing—at last in theory—since Laos has been officially neutralized and Cambodia avows a neutral stance.

A White House spokesman, saying he wanted to clarify Johnson's statements, said later that the French leader's suggestions had been interpreted in Saigon as envisioning neutralization only of that country. And the spokesman said Johnson was addressing himself to the Saigon interpretation.

Johnson made it clear that his own Viet Nam policy looks toward an immediate stepup in military operations against the Communist Viet Cong guerrillas.

He announced that he had new and friendly leaders" of the Saigon junta that seized power Wednesday "that they are proceeding immediately" to increase military pressure on the Viet Cong.

Although Johnson said some neutralization plan might receive a sympathetic hearing in Washington, he also said flatly, "I do not agree with General de Gaulle's proposals."

A standing-room-only crowd of reporters jammed into the tiny White House theater for the news conference, at which Johnson also told newsmen:

The second conference question hinged on the propriety of Baker's conduct while Baker was secretary of the Senate Democratic majority.

The President said the Senate Rules Committee would determine the accuracy of allegations against Baker. And he said he was sure the committee would render judgment.

The President was asked if he thought his long-time assistant, Walter Jenkins, should testify before the committee about his part, if any, in dealings involv-

Seven Refugees Rescued After Drifting 13 Days

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) —A fishing boat Saturday rescued seven Cuban refugees—six men and a woman—who had drifted in an open boat in the Gulf of Mexico for 13 days.

The Coast Guard said the American schooner Dell G picked up the Cubans 100 miles northwest of Progreso, Mexico, on the Yucatan Peninsula. They had been without water seven days.

The radio message to the Coast Guard said the Cubans were in reasonably good health despite the ordeal. They did not require emergency medical care.

The Dell G is expected to arrive in Mobile, its home port, Monday.

The Coast Guard said the Cubans apparently got caught in a westerly current and wound up far from their destination, presumably Florida or a nearby Caribbean Island.

Their names were not immediately available.

Three New Weapons Being Perfected, LBJ Discloses

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Johnson called attention Saturday to three new weapons now being perfected for battle use.

He said the defense Department was completing development of the Redeye, a battlefield anti aircraft weapon for use by infantrymen; the Shillelagh anti tank missile, and the Navy's Wall-Eye bomb which is guided to its target by television.

Johnson said the Redeye could be fired like a rifle at an airplane and would send a heat-seeking missile in pursuit with a very high probability of scoring a hit.

"For the first time, our ground combat soldiers will be able to fight back against a high performance enemy aircraft," he said.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara told the House Armed Services Committee this week that the government would spend $7.9 million on the Redeye this year.

Johnson said the Shillelagh has passed engineering tests and is ready for production.

"It is an anti tank missile mounted on a vehicle so light that we can parachute it into the battlefield, so accurate that it can destroy a tank at a range of several thousand yards," he said.

The President also said the Navy was developing the Wall-Eye for use on tactical targets.

This bomb is launched from an airplane and guided to its target by television through a television camera inside it. Once the pilot has focused this camera on the target by remote control, the guidance mechanism sends it to its target.

"The Wall-Eye has been demonstrated and it has shown amazing accuracy at a range of several miles," Johnson said.

More Coups Can Be Expected in South Viet Nam

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—A ranking American official said Saturday more governments may fall in South Viet Nam's continuing battle against military and political unrest and Communist guerillas.

"I'm afraid Viet Nam is not yet through with coups," the official told a newsman. "There may be several more like the one we saw Thursday—in fact it may be inevitable."

Westerners believe the danger of government power plays such as brought Maj. Gen. Nguyen Khanh to the top Thursday, will exist until a leader gathers enough public and political support to build a dictatorship.

'Big Ed' Proposes New Super Government for Denver Region

DENVER (AP)—Ed. C. Johnson, former Colorado governor and senator, submitted a proposal for a super-county form of government to the Governor's Local Affairs Study Commission today.

Johnson termed his "Metro County" proposal a workable solution to the problems not only of the Denver area but other growing urban regions throughout the state.

His proposal, Johnson told the 110-member commission's Metropolitan Committee, would create a large home rule county similar to Denver's present city-county government. He said Denver citizens, under their self-rule charter, "have the most democratic form of local government in these United States."

Amending the State Constitution to permit creation of other home rule counties like Denver, the former governor said, would also be beneficial to areas like El Paso, Pueblo, Boulder and Weld counties. They, and some other counties, have become more urban than rural and have outgrown concepts of which existing county governments are based, he said.

His proposed super county, Johnson said, "would contain within its boundaries all of the territory of the present city of Denver, and all of the suburban cities surrounding the city of Denver, plus sufficient farming and vacant land for 100 years of metropolitan growth."

"The present urban area of metropolitan Denver is 155 square miles."

Within the super county's boundaries, Johnson said, would be 386 square miles of practically vacant land for future growth.

The suggested large home rule county would be governed by a commission whose members would be elected from districts as nearly equal in population as possible. The commissioners would select a county manager to act as supreme executive authority in the area.

Johnson said variations of his proposal have been successfully tried in metropolitan areas of Los Angeles, Miami, Las Vegas, Tucson, Phoenix, Nashville and San Diego.

Billy Graham Says He Will Not Run for U.S. President

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Billy Graham put an end Saturday to reports that he might be interested in running for president, by saying he would "rather be a preacher of the Gospel of Jesus Christ than hold any political office in the world."

"I have no intentions of entering politics or to giving the slightest encouragement to my friends who want me to," Graham said.

The 45-year-old evangelist made the comments at a news conference which he called to reply to a published report in the Houston press Friday which said he was considering accepting a draft for the Republican presidential nomination.

Graham said he had been under considerable pressure for several months "from some of my friends and certain political leaders to give consideration to running for high political office."

He indicated the most recent urgings for him to seek political office came from the Republicans. However, he said several years ago the Democrats had approached him.

"I intend to be neutral," he said.

Graham was in Houston for the ninth annual Layman's Leadership Institute and addressed the closing session Saturday.

"For me to enter politics, the Lord would have to tell me to, as clearly as He did Moses with the burning bush," Graham told newsmen after reading his prepared statement.

"Long ago God called me to preach the Gospel, and I have no intention of changing my vocation," Graham read from the statement.

"The greatest service I can render to God and to the world in this critical period of history is now approaching a period of grave domestic and international danger and that the nation desperately needs moral and spiritual strength to win this vast struggle in which we are engaged."

Replying to newsmen's questions concerning a presidential draft, Graham replied: "There is no such thing as a draft. All drafts are organized ahead of time."

Graham said he had personal friends among the Democrats and the Republicans.

"I have never announced publicly my party affiliation or for whom I have voted in an election," Graham said.

Graham also ruled out the vice-presidential nomination. When asked if he would accept a draft for that office, he said: "There would be even less chance."

After reading his statement, Graham said he "hoped this announcement ends all speculations and rumors about me seeking political office."

East Side Medical Building to Be Built

Joseph F. Pieper announced Saturday that construction will begin in approximately 45 days on the East Side Medical Building located on Academy Boulevard at Marion Drive in Colorado Springs. Pieper represents the Academy Boulevard Corporation, owner of the project.

Architect's plans call for 7 dental suites, 6 physician suites, a pharmacy, a laboratory and X-ray suite, as well as miscellaneous storage and public space. The two story building has been designed by W. A. Miller-Architect around a central full-height court. This court will be landscaped with shrubs, mature trees, and reflecting pools and will be covered with a glass roof. Stairways, balconies, and the elevator will open directly off the court.

The first floor of the building will be reserved for dental suites and the second floor for physicians suites. Parking will be provided for approximately 80 cars.

The entire building will be constructed of incombustible materials using a concrete frame and a concrete floor and roof structure. Exterior walls will be face brick, Colorado "moss-rock," and marblecrete. All suites will be heated, ventilated, and air conditioned with air handling units supplied from a common boiler and chiller.

Bids will be received for the various phases of the work in March. It is estimated by Miller that the building cost will be approximately $480,000.

Blood Is Body Tissue; Has Unique Functions

By THE COLORADO MEDICAL SOCIETY

Blood is a body tissue like any other, but because it is fluid it has unique functions as a messenger and carrier.

Actually, blood is not aas much a liquid as it might seem to be to the naked eye when you cut your finger. It is composed of formed elements — cells — suspended in a liquid, and the cells make up nearly half of the volume of blood.

Under the microscope, three major types of blood cells can be distinguished. Each has its specific functions as messenger, carrier, mobile warrior or circulating repairman.

These cells are so small 60,000 of them could be placed on the head of a pin, and if all the cells in the 5 to 6 quarts of blood in the body were compressed, the solid mass would be as large as the liver.

Blood is not inert, but a living, constantly changing tissue. More than 250 million blood cells die and are replaced every day as the red fluid goes about its work of carrying oxygen to the tissues, carbon dioxide wastes back to the lungs for expulsion, nutrients to the more solid tissues, waste products to the elimination organs and a variety of living chemicals to fight off diseases or or stanch the flow with a clot if a wound occurs.

All of this at a rapid pace. The entire supply of blood in the body passes thru the heart every two to three minutes, and this fantastically efficient pump handles the equivalent of six barrels of blood every hour.

The principal blood cells are:

Red cells, formed principally of hemoglobin, an iron - protein compound which gives blood its color and which carries oxygen. There are 4 to 6 million red cells in a cubic millimeter of blood.

White cells, 5000 to 10,000 of them to the cubic millimeter. These cells have a variety of functions, but one of the most important is the fighting off of bacterial invaders of the body. The white cell count of blood goes up when an infection is present anywhere in the body.

Platelets, small cells numbering normally some 250,000 to 300,000 per cubic millimeter, which are part of the mechanism of blood clotting as a defense against bleeding.

These cells are suspended in and circulate by means of the fluid part of blood, called plasma, a complex fluid which also carries a variety of other vital materials. Plasma also carries digested food in the form of sugars and proteins, waste products to the kidneys for elimination, salts to the tissue cells and the intercellular fluids surrounding them in maintenance of their chemical balance, antibodies to help the white cells fight infections, and other chemicals including fibrinogen, a protein which combines with the platelets to promote clotting.

Blood cells remain within the walls of the blood vessels — arteries running outward from the heart and lungs, veins carrying the return flow for replenishment — but the fluids of the blood pass thru the vessel walls in a free interchange with other parts of the body.

It is sometimes forgotten in these days of dramatic organ transplants that blood has been successfully "transplanted" in transfusions for more than 50 years. Blood transfusions became possible once it was learned that there are essentially a limited number of differences between the bloods of individuals.

A person's blood may be typed into one of four families — designated as O, A, B and AB — and any individual's blood remains that same type even if he receives another compatible type by transfusion. The compatibility of blood types now has been well established.

O blood is the universal donor type. That is, it may be given safely to any person regardless of his own natural type. Reverse-wise, AB blood is the universal recipient type. A person with AB blood can be transfused with any other type. Aside from this, blood for transfusion must be matched, type to type, A to A, B to B, O to O.

Old Doc Experience advises:

1. Good nutrition and the maintenance of good bodily health are far more important than any amount of "blood tonic" in keeping the blood healthy and functioning. No amount of alcoholic brews of sassafras bark, mandrake root and blackstrap molasses does anything to "tone up" the blood.

2. There are diseases of the blood and changes in it which reflect other diseases. These can affect both the formed and fluid elements of blood.

3. Increases in red cells may indicate polycythemia or lung or heart conditions. More common is a decrease in red cells, called anemia, which is not really a disease but a symptom indicating that something has gone wrong in the manufacture of red cells, or that something is destroying them too rapidly, or that they are being lost by bleeding, often internally. There is no treatment in the strict sense for anemia in itself; the cause of the anemia must be located and remedied.

4. Some infections can cause a decrease in the number of white cells, a condition known as neutropenia. Leukemia is an overgrowth of abnormal white cells closely related to cancer.

5. A decline in the number of platelets produces a weakening in the blood's power to form clots and manifests itself in several diseases, the most dramatic of which is probably the "bleeding disease," hemophilia.

Cars, Food Equal 48% of Local Retail Dollar

A new review of business activity with special reference to consumer spending and retail trade, shows that El Paso County was a sturdy market in the past fiscal year.

Local residents spent freely for goods and services, causing a number of retail lines to move up into new, high territory. Particular strength was shown by outlets for cars and other automotive equipment.

As in other parts of the country, the auto was a big factor in making the year a good one. However, the very circumstances that pushed car sales to near-record volume — bigger incomes, more money in the bank and growing confidence in the economy — also benefited other retail lines.

As a result, there were more dishwashers, vacuum cleaners, air conditioners and electric ranges sold than for some time.

The spending picture is revealed in the annual survey made by the Standard Rate and Data Service, covering communities in all sections of the United States.

El Paso County's figures show that a major part of the consumer dollar locally — 48 per cent of it — went for food and for automotive equipment and supplies.

They accounted for total retail sales in the year of $95,273,000. The previous year's volume was $90,504,000.

Local grocery stores, meat markets, bakeries and other stores selling food for home consumption accounted for some $38,667,000 of this amount.

Another $37,980,000 went for purchases of cars, boats and other automotive equipment.

Sales in gas service stations came to $18,626,000.

Strong consumer spending is also indicated in other principal retail outlets covered in the survey.

Local stores selling general merchandise compiled a $22,001,000 volume in the year.

Shops selling wearing apparel of all sorts, such as hats, shoes, clothing, underwear and related articles, had a gross of $11,660,000.

Drug store sales amounted to $8,057,000.

Aspirin Named Greatest Poison Call Agent

Aspirin was the greatest single agent resulting in calls to the Poison Control Centers in Colorado during 1962, according to a report recently compiled by the Poison Control Branch of the Public Health Service.

A total of 127 calls concerning accidental poisoning with aspirin were made, of which 109 concerned children under five years of age. Household detergents were responsible for 79 calls, of which 68 were involving children under five.

Accidental poisoning in children under five years of age was responsible for 82 per cent, or 1,199, of the calls. In addition to aspirin and detergents, the children had swallowed substances such as bleaches, perfumes and colognes, medicines prescribed or intended for adults, tranquilizers, polishes, lighter fluid, insecticides and mouse and rat poisons.

"The breakdown of the statistics shows that the greatest poisoning hazards are household substances that are left within the rach of small children," said Dr. Roy L. Cleere, director of the State Department of Public Health. "In general, these products are not harmful when properly used, but infants and small children can not read labels and they assume that anything found in or around the house is safe to eat or drink. It is the responsibility of parents and other adults in the home to place these toxic substances out of the reach of children."

The report shows that for persons over five years of age carbon monoxide and other gases, insecticides, tranquilizers and other sedatives, detergents, bleaches, and ink accounted in order of frequency for calls to the poison centers. Eighty-nine per cent of the calls involving carbon monoxide and other gases concerned persons 15 years or older.

Carol Magruder and Kathy Moore qualified for awards by taking shorthand at a dictated rate of 120 with 95 per cent accuracy. Cheryl Ehnes took dictation at the 100 rate with the same degree of accuracy.

Students receiving typing awards were Wilma Backstrand, Gloria Farney, Patti Jacobson, Marsha Ward, Elizabeth Adams, Rita Anderson, Theresa Aune, Carol Brewer, Carol Marie Crist, Jay Dockery, Evelyn Dyson, Jeanine Field, and Carol Hackney.

Others were Linda Harris, Nancy Houghton, William Jaynes, Ralph Kennan, Bonnie Laveirge, Carol Michaelis, Kathy Miller, Judy Parker, Joyce Quick, Barbara Tanser, and Delores Wynn.

Bud Marsh Named Handicapped of The Month

John "Bud" Marsh, 39, the "Handicapped of the Month" likes to sit on the porch of his home, weather permitting, and have friendly chats with the many north Junior High students who stop by on their way home from school.

John, who came here from Illinois 12 years ago, lives with his mother at 317 E. San Rafael St. A cerebral palsy victim, he has been confined to a wheel chair all his life.

He enjoys watching TV and listening to an attractive stereo radio he received for Christmas, as well as following the stock market and financial news closely. "I have four bum stocks," says John, who is hopeful they will improve.

John belongs to the "Stalwarts and Pals Club" which meets once a month at the Rocky Mountain Rehabilitation Center. He talks enthusiastically about the many club projects, such as the trip to the Air Force Academy last spring when the President visited there and seeing the Pikes Peak or Bust Rodeo.

The club also had a Christmas Party at the Ent Officers Club which John says was "quite a bash."

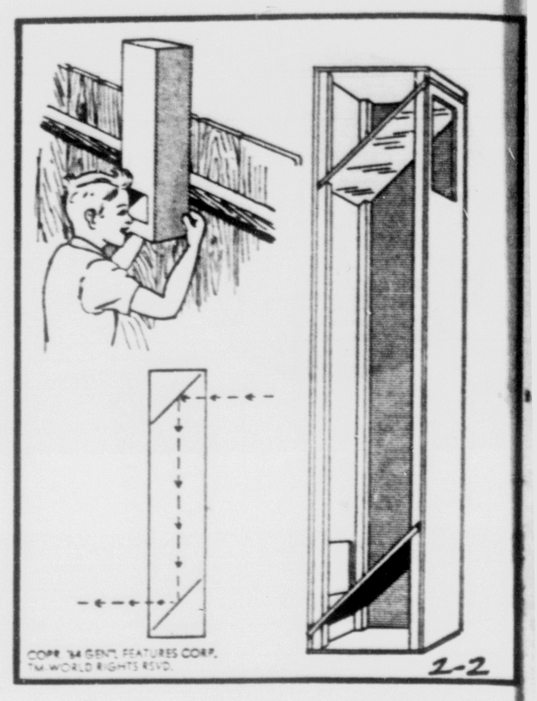
FINANCIAL NEWS—John Marsh, who has been confined to a wheelchair all of his life, takes pleasure in listening to the financial reports on a stereo radio he received for Christmas. Marsh, the "Handicapped of the Month," is a victim of cerebral palsy. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

Former College Prexy Completes Jail Term

RYE, N.Y. (AP) — A former college president has completed a 28-day jail term for defying a city ordinance against hanging rags from a washline on his front lawn in Rye, N.Y.

Dr. Webster Stover, 61, a former president of Arnold College in New Haven, Conn., had been sentenced to 30 days for using the washline attention-getter to protest what he called unjust tax assessments on his property.

He has said he will sue the city of Rye for false arrest. The case had gone all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, which failed to act on Stover's appeal.



Science for You

By BOB BROWN

PROBLEM: Make a periscope.

NEEDED: Cardboard, wood and two dime store mirrors.

DO THIS: Build an enclosed box with the mirrors in it as shown so that they rest at a 45-degree angle and parallel to each other. This periscope will enable you to see over a wall or the heads of other people.

WHY? Light rays entering the box at the top are reflected as indicated by the dashes and arrows. Look up the law for the reflection of light on a plane surface.

Get the collection of these science tricks. Look for it in bookstores under the name "Science Circus No. 2." Fleet of New York is the publisher.

Wasson High School News

By CAROL JENSEN

These students will represent their classes in all projects, jobs, or duties belonging to the class. Senior council is now working on plans for this year's senior trip and for the senior gift to be presented to the school at the end of the school year.

The junior class is responsible for raising money for the decorations, dance band, and invitations to be delivered to all seniors for the Junior-Senior Prom; this year they are sponsoring the junior class play "The Male Animal" to raise this money.

A parents' discussion group meeting will be held Feb. 11 at Wasson. Topic for this program deals with teenage problems, which a student panel will discuss. Parents and students are invited and encouraged to attend this meeting, as well as the others in the series. All parent discussion groups are concerned with subjects of interest and importance to parents and their high school students — such subjects as communication between home and school and school problems are discussed. Mrs. Kilgore, dean of girls, is a sponsor of this program.

Thursday is Business Appreciation Day for teachers. Wasson teachers will be the guests of Colorado Springs businessmen for a lunch at the City Auditorium. After the lunch, teachers will visit some of the local business establishments. This special day is designed to promote good-will between the teachers and businessmen of the city; last year the businessmen visited the schools on the day and attended some of the classes. Because of the luncheon for the teachers, school will be dismissed for Wasson students at 11:30 a.m. The school schedule for the day will be:

Period 1 — 8 to 8:30
Period 2 — 8:35 to 9:05
Period 3 — 9:10 to 9:40
Period 7 — 9:45 to 10:15
Period 8 — 10:20 to 10:50
Period 9 — 10:55 to 11:30

There will be no fourth, fifth, or sixth periods.

Wasson's library will be opened two nights a week starting the week of Feb. 10. This is an experimental program and its success will depend on attendance and cooperation of the student body and those students using the library. It is designed to increase the study and research facilities open to Wasson students.

This next week also includes an assembly schedule for the student body. Tuesday a concert will be given by the Bethany College Band; the Colorado Springs Symphony will give a concert on Wednesday; and a pep assembly for the Palmer game on Friday will be given the morning of that day. All students will be required to attend the Colorado Springs Symphony program and class attendance will be checked. Students will be on a triple assembly schedule for the band assembly and for the pep assembly.

The candidates for this year's Sweetheart Queen have been chosen by the male portion of Wasson's population. In a recent sponsor group meeting, the boys voted for their favorite senior girl. The top five girls from these votes constitute the five candidates for the title of queen of the annual Valentine's Day dance. These girls are Misses LeeAnn Bashore, Pat Bailey, Judy Kennedy, Nancy Jewell, and Janie Pryor.

Students wishing to take over the position of their teachers on Teacher Appreciation Day, Feb. 14, are reminded to ask their instructor for applications for this task. The teachers will choose the student best qualified from the applicants for the job. This day is designed to give the Wasson teachers a "rest" and to show the students' appreciation of them.

Horticultural Arts Society Starts Today

The new Horticultural Arts Society will be launched this afternoon with a reception at the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center in the Music Room, at 2:30 p.m. The Nurserymen's Association will host the event.

Purpose of the new organization is to establish, in cooperation with the Parks and Recreation Department of the city, a Horticultural Art Center. The city council has given permission for the use of the building adjacent to the city greenhouse for this purpose, and a tour of the facility will follow the reception.

All persons interested in membership in the Horticultural Arts Society are invited to attend the reception. Funds raised from memberships and donations will go to put the building in condition to be used as a Horticultural Art Center. Memberships start at $5.

AFA Men Will Be Eligible for Helicopter Course

Some June 1964 Air Force Academy graduates are going to have more than their share of ups and downs!

Under a new pilot training program June grads will be eligible for a revised helicopter training course. Classes will start July 15 and Aug. 21.

The exact quota for Academy graduates has not yet been set.

The year-long program will be divided into two phases. Potential chopper jockeys will first receive 120-hours of T-28 Primary training at Randolph AFB, Tex., followed by 105 hours of helicopter training at Stead AFB, Nev.

A two-week survival course will be given at Stead following the helicopter phase.

Before implementation of the new program, Academy graduates interested in becoming helicopter pilots were required to first become rated fixed wing pilots and then apply for the additional training.

Graduates of the new course will be instrument rated pilots upon completion of the training.

District 11 Will Update Programs Of Education

Research, experimentation, and innovation in all phases of the educational program will get increased emphasis in District 11 schools, according to Thomas B. Doherty.

The newly appointed superintendent of schools at a recent general meeting of the district's employees said change is inevitable, and it is necessary to try to understand and guide it along pathways to progress.

"To oppose change is futile; merely to drift with it is folly," he declared.

Doherty urged any certified staff member who has an experiment or an innovation he wants to try to submit his ideas and plans for approval. He added that the Board of Education has earmarked some funds for the support of research and experiment.

Some projects are now either underway, ready for implementation at the appropriate time, or in various stages of planning, the superintendent said Tuesday.

One research project now in progress is concerned with the education of retarded children. Dr. Lise Gellner, a neurophysiologist from London, England, is working with the district's special education teachers on a new approach to the educational problems of retarded pupils.

Doherty listed two other innovations scheduled to start early this semester. One is the use of lay readers to assist English teachers; the other is a programmed course of study to supplement regular instruction in English grammar.

Doherty said a proposal for keeping the Wasson High School library open two nights a week is now in the advanced planning stages. This will help students do the greater amount of research work teachers are requiring, he added.

Next September the foreign language departments at the two high schools will offer a first-year course in Russian. Present plans call for adding a second course in 1965 to provide a two-year sequence of instruction in the Russian language, the superintendent stated.

"We don't expect all that all the expriments and innovations will be completely successful," Doherty said, "but we'll never know whether or not they'll work until we try them.

"In the last few years there have been some exciting developments in education. Not all of them would work in our situation, but a lot of them seem to have possibilities. We want to try some of these things along with any ideas our staff members think might have promise," he said.

"The educational needs of students today are so varied and are changing so rapidly that a continuing program of research and experiment is necessary to make sure the schools are meeting the needs," the superintendent stated.

Roger Williams, founder of the Colony of Rhode Island, was banished from Massachusetts in 1635.

PROF. HERVING MADRUGA

CC Professor Receives Teacher Grant

Prof. Herving Madruga of the French Department at Colorado College has been awarded a Teacher Grant by the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis, Mo.

Professor Madruga will use the grant to complete his Ph.D. at the University of Colorado.

He is writing his doctoral dissertation on "the image of the hero in modern French literature, as exemplified in the novels of Henri de Montherlant."

The grant provides graduate tuition and fees, a stipend based on professional salary, and an allowance for dependents.

The grant to Prof. Madruga was one of 50 made to faculty members at colleges and universities across the country. The men and women were chosen from 446 applications provided by the deans of accredited senior colleges and universities in the United States.

Selection was made on the basis of academic ability, personal qualities, promising success in teaching, and religious commitment and inquiry in the candidate's own faith, according to Pressley C. McCoy, Associate Director of the Danforth Foundation.

The Danforth Teacher Grants program was established in 1954 to enable men and women already serving as full-time faculty members to complete programs of graduate study. The award provides a calendar year of graduate study in a university of the candidate's choosing with reappointment offered on a competitive basis.

Prof. Madruga holds a bachelor's and master's degrees from Harvard University and has attended for one year the Institut de Phonetique in Paris.

At Harvard, he held a James Geddes Scholarship and a John Thornton Kirkland Fellowship. He was secretary of the Romance Graduate Conference in 1957 and 1958. As an undergraduate, he was president of the Circolo Italiano, and directed two plays presented by this group.

Prior to joining the faculty at Colorado College in 1958, Professor Madruga taught at Harvard and at the Berlitz School of Languages.

The Danforth Foundation was established in 1927 by the late Mr. and Mrs. William H. Danforth to strengthen higher education through its own programs and through grants to colleges, universities, and other educational agencies.

Korean Veterans Must Hurry on Education Course

Some veterans of the Korean conflict receiving education or training under the GI Bill may have to accelerate their course or attend summer school to get their full benefits of the program.

The program comes to an end in just one year from now. Under the law, no education or training may be furnished under the GI Bill after January 31, 1965, a VA spokesman explained.

Eligible veterans can receive a maximum of 36 months of GI Bill education and training, computed at 1½ times their length of active service between June 27, 1950, and January 31, 1955, but not to extend past the January 31, 1965, cut-off date.

This cut-off date applies only to GI Bill education and training for Korean veterans. It does not apply to vocational rehabilitation for disabled veterans, nor to education or training for orphans of deceased veterans under the Orphans Educational Assistance act, the spokesman emphasized.

Japan will build subways.

More Coups Can Be Expected in South Viet Nam

itary officer in the country today with that strong a following, although several weak political parties are seeking to line themselves up with the new strong man.

An indication of U. S. concern for government instability in South Viet Nam, which the United States is backing with aid of $1.5 million a day and 14,000 military men, came at a reception Saturday.

Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge was overheard advising Khanh to seek popular support from his people. "You should deliver a 'fireside chat' as soon as possible," Lodge said.

Westerners believe Khanh showed he has good potential in becoming a strong leader in the swift, bloodless overthrow of the junta headed by Maj. Gen. Duong Van Minh. He persuaded Minh to stay on as an adviser at U. S. urging for at least some continuity between regimes.

Khanh dotted Saigon with tanks and a few troop concentrations, but there was no suggestion of martial law, curfew, press or cable censorship that characterized the coup that ended Ngo Dinh Diem's nine years of control last Nov. 1.

The war against Communist guerrillas continues and Khanh said he plans no changes in the military command structure or provincial administration of the nation.

The Nation's Weather

(Report furnished by U.S. Weather Bureau Station at Peterson Field)

Some snow occurred in the north and Atlantic states and northern Rockies and snow flurries in the Great Lakes Region with precipitation totals in most of these areas being quite light. However, a few stations in northern New England did report snow fall of about one inch during a six hour period.

Elsewhere over the country Saturday night, the weather was dry. General high pressure dominated most sections. Most of the country continues on the unseasonably mild side. Saturday afternoon highs in the 30's were common for the northern sections of the country and thru much of the interior regions of the west. The 50's and 60's were the rule elsewhere except for the 70's over Florida and in the far southwestern U.S.

Fashions Go To the Dogs In New York

By HELEN HENNESSY

NEW YORK (NEA) — Does your dog refuse to hobnob with his canine cronies?

Does he wear a hangdog look?

It may be ill health. Perhaps he's ashamed of his old plaid coat.

Yes, "Fashion" may be the cause of his doldrums. For it sure has gone to the dogs.

Maybe the last time he visited his friend, Fifi, she was reclining on her Louis XI sofa, wearing a dotted Swiss peignoir that just matched her eyes and Le Chien No. 5. How can he play host to her if he has no brocade smoking jacket, no Arfpeggio scent and only a bed of rags? No wonder your dog feels he has already had his day.

To deal with these weighty problems, small shops are springing up that specialize in canine couture, jewelry, cosmetics and furniture. A chic New York department store offers elegant dog sofas in its boutique.

So if you have mone throw to the dogs, you may yet restore your pooch's self-confidence.

At Ted Steele's Dog House in New York, Cele, pretty wife of the radio and television personality, designs dog-dom originals. For a dog's brisk morning walk, there is the banker's gray chesterfield. If the day is damp, there's a wide choice of raincoats. One, a light, belted trech coat, is called "Foreign Intrigue."

If he is sports - minded, he can have a baseball cap. A Tyrolean hat will suit him well when worn with a smart,hand-knit cardigan.

For evenings on the town there are top hats and dinner jackets. Should he be escorting Fifi, she can wear a brocade evening coat, rhinestone collar and tiara. And if her topknot is not at its best, she can don her glond or brunet wig. On a cold evening, she may prefer mink to brocade. The mink coat can be ranch, silver-gray or white.

Now let's say you're staying at home and giving a cocktail party. There's no need for the family pooch to feel like Cinderella. There are mink-trimmed cocktail pajamas in luscious shades of velvet.

For the yachting family or those who like to cruise during the winter months, there is beachwear, too, for man's best friend, including sun-glasses. -suits take care of the canine pets of skiing enthusiasts.

For an evening of relaxation after a bath, terry robes with hoods are smart and warm.

But mink coats, cocktail pajamas, tiaras? If this is a dog's life, it should happen to us.

Ranger Set to See Moon On Flight From Earth

that could wreck a spaceship, or composed of layers of dust that could engulf an entire expedition.

Two earlier vehicles landed on the moon—Russia's Lunik 2 and this country's Ranger 4—but neither sent back any significant information.

Russia's Lunik 3 photographed the back side of the moon but from altitudes of more than 4,000 miles and the pictures were indistinct.

Laboratory officials said Ranger 6 was designed to take pictures down to a few hundred feet above the lunar surface, a fraction of a second before the impact.

Observatories around the world planned to train powerful telescopes on the target area in the hopes of seeing the impact.

Astronomers said the crash would not be visible to the naked eye but that with luck some telescopes might pick up either a flash of light or a huge dust cloud.

Ranger's cameras were made to convert what they see into video signals which its transmitters will send to two big dish-shaped antennas at the Goldstone tracking station on the Mojave Desert north of Barstow, Calif. There the signals will be recorded on film and tape.

Officials said it will be 18 to 48 hours before the processing is completed and pictures released to news media.

Plans called for this to happen in the final 10 - minute plunge:

Two wide-angle cameras were to snap a picture every 2.56 seconds, or about 117 pictures each. With the spacecraft going about 5,200 miles an hour, this would mean a picture every 4.4 miles during the descent.

Four narrow - angle cameras were to take 714 pictures each, or one every .34 mile at intervals of .2 second.

The first pictures taken by the wide - angle cameras were to show areas of 151,000 and 16,080 square miles. First pictures of the narrow-angle cameras were to show areas of 9,460 and 1,060 square miles.

The best pictures were to be taken a few seconds before impact.

The wide-angle cameras were to snap photographs 2.5 seconds before the crash that would record areas of 3½ square miles and one-half square mile.

The narrow - angle cameras taking their last photographs at two-tenths of a second before the crash from a height of about 1,750 feet, were to yield pictures showing areas of 37,760 square feet and 4,200 square feet.

Ringsred played hocky with the Colorado College Tigers. He served as a pilot with the 8th Air Force in England during World War II.

Ringsred was employed by the Alexander organization in 1945 to pilot the company's plane and to serve in the Theatre relations department.

In 1948, he was named merchandising manager, serving the company in that position until 1954 when he was appointed Assistant-to-the-President.

He then moved from Colorado Springs to Detroit and has headquartered there since. Ringsred has been a member of Alexander's Board of Directors since 1962. He was also elected vice President that year.

ing Baker and the sale of a large insurance policy on Johnson's life.

The President said he had said all he planned to say on the subject.

Politics also figured in the session, with Johnson saying he wanted to keep free of the subject as long as possible in order to promote national unity.

The President said he did not want to get involved in "mudslinging and petty politics." And he said he was urging fellow Democrats to take a similar position.

Asked about his choice for a Democratic vice - presidential candidate, Johnson said he would wait until the Democratic convention, and "at that time I will cross that bridge," hoping to "act wisely and in the interests of the American people."

Taking a look at activity in Congress, Johnson said he thought there had been "great progress in legislation" during his first sixty days in office.

He expressed hope that the rights bill "without any crippling amendments" before the Feb. 12 birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln.

He expressed equal eagerness to see enactment of the proposed $11.5-billion tax cut without major changes.

In his opening statement, Johnson said that progress toward "peace and freedom in the widest possible areas . . . is frequently slow and rarely dramatic." But he argued that his administration has been making such progress in a way which he suggested would look good "in the perspective of history and not headlines."

During the past week, he said, the United States has been pursuing efforts to resume relations with Panama, working quietly on the Cyprus crisis, trying to follow through on Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy's attempts to quiet the Indonesia-Malaysia dispute, keeping an eye on uprisings in East Africa, trying to prevent a repetition of the shooting down of a U.S. jet trainer over East Germany and has witnessed the "remarkable performance" of the Saturn I rocket.

St. Mary's High School News

By TONI CINA

The time of the Talent Show on Thursday will be 2 p.m. To increase the number of acts, the Student Council has requested that each club in the school sponsor at least one act.

The NORAD Band is scheduled to perform at St. Mary's on Feb. 25.

The National Honor Society will meet at 3 p.m. on Friday. Angelo Sagramora, our Italian exchange student, will address the group. Their activities for the year thus far have been a candlelight induction ceremony for new members, and visits to Glen Eyrie and the Air Force Planetarium.

Retreats for the students will be on March 4th and 5th. Retreat master for the freshmen and sophomores is Father Robert Dore of St. Catherine's Church in Denver. The seniors and juniors have in the past had closed, separate retreats. However, this year, to enable them all to hear Father John La Bauve, a negro priest from a mission in Indiana, they will meet in the church on these two days.

The faculty-varsity basketball game resulted in the faculty winning 52 to 40. The proceeds went to the Student Council.

The P. T. A. has again befriended the band. Their most recent addition was a new baritone.

German Novella Course Added to CC Curriculum

A course in the German novella has been added to the curriculum at Colorado College.

In addition, some of the course offerings in German litegature have been reorganized, according to Prof. Thomas O. Brandt, chairman of the department of German and Russian.

Two courses, "Romanticism" and "Between Romanticism and Naturalism" will replace a one-semester course entitled "From Romanticism to Naturalism."

Dr. Brandt said experience has shown that one semester was not long enough "to do justice to the rich period from 1800 to 1880."

Two courses, covering German literature to the 18th century, have been combined into a one-semester course entitled "Early German Literature to the Period of Enlightenment."

Prof. Brandt said in the new course dealing with "The German Novella" students will read the major works from Goethe to the present and discuss literary trends and theories.

Edward Diller, assistant professor of German, will teach "The German Novella" and "Romanticism."

Mrs. Hertha Feyock, assistant professor, will teach "Between Romanticism and Naturalism" and "Early German Literature to the Period of Enlightenment."

Sharp Drop Reported In Cigarette Revenue

CHICAGO (AP) — The Illinois Department of Revenue has reported a drop of more than $500,000 in state cigarette taxes for the first 30 days of 1964.

Director Harry L. Hulman said Friday tax collections as of Jan. 30 were slightly more than $3.5 million, compared with more than $4 million for the same period in 1963.

Hulman said the drop was definitely caused by the U.S. surgeon general's report on smoking and its effect on health.

Cigarette taxes for the first 10 days of January were only about $150,000 less than for the first days of last year, Hulman said. The surgeon general's report was made public Jan. 11. In the next 20 days the drop jumped to $415,000, Hulman said.

Hulman said the state would lose more than $6 million this year in taxes if the trend continues.

Maytag Grants Record Amounts To Education

More than 77 per cent of a record-high $127,867.30 in contributions made during 1963 by the Maytag Company Foundation, Inc., took the form of grants to education, according to the annual report on foundation activities issued today by Robert E. Vance, foundation president.

Total foundation gifts were up 16 per cent over 1962 while the non-profit organization's education grants totaled $98,941 and showed a 26 per cent increase over the previous year, said Vance, who also is vice-president and secretary of the Maytag company, the sole source of funds for the foundation.

The Maytag foundation's scholarship program received the largest single amount, nearly $54,000 — used to finance grants to 110 students and to the 26 colleges attended by these winners of Maytag scholarships.

Gifts totaling $22,500 went to the Iowa College foundation, a fund-raising agency for 21 private, liberal arts colleges in the state.

The Newton Teacher Awards program, sponsored by the Maytag foundation and aimed at making Newton teaching positions more attractive, received over $6,300. A plan, under which Maytag employe gifts to colleges are matched by the foundation, resulted in 31 schools and the Iowa College foundation sharing more than $4,800 in foundation contributions.

Special scholarships totaling $2,400 were awarded to engineering and business students at five midwestern universities. Other major education aids included $3,000 grants to the National Fund for Medical Education and the United Negro College fund.

Grants to health and welfare agencies the past year topped $24,500, including $13,600 paid to area Community Chests to match contributions made during the annual Maytag employes' Consolidated Fund drive.

British Youths Divided Into Rockers, Mods

By TOM A .CULLEN

LONDON (NEA) — British teen-agers, after months of upheaval, are now split into rival factions known as the Mods and the Rockers.

A Mod (for Modern) is usually a clean-cut type, immaculately dressed, and a pacemaker of teen-age fashion. A Rocker, on the other hand, is nothing more than a glorified beatnik and is now considered in advance circles to be square.

According to the Mods, the the Rockers cling to their black leather as a symbol of virility and confuse scruffiness with character. But Rockers sneer at Mods as being effeminate, claim that the outsider can't tell the difference between Mod boys and Mod girls.

So far the feuding between the two factions has not resulted in open warfare, but it has been made the subject of a ballet now being presented here by the Western Theatre Ballet.

The ballet is the work of Peter Darrell, a 32-year-old choreographer, who spent weeks in London pubs studying the habits and dress of Britain's young.

The split among British teenagers, according to Darrel, has nothing to do with geography, family background, education or accent, which are the things that traditionally divide in this country.

"It is much more subtle than that," says the young choreographer. "It has to do, for example, with attitudes toward America and toward soap and water."

The Rockers, Darrell claims, look to America for their inspiration, but to the America of the early 1950s. "It takes up to 10 years for an American craze to cross the Atlantic," he explains.

The Rockers are still wearing the black leather jackets and riding the souped-up motorbikes which Marlon Brando featured in his film, "The Wild Ones."

"Significantly," says Darrell, "this film has never been shown publicly in this country. The censors were afraid that it would have a bad influence on the young."

The Mods, on the other hand, are in open revolt against everything American. Their heros are The Beatles, a quartet of guitar-twanging pop singers who hail from Liverpool, England.

As for the soap and water the Rockers largely ignore it, while the Mods have a healthy regard for the same.

"The male Mods are the real peacocks," says Darrell. "They wear foam rubber jackets with out lapels, chin-high shirt collars and high-heeled boots."

The dedicated Mod girls wear long, flowing hairstyles, ankle-length gray street skirts, frilly blouses and round-toed shoes.

The Mods even have their own dances, which are known by such names as the Mash, the Turkey, the Fish and the Hitchhike.

"You can't keep up with them they start a new dance craze each week."

In the current Mod-Rocker hassle the smart money here is on the Mods. Some even predict that Mod fashions will catch on, and that in another six months even bowler-hatted gentlemen will wear Cuban heels.

New Problem Solving Methods Can Be Puzzling

During the next two years more and more parents of pupils in District 11 elementary schools may be somewhat puzzled by the arithmetic papers their children bring home. The problem solving methods these children use may also prove baffling to parents who learned their arithmetic the traditional way.

In some District 11 elementary schools, children are already using the new or modern arithmetic. Within the next two years, Dr. Dwight Hamilton, director of elementary education, expects to complete the change-over to the new method in grades one thru six.

The new method, however, is not really as startling as it first appears, according to Dr. Hamilton, who explained the basic mathematical concepts and materials are still the same. They are merely presented in a new way that provides greater carry-over to higher mathematics, and there is still provision for drill.

One of the things that is new is the shift of emphasis from memorization by itself to an understanding of mathematical principles. The director said that with the old method about 90 per cent of a pupil's time is spent doing computation. The new approach reduces this about 50 per cent with the remaining time devoted to understanding the "why" of an operation.

"A pupil still learns that six times eight is forty-eight, but he is encouraged to use his imagination and reasoning power to understand what multiplication is, to find his own way of arriving at that answer, and to understand why the answer is forty-eight and not something else.

"He might find more than one way to get the same answer, which is fine. Teachers encourage children to discover various methods and use the one that's quickest for them," Dr. Hamilton said.

Finding different ways to solve a problem depends upon an understanding of the properties of numbers, and this involves something new for elementary pupils. Altho the number properties themselves are as old as mathematics, children in the past did not encounter them until they studied algebra, geometry, or physics in secondary school.

Pupils are now working with these properties. They are using the technical terms for them in the later elementary grades. Such terms and the properties they symbolize as commutative, associative, identity number, and inverse operation are familiar to sixth graders using the new textbooks.

One advantage of this, according to Dr. Hamilton, is that it helps to bridge the gaps among the various levels of mathematics instruction. By the time a pupil reaches secondary school, he has already acquired much of the terminology and many of the concepts he needs to know to learn secondary mathematics.

Numerous studies by universities, school systems, and learned societies show that children are quite capable of absorbing certain mathematical principles at an earlier age than was previously thought possible. As a result, children go father into the subject than before.

Still another advantage is that mathematics at all levels becomes more interesting because children have a chance to use their imaginations and reasoning powers, Dr. Hamilton said.

In District 11, grades one and two in all but one school are using the new textbooks, and in five schools the new texts are being used in all six grades. As the older books wear out, Dr. Hamilton said they will be replaced with new books. All schools will probably have the new textbooks by 1965, he added.

The modern approach to mathematics is also being used in many junior and senior high school classes. Here, too, the change from the old to the new method is being accomplished as rapidly as the need for new textbooks permits.

Training programs for mathematics teachers have been underway for four years. A group of 60 elementary teachers recently completed an eight-hour course to help prepare them for teaching modern mathematics.

Many parents will be interested in learning more about the new approach and how they can help their children get the most from it. Dr. Hamilton said Parent Teacher Associations and other groups can arrange for speakers at their meetings by calling the Division of Elementary Education at the District 11 Administration Building. These speakers will not only explain but demonstrate the new mathematics.

CORRECT ANSWER—Charles King, a fourth grade pupil at Edison school, came up with the correct answer to this problem, but for those who learned to multiply in the traditional way, his method was rather mystifying. It's called chicken-track multiplication, and Charles' teacher, Vernon I. Remington, explained that it is practical for multiplying up to three digit numbers.

Your Outdoors

By MARY SHIRER
For the Pikes Peak Group of the Colorado Mountain Club

How many times do we look at the sky day or night, for we seem to gaze toward the sky? The principle reason is to see whether it is clear or cloudy and if we see clouds we look again to see, if they disappear and if clear, we look again to enjoy that vast canopy of blue. We never seem to tire of it.

When we climb mountains, we look more times at the sky than anywhere. There is something about the vast scenery all about us, and the deep blue sky blends with the color of the trees rocks and beyond the other high peaks rise high into the deep blue.

It is not one thing that makes for beautiful scenery but the blending together of many things. We see a procession of objects moving ceaselessly across the sky - the sun by day, the moon and stars by night. The most conspicuous phenomenon is, of course the daily motion of the sun across the heavens, producing the alterations of light and darkness, heat and and cold, which we describe as day and night.

The rising and setting of the moon and its passage across the sky, must have been and was familiar with the first human beings when they first appeared on the earth.

The sun shows no changes either of shape or brightness except when our atmosphere dims the light, but the moon continually varies in both respects. Every month it goes thru the complete cycle of changes which we call "phases." It begins as a thin cresent of light which we describe as the new moon and how we all become thrilled at the bright new moon! We have seen it many times and yet we all call out "look at the new moon". If in conjunction with some planet it is still more beautiful. The new moon increases in size until after a week and then we have a half moon, and a week later comes the full moon.

When the moon is new, it is always near the sun in the sky, as it increases, the distance from the sun also increases until by time it is full, it is almost exactly opposite the sun. And then comes on in frequent occasions, when the earth comes exactly between the sun and moon and prevents the sun's light from falling on the moon. Such an occurance is an eclipse between the sun and earth and we call this the eclipse of the sun.

We have an immense number of stars, yet their total light is not overpowering. The light we receive from the stars is less than hundred-millionth part of the sun. Shooting stars make rather an interesting display in the sky. At times they come in showers. They are fragments of hard rock but can hardly be called stars. The soft blue sky has a great witchery for all of us and amazing aspect can be seen. Like a great ocean hung on high bespangled with brilliant lights! What beauty and mystery is revealed as we look into that wilderness of blue! In the calmness of the night, the stars come forth one by one. The stars shine by their own light but the planets because they are lighted by the sun. Venus is the brightest of planets but Mars and Jupiter come next. Venus is showing now with great brilliancy in the south west.

Demonstrations Are Resumed In Southland

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Demonstrations and boycotts still were being used today to protest segregation on this fourth-year anniversary of the sit-in.

Atlantans faced possible resumption of picketing at a downtown restaurant, focal point of protests the past week.

An integration leader talked of novel and unique protests at Chapel Hill, N.C.

The Cleveland Board of Education headquarters was the scene of a sit-in which turned into a sleep-in, and New York public schools prepared for an antisegregation boycott Monday.

The first sit-in began almost unnoticed at Greensboro, N.C., on Feb. 1, 1960. But this method of attempting to desegregate eating places spread rapidly and now has been tried in many cities of the nation.

Atlanta and Cleveland in particular experienced sit-ins, picketing and street demonstrations the past few days, as well as minor violence.

James Forman, executive secretary of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) said demonstrations would continue in Atlanta on the anniversary of the sit-in movement.

The head of the younger demonstrators made the statement Friday night, despite a decision by members of a Negro leadership conference to give qualified endorsement to a plea by Mayor Ivan Allen Jr. for a 30-day cooling-off period.

Conditions set by the leadership conference included dismissal of charges against all persons arrested during the protests and a meeting with Atlanta restaurant owners to work out a desegregation plan.

At Chapel Hill, J. V. Henry, an SNCC field representative, said, "We will do something here we have never done before." He did not reveal what form the racial protest would take.

James Farmer, director of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), said earlier this month that novel and unique demonstrations would start Feb. 1 unless all businesses were desegregated in the university town.

At Tuskegee, Ala., state authorities waited today to see if, and how, federal officials might react to the closing of desegregated Tuskegee High School. The high school doors were shut Friday under orders from the State Board of Education.

A day-long sit-in at the Cleveland Board of Education headquarters turned into a sleep-in, and there was no indication how long it would last.

The biracial sit-in was staged after some 500 members of the United Freedom Movement, had rejected a tentative proposal from the school board for full integration in September.

The civil rights group has been seeking more integration of 800 Negro pupils transported by bus from overcrowded Hazeldell School to three other public grade schools in Cleveland's east side area.

In New York, Negro leaders went ahead with plans for a Monday boycott of classes attended by nearly a million pupils, more than half of them Negro or Puerto Rican.

New York schools are integrated by law, but about 165 schools in the city have mostly Negro and Puerto Rican pipils because the neighborhoods are mostly Negro and Puerto Rican.

At Hattiesburg, Miss., a state judge sentenced a Negro civil rights worker to six months in jail on a charge he had encouraged a seventh-grade pupil to skip school for several days. The Negro pupil later was found on a picket line.

The University of Texas at Austin opened its social fraternities to Negroes. The 26 fraternities at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N.J., were warned they face abolishment unless they halt all racial discrimination.

Czech Reds Legalize Taking of Tips

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Communist Czechoslovakia has legalized the taking of tips, formerly branded as a "bad capitalist habit" by the Czech press.

Communist party district heads decided at a meeting with President Antonin Novotny to add a percentage for service on restaurant tabs.

Part of this money will be used for the restoration of restaurants and the rest will be distributed among the waiters to create an incentive.

War Origins Examined in Semester Seminar

Seven seniors and two faculty members at Colorado College are spending the spring semester examining the origins of World War II.

The second semester seminar followed on the heels of Colorado College's week-long symposium on the causes, conduct and consequences of World War II, Jan. 12-18.

Thirty - five soldiers, scholars and statesmen visited the campus of the college to take part in many of the 50 separate programs making up the symposium.

Dr. Paul P. Bernard, associate professor of history, said he selected the seminar topic because he "wanted to conduct a more detailed examination of this aspect of the symposium."

The origins of World War II currently is the subject of a lively dispute among Americans and European scholars.

Each of the seven history majors taking the seminar will present four papers during the semester.

Among the topics to be discussed during the semester are problems caused by the Versailles settlement; the possible effects of economic rivalries on the deteriorating political relations of the European powers; Alan Taylor's thesis that the war was a result of diplomatic blunders; the responsibilities of the Nazi-Soviet treaty for the conflict; Italian fascism as a prototype of a characteristic 20th century social movement; the phenomenon of appeasement; Nazi Germany and Spain as the ideological testing ground.

Assisting Pro. Bernard with the seminar is Robin Rudoff, instructor in history. Together, they will try to help the students gain new insights into the causes of the war.

Students enrolled in the seminar are: Lynda D. Rood of 482 S. Kendall, Denver, Patricia A. Sohl of 96 Old Highway, Wilton, Conn.; Caroline R. Jacobson of 700 Carlisle SE Albuquerque, N.M.; Jill C. Thomas of 2723 Frederick Ave., St. Joseph, Mo.; Vincent Greco of 22 W. Buena Ventura, St.; Harris Sherman of 626 Detroit, Denver, and Charles F. Short of Mesa Rd.

Legislature Still Has to Take Stand On Major Issues

By GORDON G. GAUSS

DENVER (AP) —Except for bills overhauling the courts system, the Colorado Legislautre has yet to take its stand on major measures facing it.

The lawmakers appear, however, to be getting ready to tackle several of these problems and then end their 1964 meeting comparatively quickly. There is talk of getting home by Washington's Birthday — Feb. 22.

A lot of the issues will come to a head within the next seven days.

The House of Representatives already has rewritten the system of assessing property for taxation and the Senate is expected to wade into the bill next week.

About ready to move are a House bill tying the state's income tax more closely to that of the federal government, bills to group several state agencies into a Financial Department and a Department of Administrative Services, a measure creating a college coordinating council and a bill setting a ceiling on charges for care of pateints at state mental institutions.

Still not introduced, but apparently almost written, is a bill extending medical and hospital care to aged persons with limited incomes who are not old age pensioners. The bill is being drawn in the Joint Budget Committee which was given the job last spring of extending the state's medicare program to take full advantage of federal funds available under the Kerr-Mills law.

A checkup today, while the lawmakers were taking their fourth weekend recess of the session, showed their pace has been more rapid than usual at the start of a session but that most of the bills enacted were non-controversial or of a minor nature.

A compilation by Laurence Thomson, House historian and E. H. Vallejo of the privately financed Colorado Public Expenditure Council, shows the lawmakers have introduced 111 bills and that 31 have been passed. Also, 14 proposed constitutional amendments have been offered; none has yet passed.

More than a dozen of the bills approved are minor spending measures recommended by the Joint Budget Committee. Most of them provide supplemental funds to agencies which have run short because requirements were more extensive than anticipated. Much of the money comes from special funds.

The only bill signed by Gov. John A. Love is one for $468,000 to pay expenses of the legislative session. It was the only one to reach his desk before he was taken ill last Monday. An aide said Love will take care of several mor bills when he returns to his job next week.

Of 12 court reorganization bills, 10 have passed at least one house and five are ready for consideration by the governor. Two others require concurrence only on minor amendments.

Education bills have found the going rough in the legislature. Of 13 measures recommended by a special committee headed by Rep. Ruth Clark, R-Fort Collins, only one has passed. It allows public school districts to charge tuition for summer school.

The legislature's special Committee on Organization of State Government has had less success than in recent years. One bill it recommended — abolishing the never-used State Building Authority — has passed. The Senate has approved a constitutional amendment which it recommended giving the legislature power to elect the state auditor rather than the people. A bill the committee recommends to cut down on expensive, lengthy reports of state departments also seems likely to pass when the extent of governmental reorganization is determined.

Franco Says Won't Recognize Mao

MADRID (UPI) — Spanish Chief of State Francisco Franco has assured Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek he will not recognize Communist China "for the time being," informed sources said Friday.

The sources said Franco told Chou Shu-kai, Nationalist Chinese ambassador to Spain, France's recognition of Communist China this week would not affect Spain's relations with the Chiang government on Formosa.

Bishop Warns Against Optimism in Church

MANCHESTER, England (AP)—The bishop of Hulme has warned Church of England parishioners against "starry-eyed optimism" on achieving unity with the Roman Catholic Church.

Speaking at Manchester Cathedral Friday, the Rt. Rev. K. V. Ramsey said: "The arms of the Church of Rome are stretched out more obviously in welcome, but there is to be no going out to meet us halfway. The Roman Catholic Church has shown no signs of self-questioning about doctrines which others find impossible to accept."

Rocky Sharpens Differences With Other Candidates

By ROBERT T. GRAY

NEW YORK (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller is sharpening his differences with President Johnson and Sen. Barry Goldwater in an accelerating political campaign that is ranging from coast to coast.

Rockefeller's forum is one that his campaign aides claim is paying rich dividends in his bid for the Republican nomination for president—the question and answer period after his formal speeches.

The governor used this approach Friday night in a campaign trip to Nashua, N.H., and in a visit to California earlier this week. He plans to do the same in a campaign visit to Oregon next week.

The governor paid a fast-moving, seven-hour visit Friday to New Hampshire, where he and Goldwater are entered in the March 10 presidential-preference primary, along with other GOP prospects.

In another development concerning the Rockefeller campaign, Jackie Robinson, the first Negro to break into major-league baseball, resigned as a top executive of the Chock Full O' Nuts coffee and restaurant company to join the Rockefeller campaign organization.

Rockefeller flew to New Hampshire after announcing he would enter the West Virginia primary May 12. It was the fourth primary in which Rockefeller had announced plans to campaign. In addition to New Hampshire, he also will compete in Oregon and California.

The governor's New Hampshire foray was highlighted by a question period after a speech to an overflow audience of more than 600 persons at a dinner meeting of the Nashua Chamber of Commerce.

Pioneer Voices an Appeal To Save First Summit House

By BYRON AKERS

An appeal to save the original part of the Cog Road summit house as an historical link with the early west was voiced Saturday by W. S. Crosby, Manitou Springs pioneer who at 90 remembers more about the Pikes Peak Region's past than any history book contains.

The old summit house has given way to a modern structure which will be opened to tourists next summer. Since its years of usefulness is past, the old one is doomed to demolition this spring.

"The Army Signal Corps portion of the summit house dates back to 1873 when it was built as a meteorological station," Crosby said.

"It is a real historical part of the Region's easy days and one of the few landmarks not wiped out by what we call progress. Its location gives it added significance because Pikes Peak has been and always will be our greatest tourist asset."

Cost of renovating the Signal Corps building and tearing down the observation tower and sections added later would be relatively small, compared to historical value of the building, in Crosby's opinion.

"The Signal Corps building would stand as a contrast to the modern, new summit house, and give the tens of thousands of summer visitors to the Peak some idea of pioneer conditions and show them how much luckier they are to have modern facilities and comforts, instead of the primitive quarters of the Army men of nearly a century ago," the pioneer declared.

He believes preservation of the Signal Corps building would not interfere with the view from the new summit house.

"The new summit house is some distance north and west of the old building," he pointed out. "Both are on the five acres at the summit held by the Cog Road under a 99-year lease granted by special act of Congress."

Under the new summit house agreement between the Forest Service, City of Colorado Springs and Broadmoor interests which own the Cog Road, the Cog Road relinquished its lease on the five-acre tract in return for termnial facilities and space in the new structure.

The new summit house becomes the property of the Forest Service, with the city granted the right to operate the Pikes Peak Highway and the summit house. An increase in the highway toll was the means adopted for financing the summit house project.

W. H. McKay, whose four decades with the Cog Road prior to his retirement, said the walls of the Signal Corps part of the Cog Road summit house are largely intact.

A few years ago a short section of the Signal Corps building wall collapsed. Under his supervision it was replaced. The original stone wall, McKay recalled, was 30 inches thick.

McKay probably has the most intimate and detailed knowledge of the Cog Road, its equipment past and present, and the summit house.

His 40 years as master mechanic of the road, following 14 years of supervisory positions with the Colorado Midland, earned him the admiration and respect of associates who described him as "a genius of practical mechanics." They credit him with keeping the Cog Road running with equipment in top condition and safe. The road's accident-free record was largely due to McKay's maintenance of operating equipment and track.

McKay's experience with the Cog Road goes back to the time it was owned and operated by heirs of Zalmon Gilbert Simmons, the mattress manufacturer. McKay remained with the road after its purchase in 1925 by Spencer Penrose, who built the peak highway in 1915 and the highway summit house, destroyed by fire several years ago.

Penrose brought good management, improvements in equipment and excellent maintenance.

Since his death, the Broadmoor interests have followed the same sound policies.

The Cog Road was incorporated Nov. 16, 1888 after the elder Simmons, so legend goes, experienced an uncomfortable mule-back trip to the summit and vowed on his exhausted return: "I'm going to ride up that beautiful mountain in the greatest comfort science can provide."

The Cog Road was the result of that vow. He called in Maj. John Hulburt, earlier a Manitou mayor and long advocate of a Pikes Peak railway despite his financial loss in an 1884 Pikes Peak railroad organized by Prof. James H. Kerr of Colorado College. Simmons hired some of the top engineering men of that day to plan and build the Cog Road.

Hulbert became president. Such men as David H. Moffat, then head of the Denver and Rio Grande and later builder of the Moffat Road; R. R. Cable, Rock Island president, and James B. Wheeler, Manitou's greatest and most unsung benefactor whose fortune and financial disaster came from Silver. Dr. William A. Bell, Gen. William J. Palmer's associate and the father of Manitou, was among the incorporators.

No where among officers or directors does Simmons name ever appear. Yet behind the able directors and officers was Simmons' financial power, his enthusiasm and organizing wizardry. When he died in 1910, he owned 96 per cent of the bonds and 98 per cent of the stock.

Grading, track laying, purchase of the special and unique steam engines and all the other details were completed by the fall of 1890. The first train, carrying road officials, went up Oct. 20, 1890. The first passenger train at the formal opening June 4, 1891 ran to Half Way House, a 50-minute trip. After snow in the higher altitudes melted, two trains daily puffed to the summit.

The original Signal Corps station, partly rebuilt in 1882, became the Cog Road's summit terminal, and has, with later additions, remained so until now.

Hall in his "History of Colorado" wrote that the Signal Corps was discontinued in December 1889, and turned over to the Cog Road altho equipment was probably left there until the road was completed. Other accounts say the Cog Road and government jointly used the Signal Corps station until 1892 when government property was moved to Colorado Springs.

Only major repair work on the summit house was 30 years ago, McKay said.

"Rock over the doorway of the section added to the original building became dangerous," the Cog Road veteran said. "So I tore out 40 feet of the wall, dug down 30 inches to permafrost and placed a new steel foundation set six inches deep into the ice, and installed steel supports for windows and doorway. In 30 years since then no crack or sign of weakness ever developed.

"When they came to build the new modern summit house, engineers told me the foundation I put under the old wall was called a floating foundation and was now the accepted method of building on top of ice. The new sumit house has a similar foundation. I had never heard of a floating foundation but 30 years ago it seemed the practical way of solving the problem."

The original part of what became the Cog Road summit house was used by the Army Signal Corps as a weather reporting station beginning Oct. 11, 1873, according to Crosby's records.

"Another station was in Colorado Springs," he said. It was the base for hauling up equipment, food, etc. on muleback to the summit station. In fact everything, fuel and water included, had to be hauled up. The supply trail generally followed the later Cog Road route."

"Communication between the upper and lower stations was by telegraph. The line was draped down the Bottomless Pit. Storms frequently broke it. Repair was a frequent and rugged job, especially in wintertime. When the telegraph line was out, communication was by flashing mirrors, using code.

"A sergeant was in charge of both the base and summit stations and traveled between them. One private was stationed at the top and another at base station. They exchanged stations monthly, according to the chief signal officer's report to the secretary of war in 1876-77 "for the better preservation of their health."

"The chief signal officer's report for 1877-78 said the station was discontinued July 31, 1876 as an oserivng and reporting station but was continued as a supply station to Pikes Peak. Presumably the station mentioned in the report was the base station.

"It took some mighty hardy soldiers to man the peak station. No one lives closer to the summit these days than the watershed caretaker. The top is rarely visited except by the Ad-AmAn club on New Year's Eev. But these Army men lived in the small stone weather station the year around and underwent hardships few would care to undergo today."

Amid their hardships, the weather observers found plenty of bad weather to report. Crosby cited excerpts from the city Signal officer's report; including:

"Dec. 29, 1876. — A heavy storm commenced some time after midnight which shook the house violently and the roar of the wind was terrific. One anenometer was carried away, two of the doors of the instrument shelter were blown off their hinges and a third forced half-way into the shelter. The velocity of the wind is estimated to have been 90 to 100 miles per hour.

Jan. 8, 1877 — One of the heaviest storms ever witnessed at the station occurred today. It is estimated that the wind exceeded a velocity of 100 miles per hour, altho the anemometer only registered 80, but its cups were continually clogged with drifting snow, much impeding its movement, and in consequence it had to be changed about once an hour. The temperature thruout was very low. During the storm, Sgt. Hobbs (Sgt. C. M. Hobbs in charge of the station) arrived near the summit from Colorado Springs in an almost exhausted condition. Private Greenwell went to his assistance and after much difficulty they both arrived at the house on the summit, Sgt. Hobbs with his fingers badly frozen.

The most dramatic and detailed account of a battle with a Pikes Peak storm was related by Sgt. Hobbs and contained in the chief signal officer's report of 1876-77. The sergeant, Pvt. J. T. O'Keefe and a Mr. Yates, described as an invalid from Colorado Springs, wtih two mules and a horse were caught in a storm on May 13, 1876. In his report, Sgt. Hobbs said:

"When we began the last mile, which is the worst of the trail, it was impossible to face the wind with open eyes, and for the last half-mile it was by far the most severe storm that either Greenwell (private then at the summit station) or O'Keefe, who has spent two months here, have ever seen.

"O'Keefe fell far behind, and was lost to sight before I suspected what a nest of trouble we were getting into. After we reached the crater we could not see five feet ahead of us at the time, and I am not exaggerating in the least, and an eighth of a mile from the station I was completely lost and had to abandon myself to the instincts of Balaam, trsuting that she would follow the hidden trail but she finally went wrong, and, with Yates, myself and the horse, was completely buried in the snow.

"We scrambled out, however, with the animals at times sinking to their backs, until we came across the telegraph line, and I know which way to go. Looking at Yates, I saw that he could not survive such a storm much longer, so I took his horse and told him to follow the line to the house as quickly as possible and send Greenwell out to my assistance.

"After he left I tied Balaam to a telegraph pole and started forward with the horse. The wind was blowing 45 miles an hour at the time, driving the little pellets of snow like bullets, and time and again I thought I would have to abandon the animals to their fate, even when I knew I was not more than 200 feet from the house; but I was determined to keep them as long as possible. More than once the animal fell on rocks underneath the snow, cutting her legs in a fearful manner, and it would be impossible to get her started again.

"Finally, above the noise of the storm I heard Greenwell call; and when he came out of the darkness, a short distance in front, I gave him the horse and went back for Balaam, whom I found braced up against the driving wind, like the old soldier that she is.

"I urged her forward foot by foot, and finally housed her in the woodshed, where Greenwell had arrived with the horse. I sent him out at once to look for O'Keefe and then began to look to myself and visitor.

"From the tops of our heads to the soles of our boots there was not a single square inch of surface that had been exposed, even to our faces, that was not covered with solid ice a quarter of an inch thick, and when Greenwell and O'Keefe arrived, in 15 or 20 minutes, with 'Kit,' they were in the same condition; animals as well as men were walking pillars of ice and snow.

"Terrible as was the experience to us residenters, it was doubly so to Yates, who had never in his life seen anything even suggestive of it, and who honestly believed that his last hour had come."

Most of the men who served at the weather station are lost to history, or are mere names on official reports. But one achieved lasting notoriety for the stories he concocted — stories that, even if completely false, won nationwide attention then and are still retold today.

"The man who got his place in history with his story telling was Pvt. J. T. O'Keefe, who served at the station until relieved for promotion Oct. 10, 1876," Crosby said. "O'Keefe was an Irishman with an Irishman's love for story-telling. On off-duty days he liked to take a new nip in Manitou saloons. Whiskey lubricated his creative faculties.

"One of his off-repeated stories was that on arriving at the summit house one day he found mountain rats devouring a slab of bacon and side of beef.

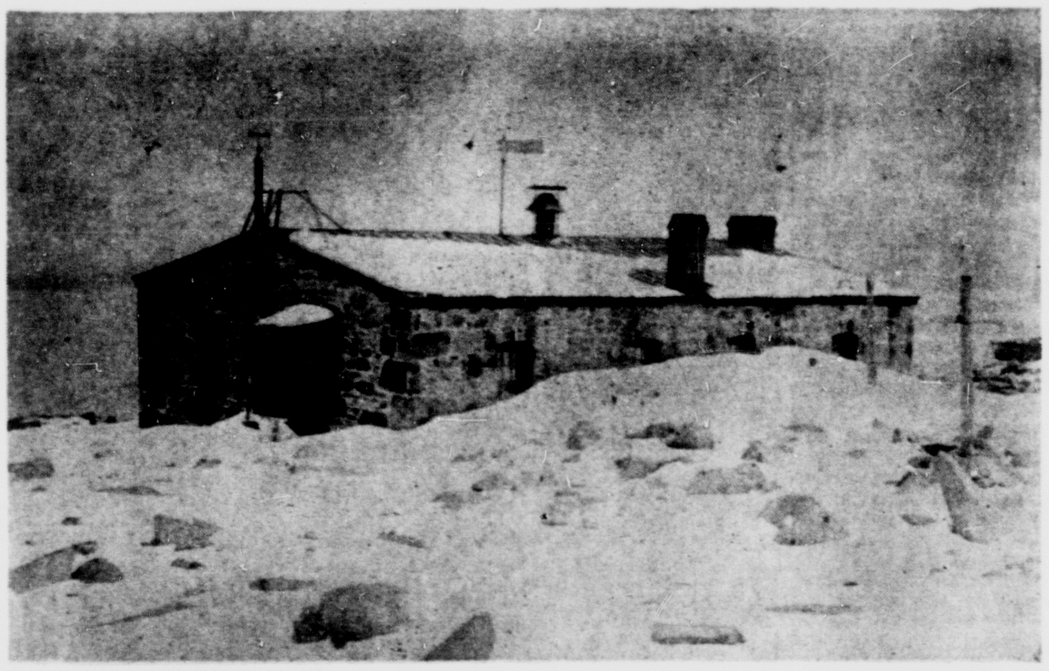
O'Keefe described them as so fierce he had to knock down the stovepipe and put his legs in the sections to keep from being gnawed. When all other efforts failed to route the rodent introducers, O'Keefe said he grounded a battery and with a live electric wire electrocuted the four-footed marauders.

"His most famous and most widely circulated story was the tale of a 12-year-old girl, often described as his daughter, who was eaten, all except her skeleton, by the pack rats atop Pikes Peak. Of course, there was no child or woman on the peak, but that didn't stop O'Keefe's imagination.

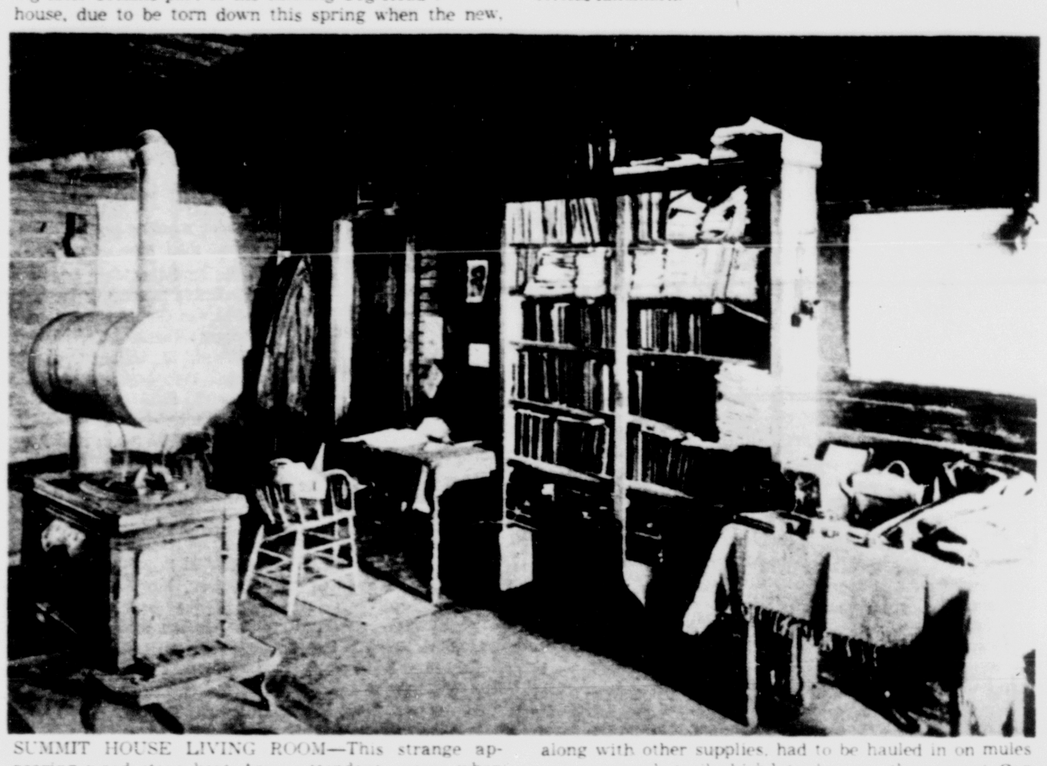
"He said she was buried under a pile of stones on the summit. For many years, sightseeing men had tourists toss rocks on the grave while repeating O'Keefe's yarn."

So, in Crosby's opinion, the historical background of the stone building, first used as the Signal Corps weather station, and later as the Cog Road terminal, is worthy of sparing from bulldozers.

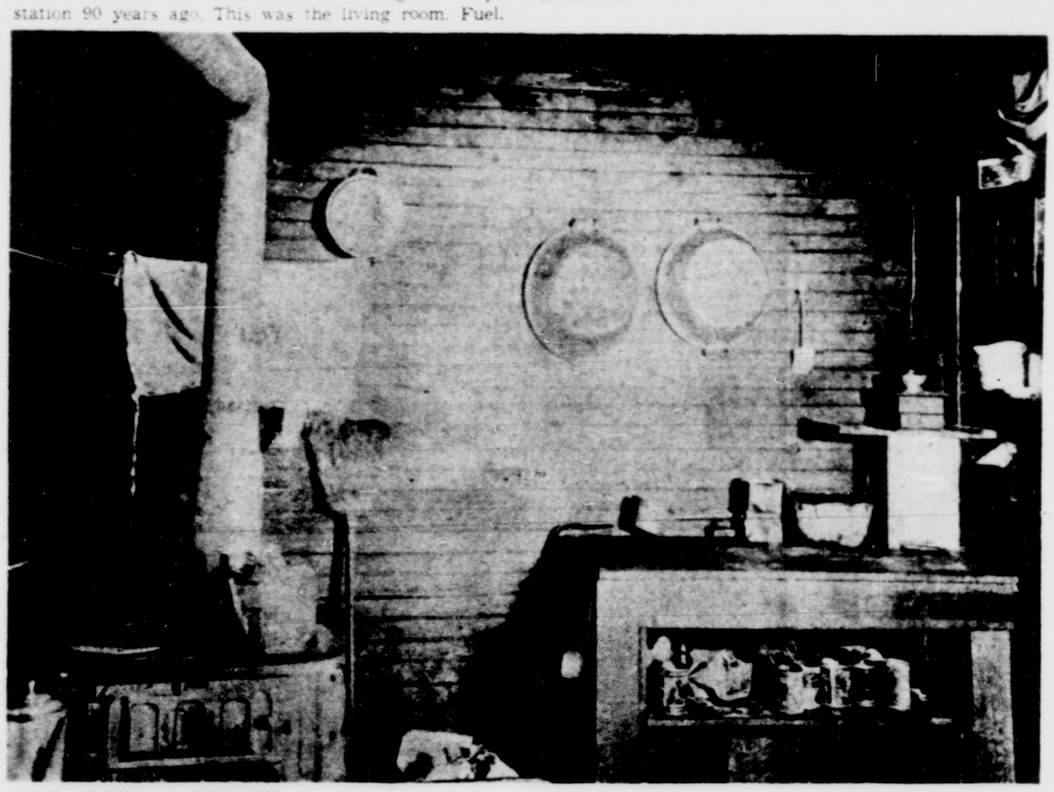
"It's a part of the pioneer days," Crosby said. "So few genuine relics — those with any meaningful historical association, remain that I don't believe we should let the old Signal Station go the same way so many other landmarks have."



PIKES PEAK WEATHER STATION — This is how the Army Signal Corps weather station atop Pikes Peak appeared after its construction in 1873. This building later became part of the existing Cog Road summit house, due to be torn down this spring when the new, modern summit house opens. W. S. Crosby, Mantitou Springs pioneer, would like to see the Signal Corps portion of the old summit house preserved as an historical landmark.



SUMMIT HOUSE LIVING ROOM—This strange appearing wood stove kept Army attendants warm when arctic winds howled around the stone Signal Corps station 90 years ago. This was the living room. Fuel, along with other supplies, had to be hauled in on mules over a rough trail which later became the present Cog Road route.



HIGH ALTITUDE KITCHEN—On this wood-burning stove, meals were prepared for soldiers stationed at the Signal Corps station on the summit of Pikes Peak during the 1870's. Cooking on top of the peak is a problem even today with the most modern equipment. This stove probably tried the patience and temper of early day cooks, but at least had the advantage of throwing off a lot of heat to counteract the biting cold of winter days.

WEATHER STATION OFFICE — Weather records thruout the year were kept in this office of the old Signal Corps weather station on top of Pikes Peak in the early days. Communication with the base station in Colorado Springs was by telegraph, unless storms ripped down the line. When that happened, mirrors flashed messages in code if the weather were clear.

District 11 Dental Health Gets Underway

A new dental health program, with special emphasis at the third grade level, will get underway in District 11 elementary schools during National Dental Health Week, this week.

Garry L. Berry, director of health and physical education, said the classroom teachers will conduct the program with the assistance of the Colorado Springs Dental Society and a dentifrice manufacturer.

Dr. William Greer, a member of the Dental Society and of the District 11 Board of Education, has arranged for Colorado Springs dentists to speak to third graders in all schools on Wednesday.

The dentists will emphasize the importance of good oral hygiene, and they will show children the correct way to brush their teeth. Every 3rd grade pupil will receive a free tooth brush and a tube of toothpaste. Teachers of other grades will receive materials for carrying on the program in their classes.

It is hoped that early and continuing instruction of this kind will reduce the amount of tooth decay as 90 to 95 per cent of all decay begins when children are between the ages of 5 and 18, Barry said.

Local Drivers Win Patrol Commendations

B-E Day Set For Thursday In Springs

The Chamber of Commerce has announced that over 500 teachers and administrators from school districts in the area will take part in business-education day Thursday.

This year secondary schools are involved. High schools and junior high schools in the districts of 11, 12 as well as parochial groups will be let out for the afternoon and the teachers will meet at the City Auditorium for lunch.

Dr. Glenn Barnett, Colorado University, will speak at the luncheon.

The teachers will be hosted by more than 75 firms and after the luncheon will visit these firms in groups ranging from four to 24 teachers.

The tours will include visits to the businesses and orientations designed to give the teacher a better understanding of the contributions made to the community by the businesses as well as some of the details as to how a particular business operates.

This year will mark the fifth business-education day held in the region. The program has been continuous for the past 10 years. On alternate years businessmen visit schools on B-E day. More than 700 people will attend the luncheon Thursday, officials report.

Hill Climb Group Elects Officers For Coming Year

Former vice president of the Pikes Peak Hill Climb Association, Julian Rawls, has assumed the presidency of the association for the coming year.

Rawls, of Wolf Cereal Processing Co., took over the reins from Jim Reilly who has been named chairman of this year's race committee.

Other officers elected were Robert Donner Jr., vice president and Clay Banta, secretary-treasurer.

The association plans to be open for public membership this year and those paying $5 membership fees between now and July 4 will be charter members.

J. C. Agajanian, noted racing figure who helped promote the the 1963 race, has expressed interest in sponsoring the July 4th race to the top of the peak this year.

The climb, as in the past five years, will feature the championship car, sports and stock car events.

National Radio, TV Walkout Is Averted

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — A nationwide strike against the National Broadcasting Co. (NBC) and the American Broadcasting Co. (ABC) was averted Saturday when union and management negotiators reached agreement on a new contract.

A spokesman for the network negotiators said, "we have signed a three-year contract and all standby crews have been dismissed across the nation." He said details of the new contract were not immediately available.

The National Association of Broadcast Employes and Technicians (NABET), representing some 1,800 employes in a variety of jobs, had set a deadline of midnight EST Friday night. However, negotiators decided to continue talks past the contract deadline to avert a walkout.

Wages and network plans to subcontract work were understood to be key issues.

The Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS) was not involved in the contract dispute because a different union covers the jobs in that network.

Gold Dust Problem May Be Solved by New Grass

By DENNIS LEE ROYLE

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—Ever since gold was discovered in 1886, South Africa has been faced with a growing problem. What to do with the man-made mountains of tofering golden sand, the residue of crushed gold-bearing rock, after its glittering wealth has been extracted.

The hustling city of Johannesburg, known as the "Golden City," is often obscured by drifting sand storms as high winds whip across the goldmining sites.

The gold-bearing reef which extends southwards in an arc from Johannesburg for a distance of 130 miles, has an estimated 25,000 sand dumps, many of them containing up to 25 million tons of sand.

"It's like living in a continuous sand storm," commented Dr. A. L. James, director of the Chamber of Mines research laboratories, "but we believe we have found the solution by using common grass."

Each morning the man-made deserts come alive with goggled African workers scattering grass seed over the barren sandy wastes. The areas are sectioned off by two-foot high reed fences, which prevents the sand from drifting and gives the grass a chance to germinate.

Research into the growth of gold mine dumps began four years ago. Four hundred different types of grass, trees and shrubs were planted. Research continued until only 14 types of grass showed any sign of germinating on the sandy wastes.

Today, some mine dumps have been transformed into lush grass-covered mountains, reducing the problem of air and water pollution and allowing adjacent areas to be developed by industrial and residential concerns.

Dr. James said, "It's an endless task. For each mine dump we cover with grass, others continue to grow, as long as the extraction of South Africa's golden wealth continues. Which it does, day and night.

"At one time it was suggested that we sell the sand to building contractors. But who wants 25 million tons of sand, and that's just one dump. We have 25,000 others."

Some of the older dumps do, however, contain a certain economic value. Extracting uranium from them has become big business.

Industrialists maintain that delicate machinery becomes ruined by the drifting particles of sand. Health authorities are concerned at the pollution of water supplies and food manufacturers are reluctant to build factories within miles of a mine dump, lest their product becomes contaminated with a gritty sand. Consequently, the areas surrounding the mining towns become unsaleable and useless.

Grassing the great sandy mountains around Johannesburg is a long-term plan which will take years to complete.

"If we don't do something about it now," explained Dr. James, there's every possibility that Johannesburg and other gold mining towns may one day find themselves partially buried under a man-made desert."

A LITTLE COED TEAMWORK

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — Two physical education teachers — both women — propose that some intercollegiate athletic teams should be made up of both sexes.

Dr. Betty Hartman, chairman of women's physical education at the University of Connecticut, physical educational teacher in the Mansfield, Conn., schools, contend that this would make physical education programs more beneficial to all students.

In a book to be published in the spring the teachers advocate mixing tennis, golf, swimming and volleyball teams, among others.

Wreck of U.S. Plane Brought to Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — The wreckage of the U.S. Air Force jet training plane shot down in East Germany was brought to West Berlin Saturday.

The largest remnants of the T39 Sabreliner were the wings.

Capt. Miles J. McNaughton, of St. James, Mo., was in charge of the recovery operations.

McNaughton said his convoy, which included a mortuary team, arrived at the site near the village of Vogelsberg, 125 miles southwest of Berlin, early Friday morning after a drive of more than nine hours.

He said the team began immediately to recover the bodies of Lt. Col Gerald Hannaford, 41, Austin, Texas, Capt. Donald Millard, 33, Ukiah, Calif., and Capt. John Lorraine, 34, Jacksonville, Fla.

McNaughton said recovery of the wreckage began after photographs were taken of the scene.

Carson Training Gets Fighter Plane Escort

Fighter planes from Cannon Air Force Base, N.M., few more than 120 close air support missions during January for Ft. Carson training exercises.

Air Force Col. Joseph J. Kruzel, new Commanding Officer, 832d Air Division, Cannon AFB, said Thursday at Ft. Carson that there will be a continuing program of air support. Col. Kruzel was at the mountain post for a meeting with 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) Commander, Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges.

Col. Kruzel said the missions are flown for support on observation during the exercises. The 27th Tactical Fighter Wing conducts most of the missions, while the 474th Wing is also available for training exercises.

Lt. Col. Clyde Strain, Tactical Air Command liason officer assigned to 5th Inf. Div. (Mech) Headquarters, said Ft. Carson conducted more missions during January than Ft. Hood, Texas. The 832d provides air support for both posts. Col. Strain said the normal number of sorties per month is between 100 and 110.

The missions are scheduled one month in advance, but targets are not announced until 3 hours before take off. F-100 Super Saber Fighter-Bombers are used for the sorties.

Col. Kruzel became commander of the 832d two weeks ago after commanding the 354th Fighter Wing at Myrtle Beach AFB, South Carolina. The 354th provided similar close air support for the 82d and 101st Airborn units at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

During the meeting with Gen. Heintges, Col. Kruzel was made a Chief Scout and Guide and presented a copy of an original Kit Carson map.

Shriver Bows Out of Race for Vice Presidency

By GEOFFREY GOULD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver says he doesn't think he's going to get the Democratic vice presidential nomination.

And, with a bow in the direction of brother-in-law Robert F. Kennedy, he says the attorney general would be a "terrific" choice.

Shriver's comments on one of Washington's favorite guessing games — President Johnson's likely running mate—were elicited by newsmen Friday after he told the House Foreign Affairs Committee he needs $115 million to run the Peace Corps the next fiscal year.

After the session, Shriver dropped by the White House to chat with Johnson and reports immediately began circulating that the President has decided to set up a new agency headed by Shriver to direct the administration's pledged war on poverty.

A comment from Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., that Johnson had indicated "someone like Sargent Shriver" should direct it gave substance to the reports.

In talking with newsmen about the vice presidential nomination, Shriver said: "I've not decided to rule out anything or rule in anything. I came down here at the request of President Kennedy to try to do a job. . . . I've tended to my knitting as closely as possible. I've made a point of this. I'm not running for anything."

Would he run if Johnson asked him to?

"I don't worry about it. I don't think I'm the guy who's going to get asked," Shriver said.

Asked to comment on some of the others who have been mentioned, he said Kennedy "would be terrific. After all, who's got a better record? He's obviously got all the qualifications."

Shriver is married to the former Eunice Kennedy, a sister of the attorney general and the late President John F. Kennedy. His close connection with the Kennedy name, his poise and good looks, his northern liberal background and his Roman Catholic religion are counted as political pluses on a Johnson ticket.

GAZETTE TELEGRAPH
Your Freedom Newspaper
Ever striving for the Pikes Peak Region to be an even better place to live

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is self-control, no more, no less. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

Incorrect View of Hamilton

We are continuing here with the discussion between LeMoyne Browning of Florence, Colorado, and ourselves on the subject of the Constitution.

"The perfections of man were pre - dominate (predominant?) during the lives of our founding fathers. Today we are faced with imperfections of man. Just as an example, during the period of enactment or in the process of informing the citizens of the intent of the Constitution, Alexander Hamilton wrote No. 17 of what is referred to as the Federalist Papers. His faith, not necessarily trust of his fellow man, is very apparent. He could not conceive that man, even in his imperfection, could seek and gain, as we have today, power over the lives of his fellowman. What Mr. Hamilton overlooked is the greedy nature of men, the something for nothing approach which gave our federal authorities the necessary tool for complete domination. The depression of the thirties took man's love of life and substituted the fear of death and hunger. This gave a minority of selfish citizens in position of authority access to freedoms that previously would have been stopped by the individuality and responsibility of each citizen. Citizenship was a pride and a love of ownership unknown in our modern world."

If we think back to the opening comments in this series, we will discover that one of Mr. Browning's criticisms of ye editor was that, in his view, man is not perfectable and also, his view of our view is that we think man is perfectable. But now, he holds to the idea that during the time our Constitution was established the perfection of man was in the ascendency.

We are faced with awkward phrasing here, but the meaning seems to emerge.

Mr. Browning wants us to believe that men during the latter part of the 18th century had a larger faith in the goodness of people than is presently true, and also, apparently, that this larger faith at that time was justified.

But once more Mr. Browning reveals the limits of his research. Having read No. 17 of the Federalist Papers, and possibly a few others, he offers an argument that Hamilton was a man of large faith in human nature who couldn't imagine the greed and avarice so prevalent today in our fellow creatures.

We suppose there are many good biographies of Alexander Hamilton. We have read one or two, and not, we suppose, the best of the lot. But we will submit that Mr. Hamilton had a dim view of human nature and sought by every avenue open to him to create a strong and highly centralized federal power. It was Jefferson who held to the view that Mr. Browning ascribes to Hamilton. And Jefferson opposed the Constitution for the same reason Hamilton supported it.

Hamilton was a member of the aristocracy and wanted a strong central power to control the people, whom he did not trust. Jefferson tended to trust the people and wanted to limit the power of the federal government. Mr. Hamilton sought, thru the Federalist Papers, to convince the populace that the Constitution was not quite as dangerous as many staunch patriots thought it was.

The depression of the thirties was only one of a score of depressions we have had since the nation was founded. But a trend toward government domination and control of the economy which had started much earlier was speeded up during the thirties.

We don't know what Mr. Browning means by the last sentence of that paragraph. If he means that Americans were unparalleled in their love of country and in their pride of citizenship, he is historically in error. If he means something else, we don't know what he means

Panhandler

Today's politician is a panhandler in a business suit, willing to offer you the taxpayers' money in exchange for your vote.

Hamilton on Federal Power

At this point Mr. Browning quotes from No. 17 of the Federalist Papers by Alexander Hamilton: "Allowing the utmost latitude to the love of power which any reasonable man can acquire, I confess I am at a loss to discover what temptation the persons intrusted with the administration of the general government could ever feel to divest the states of the authorities of that description." (Notice — he said reasonable man.) "It is therefore improbable that there should exist a disposition in the federal councils to usurp the powers with which they are connected; because the attempt to exercise those powers would be as troublesome as it would be nugatory; and the possession of them, for that reason, would contribute nothing to the dignity, to the importance, or to the splendor of the national government.

" 'But let it be admitted, for argument's sake, that mere wantonness and lust of domination would be sufficient to beget that disposition; still it may be safely affirmed that the sense of the constituent body of the national representatives, or, in other words, the people of the several states, would control the indulgence of so extravagant an appetite. It will always be far more easy for the state governments to encroach upon the national authorities than for the national government to encroach upon the state authorities. The proof of this proposition turns upon the greater degree of influence which the state governments, if they administer their affairs with uprightness and prudence, will generally possess over the people; a circumstance which at the same time teaches us that there is an inherent and intrinsic weakness in all federal constitutions; and that too much pains cannot be taken in their organization to give them all the force which is compatible with the principles of liberty.' "

Had Mr. Browning sought to disprove his own argument and to prove our own he could not have tumbled upon a more fortunate quotation. Here is Mr. Hamilton revealing clearly just how wrong he could be. He intimates that federal governments are hard put to offset the influence of the states. The contrary has always been true and is certainly true at this time. Further, in the closing portion of the second paragraph quoted, here is Mr. Hamilton urging as strong a central government as possible.

It should be pointed out that during the debates on the Constitution, so fearful were the Federalists of the arguments of Thomas Jefferson, that they contrived to have him shipped to France as an assistant to Benjamin Franklin, who, in the opening months of the contest over the Constitution, was our minister to our great Revolutionary ally.

Franklin required no assistant in the performance of his duties, which he did with singular distinction. The arrival of Jefferson was an embarrassment to both him and Jefferson. So, with a courtesy and charm typical of Franklin, he surrendered his duties to Jefferson and returned to the States in time to chair some of the final debates at Philadelphia.

Thus, Jeffersonian arguments in favor of limiting the power of the Constitution were banished beyond the seas. Franklin was unable to stem the tide. And the Constitution was adopted by a magnificent display of political manipulation rarely duplicated in this or any nation.

Hamilton's policies, in favor of a strong and unchecked sovereign power at federal level, carried the day. Any student of history and anyone who cares to read carefully what was actually written into the Constitution can confirm these facts in a few hours of careful study. The facts are not in question.

Yet, this generation of Americans has been repeating endlessly that those who wrote the Constitution set up a government of limited powers. The facts are that those who favored a limitation were in the minority when ratification occurred and what limitations were to come were tacked onto the Constitution after its adoption.

Instead of by Men?

By GEORGE BOARDMAN, PhD

I plead guilty. I must have used the expression a hundred times or more before I tossed it into the wind one night and heard a raucous laughter blasting at me. "Ha, ha — a government by law instead of a government by men. Ha, ha, ha! Government is government is government." The wind calmed down and I sat and tried to penetrate the darkness of the Cerbat Mountains, and wondered, what's wrong?

Let's see. Man wrote the Ten Commandments. Man wrote the Declaration of Independence. Men write laws. Laws exist because men write them. Law is not something apart from men, it is created by men. What laws are NOT created by men?

Man is conceived, is born and breathes. If he does not breathe, he is not a human but a dead person. Man breathes and lives and this is a law which man has not written.

If the heart beat of a man exists, in fact, and if he breathes, in fact, he is alive and IS alive by virtue of a natural circumstance or law which man did not write. If man lives, he has a right to life! I believe this is obvious. If he has a right to life, he has the right to sustain life, protect and defend his life and his life is HIS, it is not the life of any other human being. Man did not write these laws. The writing of such laws or the recognition of such facts, changes nothing. As I write I only recognize the fact that man is conceived, is born, breathes and is then alive; he lives.

Do these laws or facts which may be called natural laws, create government? They do not!

Man is conceived, born, breathes, lives, dies. His life is his. The products of his life are his products. Where the products of his life sustain that life, whosoever takes away the products, jeopardizes the life which is a product of natural law or fact. The man who takes the means of sustaining life from another, is known as a thief. He violates the natural law, or places the life of another human being in jeopardy but it is not the jeopardy which violates the law, or the degree of jeopardy, it is the act which violates the law which man has not written and the fact remains, whether the fact is documented or not.

If a man imposes his will upon the will of another man, the victim may be denied the right to sustain his life but, again, the violation consists of the initial act, not the results of the act. We find, then, that violation of natural laws is causative regardless of the effect.

Therre are other natural laws; the law of gravity, for instance. While man may defy the law of gravity, he places his life in jeopardy by so doing and the violation places his life in jeopardy regardless of the effect, whether he is successful in his defiance or a failure.

It is my contention that all laws which are not natural laws, must then be man-made laws and that since governments are a creation of man, there can be no such thing as government by natural law or government by law, instead of man. Whether man, acquiring power over others as government, either writes or enforces the law, this is government by man. If man controls himself and avoids violation of natural law, this is self-responsibility, self-control and, loosely, self-government.

Individual man, then, may govern himself and refuse to violate natural law. Any other form of government is, perforce, government by man and not self-government by natural law.

Taxation created by man-made law, enforced by the power of government, is a violation of a basic natural law — the right of a living human being to sustain life by virtue of the expenditure of his own energy. I contend that violation of this natural law is altogether evil. If a man emplOys another to help him sustain his life, voluntarily, no possible violation of natural law exists in fact. And, only individual, self-governing man has the right to decide what he needs or wants to sustain his life; if he does not possess this fundamental right, he has no fundamental right to his own life.

Good luck and good health to you, in Freedom.

The American Way

If We Are Really Guilty . . .

By TOM ANDERSON

Lee Harvey Oswald was a dedicated communist, a defector to the Soviet Union, a hater of the United States, a devotee of Fidel Castro and a scum-bum who should never have been allowed to reenter our country. Yet, after Oswald had moved to Moscow and renounced his American citizenship, "our" State Department lent him $435.71 to return. Why? Few anti-communists are security risks, but every communist is.

WRONG PARTIES

Earl Warren, "Justice" of the Extreme Court, said, "Such acts of assassination and murder are commonly stimulated. . . as a result of the hatred and bitterness that has been injected into the life of our nation by bigots." Did the justice mean hate of all good Americans for his bloody buddy, dictator Tito of Yugoslavia? "Pravda" also says President Kennedy was killed by hate festering within the United States. How true! Hate festering in communists like Lee Harvey Oswald who are dedicated to destroying our country.

Communists are taught hate relentlessly. Assassination is a recommended technique of Communism. Lee Harvey Oswald's mind had been warped by an alien violence, not by a native attitude. It is not the mass of Americans who are to blame, nor Dallas, nor constitutional conservatives. The blame rests squarely on the communists and their sympathizers and dupes.

WRONG CHARGE

Drew Pearson claims that, "If hate groups had not pressured Congress against passage of an arms registration act, President Kennedy might still be alive today." Pearson is referring to the Anfuso bill which would require registration of all citizen firearms. Had there been such a bill, Oswald would, of course, have hastened to the nearest FBI office with his gun! And all other gangsters would turn theirs in too! The right "to keep and bear arms" is guaranteed in the 2nd Amendment of our so-called "out-of-date" Constitution.

A federal law to register all guns is the first step. The next step of the collectivists is to send gun collectors around to each house to pick them up. That's what happened in Czechoslovakia shortly before the communists took over. Don't ever give up your guns. The time to buy a gun is when it becomes unlawful to own one.

WRONG AGAIN

Moscow, American communists, socialists, idealists and halfbrights are waging a relentless campaign to make the American people believe that the "super patriots" are responsible for President Kennedy's death. The collectivists are trying to implant a guilt feeling into all of us so they can run our lives.

If the American people are to blame for what has happened, it's because we kept our heads in the sand and refused to believe that there is a communist menace within which is boring relentlessly to bring about our enslavement. If we are guilty, it is because we as a sovereign people have permitted our government to coddle subversive agents. If we are guilty, it is because we've been "too busy" to worry about the calculated undermining of our morality, our religion, our patriotism in our schools, churches, government and communications system.

Parental Authority

By THURMAN SENSING

In the fight to preserve constitutional government and the free enterprise system, nothing is more important than guarding the institution of the family.

In American life, the family is the basic unit in which a child learns the religious, national and personal values by which a person ought to live. Moreover, as a family is a collection of individuals, cooperating freely and relying on traditional truths, it is a teaching experience that prepares youths for an ethical existence and for a useful place in our capitalist society.

This is worth mentioning because totalitarians always seek to undermine the family and subject children to outside disciplines and to the thought reform and control that is called "brainwashing." Indeed, it is lamentably true that even in the free United States there are attempts being made to damage parental authority.

One such effort was made public in mid-January when the Youth Ministry Consultation on Race, sponsored by the Emergency Commission on Religion and Race of the National Council of Churches, was held at the Methodist General Board of Education building in Nashville, Tenn.

In a shocking display of contempt for law and order and for the right of parents to educate their children in their own values, the meeting openly proclaimed ways and means by which parental authority could be subverted. One adult editor of a "youth" magazine said that youths should be "blooded" in demonstrations, that "the kids owe it to the church to march, to picket. . ." She pointed out that "all over the nation parents have restrictive influences. Summer camp (church) is the first time for the youth to get away, free to do as they like." Another speaker said: "Parents in the North would get as mad at seeing their kids in a labor picket line as in a civil rights line. . . . We need to get the kids politically involved." Indeed, speaker after speaker urged that youths be encouraged to get in conflict with the law.

The Nashville Banner, in a strong comment on this National Council of Churches-sponsored conference, said:

"These are, Mr. and Mrs. America, YOUR children this 'Emergency Commission' panel is talking about — and the parental authority it proposes to subvert is yours. The teenager it seeks to attract for its own scofflaw use is right out of your home, school and church. The ideological manipulators are now picking them young."

Good churchmen undoubtedly are shocked to find that an organization that describes itself as religious in character should be urging youngsters to get out from under parental influence and to join street demonstrators in violation of the law of the communities in which they live.

There are many things that are outrageous about such efforts. But the worst of all is how it violates the precepts of the Christian religion. "Honor thy father and mother," says the commandment. But the NCC's commission would have the youngsters honor a commitment to civil disobedience rather than parental injunctions to be law-abiding members of their communities.

Thus the damage done by such adult advice is not simply to the communities that might be plunged into strife but to the children themselves. To urge children to break the law and to engage in what amounts to social revolutionary activity is to damage a child's development. For Christians, this is shocking beyond words, for Jesus Christ specifically condemned anyone who would harm a child in any way. He said it was better that they have a millstone tied around their necks and to be cast into the sea than to harm a little one.

And what kind of citizens would these children be who accepted indoctrination by the NCC Commission instead of heeding the lawful authority of parents and community? Would they be law-abiding adults after having been law-breakers in their youth? What the NCC Commission suggested is that one can choose the laws one wishes to obey. Such a suggestion is unworthy of belief.

In learning of the conference's efforts to get students to join civil disobedience campaigns, one's thoughts go back to the terrible Nazi era and the rise of the Hitler youth movements in which youngsters were encouraged to become militant demonstrators and pay no heed to their parents' counsel. Such attacks on parental authority have no place in the United States of America.

Wit and Whimsy

Two can live as cheap as one, but nowadays it takes both of them to earn enough to do it.

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

Question No. 428: "Is it true the stock exchange is not able to regulate itself? The leftists cite the 1929 crash as proof that the exchange could not regulate itself and that government must control it."

Answer: We believe that consumer self - regulation is the only way that any market can be controlled properly. If there were no government regulation, the natural law of supply and demand would solve most of the problems.

When the apologists for governmental intervention point to the 1929 crash as the result of lack of regulation, they are mistaken. Actually the stock market crash came as a result of over-expansion of credit due to the Federal Reserve being under the control of politicians. But the Federal Reserve was one of the things the public was told would prevent over - expansion of credit after establishment of the Federal Reserve System in 1913.

The Federal Reserve was created by the government "to prevent inflation and depression and to regulate money and credit." However, it has been used to create and continue inflation.

Basic economists in the 20s were constantly warning of the dangers of further credit expansion. E. C. Harwood of the American Institute for Economic Research on Jan. 25, 1929, wrote:

"Banks of the country are already in a position which, before the days of the Federal Reserve System, would have choked off the era of prosperity. In other words, they are overloaned, and are able to continue supporting outstanding credit only by borrowing from the Federal Reserve Banks."

Thus, financial institutions relied on artificial credit granted through the Federal Reserve System, to delay the natural comparatively small ups and downs of the market which would have corrected themselves without governmental intervention.

When investors began to lose confidence in the ability to continue on the inflationary trend, they started reducing expenditures. The result was a marked decline in the market. Many economists have contended that had the government not intervened, the market would have corrected itself, and the succeeding depression would have ended much sooner.

As Mr. Harwood said in his book "Cause and Control of the Business Cycle": "The Federal Reserve Board should be an independent, unbiased, and non-political agency, capable of directing the scientific investigation of our monetary problems. However, it is obviously a mere partisan body today, directly subject to political pressure through its chairman."

If there were no governmental Federal Reserve Board, bankers' self - interest would cause them to refuse to make long - term loans on property that was not produced as consumer goods and at the same time accept deposits payable on demand. This kind of banking due to government interference, was the cause of the "great depression."

Questions are limited to general human relations questions that will improve the well-being of all mankind on this earth.

Castro May Sign Test-Ban Treaty

PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON—Fidel Castro is dropping hints that he will soon sign the nuclear test ban treaty.

The Cuban dictator has been the lone hold-out among the Soviet satellites. Castro claimed he didn't want to become involved in the furious ideological hassle between Russia and Red China — which has violently assailed the pact.

Actual effect of his abstention was to side with Peking — of which he was fully aware.

It is now apparent that Castro affected a "neutral" stand on this issue for the express purpose of wangling urgently needed additional Soviet aid for Cuba's shattered economy — which is at a record-low ebb due to colossal blunders in planning, gross mismanagement, waste, corruption and other failings.

Latin American diplomats in Havana, who have been tipped off on the impending test ban signing, are certain it is part of Castro's payment for the greatly increased assistance promised by Premier Khrushchev during their recent Moscow hobnobbing.

Two moot questions overhang their deal:

(1) Whether volatile and temperamental Castro will make good on his promise to sign the nuclear treaty, and (2) whether Khrushchev will give him all the economic help promised.

The Soviet bloc already is putting more than $1 million a day into Cuba in food, clothing, oil, machinery, equipment and new plants. In return, they are getting some barter payments in sugar, tobacco, fruits and vegetables.

Among the satellites the Cuban burden is admittedly onerous, and they are getting tired of it. They have plenty of economic shortcomings of their own to cope with.

So where the big boost in aid is coming from remains to be seen. If Russia shoulders the extra load, that will add to its tribulations, which are many and huge. As a result, Castro may discover — as have numerous others who made deals with the Kremlin — that what he gets and what was promised are very different.

He won't be the first Communist puppet played for a sucker.

MILLS ON THE SPOT

There is a significant reason behind President Johnson's repeatedly avowed determination to put the long-controversial Medicare bill thru Congress this year.

The line-up in the Ways & Means Committee is closer than published reports indicate.

Speaker John McCormack, Mass., has told the President the backstage alignment on this stormy issue is 13 to 12 — with the 10 Republican committmen and 3 Democrats against, and 12 Democrats for.

The latter nose count is a gain of one Democrat. Who he is is a closely guarded secret, but the Democratic committemen now claimed for the measure are:

Representatives Cecil King, Calif.; Thomas O'Brien, Ill.; Hale Boggs, La.; Eugene Keogh, N.Y.; Frank Karsten, Mo.; George Rhodes, Pa.; Al Ullman, Ore.; James Burke, Mass.; Clark Thompson, Tex.; Martha Griffiths, Mich.; Ross Bass, Tenn., and Pat Jennings, Va.

This tight inner committee situation puts Chairman Wilbur Mills, Ark., squarely on the spot.

He has long had close personal ties with the President. But Mills is against the medicare bill. By standing pat or shifting ground, he could determine the fate of the legislation this session.

The President already has had one talk with him about the measure — sounding out Mills on possible compromises.

The discussion got nowhere. The proposals broached by the President were turned down by Mills. However, he carefully slammed no doors and left the way open for further deliberations.

Whether they will get anywhere depends on the administration's meeting two basic Mills demands: (1) A medicare program must be financially sound; (2) it must provide freedom of choice for participants as between coverage by social security or commercial health care plans.

Mills is telling committee colleagues that so far no administration formula has met these basic requirements.

Whether the President can persuade him to change his mind is the key question.

Apparently the President and Speaker McCormack think there is a chance, because they are very insistent on pressing this long-stalled issue.

AWARDS OF DISTINCTION

Senator Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., long-time liberal leader, has been given an unusual award. He has been named "Salesman of the Year" by the Sales and Marketing Executives of Minneapolis — an organization of businessmen. It's the first time this annual honor has been bestowed on a Democratic politician. The citation for the award credits Humphrey with "Ability to communicate your viewpoints and opinions convincingly and persuasively, and a sincere interest and devotion to people and a willingness to serve them." . . Senator Clinton Anderson, D-M., chairman of the Space Committee and secretary of agriculture in the Truman Administration, has been chosen to receive the "New Mexico Medal," a new award established by the University of New Mexico. Anderson is the first recipient, and the honor will be bestowed on him February 25, at the start of a year-long celebration of the university's 75th anniversary. Anderson, one of President Johnson's leading backers in the 1960 nomination battle, is under serious consideration to head the Platform Committee at the Atlantic City convention in August. Anderson has attended numerous national conventions and is a veteran of platform committees. . . Robert McKinney, New Mexico publisher, was offered a vacancy on the Atomic Energy Commission, but declined "for personal reasons."

Rights Equated With Power

From the Santa Ana (Calif.) Register

The primary finding in a Register survey among 21 planning directors in Orange County is that most all of them equate rights with power.

Most said they, as individuals, have no right to control their neighbor's affairs, but that the government does merely because "it's the law."

J. W. Drawdy, Newport Beach planning director, said government's "right" (and his, as a planner) to regulate property development is granted by the municipal zoning code.

George Kovatch of Orange agrees that "rights" are derived from "the state, which has enabled laws and city ordinances."

Forest A. Dickason, new Orange County planning director, simply echoes the opinions of former director Harry Bergh.

Bergh has contended that "if there were no planning departments we would have a chaotic situation as to arrangement of land use relationships."

As we have mentioned several times in this series, government cannot grant rights, though Mr. Drawdy and Mr. Kovatch obviously disagree. Rights are a natural inheritance of every man, and no man has rights superior to any other man.

On the other hand, government has almost unlimited power and can dispense privileges as it sees fit.

Compulsory planning is, of course, established by the government. But this in itself does not make compulsory planning a moral activity. Government can decree that any act is legal. Murder, rape, you name it. Most of us believe that murder and rape are wrong, immoral.

Some of us even go so far as to believe that theft is wrong, but government survives largely by theft. It takes our money against our will and distributes it for what the governors consider "the common good." But we believe the rightful owner should be the one to decide where his money goes.

Likewise, we believe a property owner is the only person with a moral right to decide the development of his property. Those with governing powers believe they have the right to do this for him. We think they are wrong and are participating in an immoral act when they force the individual to conform to their ideas of development "for the public good."

YMCA Openings Announced for Indian Guides

The YMCA has openings for first and second grade boys and their dads in the "Y" Indian Guides program. Indian Guides is a father and son program designed to promote a closer relationship between fathers and their boys. Groups of dads and sons meet together in the homes of members and these groups are usually centered in various areas of the community.

Craft projects, camp-outs, swims and picnics are all part of the program which is designed to help the father-son relationship at a time in the boy's life when it is very important. The theme of Indian Guide is, of course, Indian lore, which is carried out by using colorful head-bands, jackets, moccasins and other means.

Presently there are twenty Indian Guide tribes in the YMCA — a figure which the "Y" hopes to double in 1964. More than 100 fathers plus a like number of boys are already involved in the program which is growing rapidly.

Information may be secured by calling Bob Wierman of Keith Bullen at 633-4643.

Political Campaigner Has Varied Career

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Michael A. Musmanno has had a varied career. He was a coal miner, steelworker, veteran of both world wars, a rear admiral in the Naval Reserve, composer, orator, and a judge at the war crime trials in Germany.

Now, at 66, a Pennsylvania Supreme Court justice, he is bidding for still another career —in the U.S. Senate.

The Democratic state policy committee in Pennsylvania has endorsed the Pittsburgh jurist for the party's nomination to the Senate seat.

Carson Air Support Aids Improved

Ft. Carson's air support capabilities have been improved with the addition of a new model helicopter to the 5th Aviation Battalion's fleet. The heart of the new H-13-S helicopter, with a supercharged engine whcih allows it to hover 10,000 feet higher than present choppers.

The Mountain Post has the first and only H-13-S in this area. Plastic still covers the two place seat, just like a new car.

Maj. Robert Lemon, maintenance officer of 5th Aviation, said the plane is able to maintain sea level power to hover at high altitudes up to 16,000 feet. H-23-D helicopters now used at Butts Air Field have a 6,000 foot hover limit.

Elevation at the field is 5,870 feet. The altitude and thiness of the air limit effectiveness of present copters at Ft. Carson.

The new aircraft can take off straight up in Fort Carson's thin air, while other models must either use a running or bounce take off. Major Lemon said there is not enough air for the engines, or for the planes roters at high altitudes. The condition is worse during warm weather.

"The supercharger packs air into the intake manifold, giving the engine plenty of air," Maj. Lemon stated. He added, "The principle is taken directly from the D-8 Caterpiller engine."

So far only Maj. Lemon and Warrant Officer John E. Kennebec are qualified to pilot the aircraft. As soon as duel controls are installed, Maj. Lemon will begin training pilots.

Maj. Robert W. Miller, Commanding Officer, 5th Aviation Battalion, declared, "This helicopter is cerainly going to increase our capabilities to support the Division CO and his staff."

England Still Uses 'Queen's Messengers'

LONDON (AP)—The Queen's Messengers have a hard time staying awake.

These trusted couriers of British state secrets spend 90 per cent of their working hours traveling by plane. One of their toughest tasks is to fight off drowsiness.

Although there are faster means of communication, Britain still relies heavily on "hand delivery" to get messages to and from its embassies around the world.

Radio can be jammed. Codes can be broken. An original document, carried by a well trusted hand, may still be the safest link between the home government and its embassies.

While other travelers relax, the Messenger must keep an eye unswervingly on the precious sealed bags, heaped on the seat beside him. If ever a Queen's Messenger lost one enroute — and that's unthinkable the Foreign Office says—he would be dismissed and lose his pension too.

The Messenger's badges of office are a red passport — other British passports are dark blue —and a silver greyhound emblem sometimes worn next to the skin on a chain around the neck.

The greyhound symbol has a story. When King Charles II set up the service—he was an exile from Cromwellian England and in Holland at the time—he wanted to give his messengers a talisman which would be recognized by royalist sympathizers at home. Legend has it that he wrenched the feet from a silver bowl and gave one to each of the first four messengers he sent. Each foot was shaped as a greyhound.

Since 1772 the Queen's Messengers (called King's Messengers when the throne's occupant is male) have been under control of the Foreign Office.

Most are recruited from the military or colonial services. Ex-officers are specially favored and there is always a waiting list for the job.

Messengers are paid 1,070 to 1,370 pounds ($2,996 to $3,836) a year plus expenses. They are required to travel 16 days in every month and spend 90 per cent of that time in the air.

Fatalities have been rare in recent years and those there have been were due to air crashes. Messengers are told of their journeys a month in advance and their assignments are regularly changed.

A Messenger's first job is to report to the Bag Room of the Foreign Office where the diplomatic pouches are prepared for dispatch. He is handed one or more white canvas bags, secured with lead seals.

The bags have been weighted ever since World War I when a Messenger whose ship was intercepted by a German U-boat had the galling experience of seeing the bag he dropped over the side bob cheerfully on the waves into the arms of the waiting German crew.

Lieut. Col. G. P. Murray, who superintends the corps, says it would take two years for one Messenger to cover all the runs. There are now more than 100 world capitals to be served instead of the mere handful when the service was started.

Murray says the main thing needed for a Queen's Messenger is initiative and discipline. Messengers must be ready to leave their families and travel great distances at short notice. They must be ready to do without sleep for days on end, if necessary. Never must they drop their guard over the precious bag until its contents have been safely locked in the embassy safe at its destination.

In the old days Queen's Messengers had to ride vast distances on horseback and be quick on the draw to defend their bags. One rode 2,000 miles in two weeks across wild country to carry news of Napoleon's escape from Elba to the Persian government.

Messenger Sir Park Goff, traveling to Holland in World War I and knowing his ship would be intercepted by the Germans if it were known he were aboard, made the North Sea crossing nailed up in a big crate labeled "margarine."

Questions and Answers On Alcoholism

Editors Note: As a public service, the Gazette Telegraph will answer questions on Alcoholism and Problem Drinking in our region. Send all inquiries to to this newspaper. Answers will be supplied by G. L. McDougall, Director, Alcoholism Information Center, Out West Building, sponsored by the El Paso County Council on Alcoholism.

1. Q. What is Antabuse?

A. A medicine (disulfide) which when taken by an individual, renders him highly sensitive to alcohol.

2. Q. How does Antabuse work in the system?

A. Antabuse produces its effects by blocking an enzyme which is necessary for the breakdown of Acetaldehyde, an intermediate producer of alcohol metabolism.

3. Q. How is Antabuse given?

A. Orally, prescribed and administered under medical supervision.

4. Q. Can a person drink after taking Antabuse, and what are the consequences if he does?

A. If he does — he courts trouble. Antabuse is slowly excreted in the body so that the individual will be unable to drink alcohol in any form for at least 2 to 5 days after last intake of Antabuse. Accumulation of acetaldehyde in the body produce shock-like symptoms of alcohol-antabuse reaction.

5. Q. What reaction, exactly, does a person taking Antabuse get, when he partakes of alcohol?

A. Flushing, rapid pulse, congestion of eyeballs, salivation, dyspnea, violent headache, sense of apprehension, drop in blood pressure, weakness, dizziness, nausea, cyanosis, vomiting and sometimes unconsciousness.

6. Q. How soon after partaking of alcohol with Antabuse does this reaction occur?

A. It can occur within 24 hours after beginning of Antabuse. Starts usually five to twenty minutes after drinking as little as ½ to 1 ounce of whiskey and lasts from a few minutes to one to two hours. — can last up to six hours. Time of onset of reaction, its severity, and time duration depends on previous dose of Antabuse, length of time of its administration and amount of alcohol imbibed.

7. Q. How long should a patient take Antabuse?

A. Once prescribed, it should be continued as long as the patient needs it, which may be for a few months, or longer. Dr. Ruth Fox recommends about 2 years.

8. Q. Is Antabuse a cure for Alcoholism?

A. Antabuse could not possibly be considered a total therapy in itself. Its importance is in maintaining sobriety long enough to institute the deeper form of study and therapy necessary to arrest the disease. It is but the beachhead from which to launch the long and difficult battle.

Much Editing Can Be Done With Camera

By BART KINCH
United Press International

A good prescription for ailing home movies is to do much of your editing in the camera.

Some home moviemakers manage to salvage films marred by lack of continuity by carefully editing and titling after the movie has been shot. Too few realize they can accomplish much of this editing in the camera itself.

The formula basically is simple: Give some thought beforehand to how you can use your camera to tell a smartly paced and interesting story. Photograph activities in their natural sequence make imaginative use of natural titles and be careful about scene length.

Scene length depends on your subject. Some scenes only require three or four seconds. Others as much as 10 to 15 or longer. A general rule is to run your camera for as long as you would like to see the scene on your movie screen.

Titles are practically everywhere. Landscapes are dotted with prospective title material erected by states, municipalities, park commissions, historical societies and so on.

Ships' life preserves are good titles. So are names printed on airliners or trains. A child's blackboard, alphabet blocks, anagram letters or a newspaper headline all can be used for titling purposes.

Just get as close as your camera and the situation will permit and keep the bottom pressed as long as needed to read the printing slowly. No title should be longer than five seconds, however.

There are several tricks to get continuity into your movies. For example, whenever the setting is going to change from indoors to outdoors, end one scene with the subject going through a door.

If the setting is going to change between two scenes but will remain indoors or outdoors, merely let the subject walk right out of the picture area in one setting and, when you start the next scene, have the subject walk into the picture area.

Basically, though, nearly all the continuity you will ever need is built right into the activities that lend themselves to good home movies. It's just a matter of confining your movie-making to these activities and occasionally adding a few ideas that will provide the frosting.

Photo tips:

A fresh, clean sheet of facial tissues makes an excellent substitute for lens tissue if the latter is unavailable. It may leave some lint on the lens, but this can easily be brushed away with a camel's hair brush. The brush should also be used before wiping optical surfaces with the tissue to remove all loose foreign particles from the glass.

If there is any "secret" to getting good photographs of children, it is by letting them be themselves and not pose them. Be as unobtrusive as you can and avoid the use of flash if possible. Just let the children go their own way and keep shooting.

WEIGHT LIFTING IS EASY—Compared to the complicated organization of the suburban commercial division of the Pikes Peak United Fund, Lee Baker, left and John Stone find weight lifting in the Health Club at the YMCA a snap. The pair have already begun plans for the organization and solicitation of business in shopping centers and suburban areas during the United Fund campaign next Fall. Stone is executive secretary of the YMCA and Baker is vice president of the Board of Directors. The YMCA is partially financed by the United Fund. Another key source of finances comes from the Y's annual membership drive which is currently underway.

Lee Baker Named Commercial United Fund Head

Lee Baker, vice president of the Baker Realty Co., will head the Commercial Division of the Pikes Peak United Fund in its campaign next Fall, according to William L. Pfeiffer, campaign chairman.

A native of Colorado Springs and Board member of two United Fund agencies Baker accepted the campaign position because of his personal understanding of the need for another successful campaign. He succeeds Mrs. Jack Tober who utilized agency board members to man the division for the past two years. Since the organization of the United Fund in 1961, contributions from small businesses have doubled. Many are still considerably under the fair share scales accepted by the majority of corporations and industries in the region, according to Pfeiffer.

Baker is vice president of both the YMCA and Family Counseling Service. The latter agency is supported entirely by the United Fund while the YMCA receives approximately one fourth of its budget from this source. Part of the YMCA budget comes from its annual membership drive which is now underway.

Baker has served actively on a number of community projects and has been honored by the Board of Realtors of which he is a past president. He was named Realtor of the Year in 1961. He was awarded the Jaycee distinguished Service Award in 1960. He is past president of Pikes Peak Sertoma Club and Colorado Chapter of Property managers. Thru his service club he participated in the Down Town Division of each of the previous United Fund drives.

He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the official board of the First Methodist Church.

He attended both Colorado College and Colorado University and is now a member of the CC Athletic Board. His wife, Jeanne, is also a Colorado Springs native. They are the parents of two daughters, Janet, 15 and Sandra, 12. The family live at 425 East Fontanero Street.

CHEVELLE! MALIBU SUPER SPORTS by CHEVROLET

Background, new Chevelle Malibu Super Sport Coupe; foreground, Chevelle Malibu Super Sport Convertible.

What's so super about the Chevelle Malibu Super Sports?

Let's start with the inside. You get individually adjustable front bucket seats, soft, color-keyed leather-grain vinyl. Special instrumentation—ammeter, oil pressure and water temperature gauges. Bright metal console panel with either sporty 4-speed* stick shift or Powerglide* floor-mounted straight-line shift.

Under the hood? Lots of choice. Two Sixes—standard 120-hp and optional 155-hp*. Three V8's from the standard 283-cu.-in. job up to (you're reading it right!) 327-cu.-in.* Try this one to flatten out hills!

Some mighty appealing options*, too. Electric tachometer, Positraction rear axle, sintered metallic brake linings and sports-styled simulated walnut steering wheel, to name just a few of the many available.

Even the exterior says it's super—special moldings and emblems, special wheelcovers that define the highly maneuverable Chevelle 115-inch wheelbase. (Chevelle is smaller than the Jet-smooth luxury Chevrolet, bigger than the popular Chevy II, and fits beautifully in between them.)

Actually, about all that's not super about these Malibu SS Coupes and Convertibles is their price. And there's so much more to find out about them, the only right way to take it all in is to drive one. Your Chevrolet dealer can take care of that, too. *Optional at extra cost.

FEDERAL TAX TIPS

BY ROGER E. WARD
Administrative Representative
Internal Revenue Service

Itemizing your deductions for contributions, interest, taxes, medical expenses and other allowable deductions may save income tax. The allowance for these items when you use the short form or take the standard deduction is limited on your federal return to about 10 percent of your income and cannot exceed a maximum deduction of $1,000.00 on a joint return regardless of the amount of your income.

If you are sure that your personal deductions are less than the 10 per cent standard deduction there is no need to itemize your deductions. If you itemize your deductions these facts on contributions, interest and taxes may help you.

Contributions or gifts to religious, charitable, educational, scientific or literary organizations are deductible on your federal return up to 20 per cent of your adjusted gross income. This limitation is raised to 30 per cent if the extra 10 per cent is made to religious organizations, schools or hospitals.

If you make a gift of property instead of cash the amount of the contribution is the fair market value of the donated property at the time of the donation rather than your cost of the property. For example, if the fair market value of donated property is $200.00 and your cost is only $50.00 you are allowed a contribution deduction of $200.00 and you are not taxed on the difference of $150.00.

The value of services rendered to charitable organizations is not deductible as a contribution nor is the value of blood donations. Out-of-pocket unreimbursed expenses such as transportation, travel and telephone expenses incurred in rendering such service are deductible as contributions.

An individual is not allowed a contribution deduction for a pledge which is not paid during the tax year.

Individuals are not allowed to carry over unused or excess contribution deductions. Corporations are allowed to carry over contributions on their federal return.

Do not overlook any of the possible interest deductions allowable to you such as interest on a mortgage on your home, bank loans and personal loans. Interest is deductible in the year paid by cash basis taxpayer, thus interest for a period of more than the taxable year is deductible in the year paid. The "penalty" charge for prepayment of a mortgage is deductible as interest according to a recent ruling by the Internal Revenue Service.

Carrying charges representing interest on installment purchases are deductible. Evidence such as a statement from the seller should be obtained to show the amount of interest you paid during the year.

Property, sales, gasoline and auto license taxes are deductible on both federal and Colorado income tax returns. You are not allowed deductions for excise taxes such as the excise tax on automobiles, furs, jewelry and cosmetics. Taxes on cigarettes and liquor are not deductible.

Springs Area May Have 2,000 'Near-Geniuses'

There may be some two-thousand near-geniuses in the Colorado Springs area.

This estimate was made this week by a representative of the unique Mensa Society, which has members all over the world, and whose local representative is ceramic engineer Clem Hull, 2866 Merry Lane.

The uniqueness of the Mensa society is that its members must score on an intelligence test higher than 98 per cent of the general population. Its primary purpose is research in psychology and social science. It has members in 45 countries, although headquarters are in the U.S.

"We have members of almost every occupation," the Mensa society disclosed, "businessmen, clerks, doctors, editors, factory workers, farm laborers, housewives, policemen, lawyers, teachers, soldiers, scientists and students."

Hull explained that "Mensa" was chosen as the name for the society for the latin word of table. "We are a round-table society, where no one has special precedence. We fill a void for many intelligent people otherwise cut off from contact with good minds - contact that's important to them, but elusive in modern society. Besides an origin for many new friendships, Mensa provides its members with a receptive but critical audience on which to try out new ideas."

"Its most visible feature," Hull explained, "is its diversity. It recruits, not like other societies, by persuading people to think as they do, but by scientifically selecting people who are able to think for themselves."

The Mensa society, Hull explained, conducts a great deal of research, aided by its membership. Members usually hold meetings once a month, to discuss various questions, usually with a paper being read by one of the members at the meeting.

Hull is Colorado secretary for Mensa; and Air Force Maj. Bob Jensens (Ret.) of Denver is Colorado chairman for the group.

Hull explained that statistically there are about 2,000 persons in Colorado Springs who would score in the top two per cent on intelligence tests, and who thus would be eligible for membership in Mensa, or as the official title of the organization reads "American Mensa Selection Agency." Information may be obtained from Hull, at 63-3-9073, or by writing to the Mensa Society at P.O. Box 86, Gravesend Station, Brooklyn 23, N.Y.

Fremont County Office Scramble Takes Shape

With two county commissioner posts up for grabs in Fremont county this fall, the scramble for the offices has already taken shape with a flurry of hats being tossed into the ring by Democratic hopefuls.

Out to unseat two incumbent Republicans, Charlie McDaniel, commissioner from District 1 in Canon City, and Finis Parks, commissioner from district 3 in the west end of the county, are three Democrats who have announced their intentions of seeking the nomination. The final decision, of course, remains subject to the will of the party at the mid-summer conventions.

Latest to announce intentions of seeking the commissioner's post in District 3 are Democrats Denzel S. Goodwin, 40-year-old resident of Howard, and George Rupp, 44-year-old Kerr creek rancher. If these two candidates get the Democratic party nod at the convention they would battle it out in the primary to see who will lock horns with long-time incumbent, Finis Parks, at the November election.

McDaniel, incumbent Republican from Canon City and chairman of the board of county commissioners, is expected to seek his second term in office but has not yet made his formal announcement. However, William T. (Bill) Berry, prominent Canon City businessman for the past 20 years, has announced that he will oppose McDaniel if given the formal nod by the Democrats at the summer assembly.

Goodwin, a native of Pritchett, Colo., has lived in western Fremont county since 1946 and is a navy veteran of World War II. He is a farmer and rancher and president of the Fremont County Cattleman's association.

Goodwin has served as Democratic committee chairman in Precinct 39 and is a member of the Democratic central committee in the county. He is a member and past commander of Post No. 132, VFW, at Cotopaxie; a member of Canon City Elks No. 610; a member of the county's sheriff's posse, and has served eight years on the school board in his district. He is married and has three sons.

Rupp is married and has a daughter attending high school. He is active in ranching and has been employed by the county for nine years in the road maintenance department.

TV Operation Incongruous With Court Dignity

To my mind, commercial jingles, station breaks, and planning television cameras are incongurous with the dignity and solemnity of courtroom procedures," J. Edgar Hoover recently announced.

"Most Americans agree with the honored concept that no one is free" to obstruct or to contaminate the pure stream of justice." It is a remarkable tribute to our society that, in exercising the many freedoms we enjoy, the people have never lost sight of the need for a counterbalance of rights — the assurance that the practice of one right shall not infringe upon nor invade another.

"The administration of justice is one of the more basic constitutional guarantees. It must be allowed to proceed without obstruction from any source. Yet, an integral part of our way of life is the public's right to know. The obligation and privilege of keeping the public fully and promptly informed fall to the practitioners of another of our most cherished constitutional freedoms — freedom of the press.

"The framers of the Bill of Rights saw freedom of the press as a necessary prerequisite to effective democratic action. The true worth of this priceless safeguard has been proved time and again. Democracy, as we know it, could not exist without it. Lives of Americans, generation after generation, have been the richer for it.

"Even so, freedom of the press in its broadest and most liberal interpretation is not an unlimited and unrestrained right. From the beginning, responsible journalists, while acclaiming and enjoying press privileges, have always recognized their obligations to other free institutions.

"A free nation is a progressive nation. Over the years, progress in news reporting has kept pace with the rapid advance of our society. Now, thru the medium of television, the public's right to be informed may be accomplished "live and on the spot."

"This achievement, while greatly enhancing and widening the scope of press coverage, has created some new and provacative problems, particularly within the realm of our judicial processes. Some televised accounts of courtroom trials and other incidents bearing on individual rights raise the question of just where the public right stops and public curiosity commences.

"In the interest of fair judicial procedure, advocates of courtroom television may want to refer again to the ethical canons of both journalism and law. Otherwise, where the administration of justice is concerned it may be necessary to revise the popular Broadway slogan, "There's No Business Like Show Business," Hoover concluded.

Youth Activities Discussed at NJCL Meeting

By LYNN POOLE
The Johns Hopkins University

"Our youth now loves luxury. They have bad manners, contempt for authority, disrespect for older people. Children nowadays are tyrants. They no longer rise when their elders enter the room. They contradict their parents, chatter before company, gobble their food and tyrannize their teachers."

Such a statement infuriates every teenager and, personally, I don't blame them. In the public press, in magazines, on radio and television and in the home they are incessantly bombarded with the age-old ploy of, "What is this younger generation coming to?"

The statement above is a direct quote from that ill-tempered, crusty old philosopher of the 5th Century B.C. — Socrates. Pouncing on and berating the young has been a favorite pastime of adults for hundreds of centuries; adults strike out like vipers at the young who are going to inherit the chaos created by their elders.

In Baltimore's Walters art Gallery there is a handsome gravestone carved in bas-relief and painted in subdued, calming colors. Moving across one portion of the gravestone is a line of men wearing long skirts; below this is a line of younger men wearing short skirts. The older, conservative men wear the long skirts, but their sons wear the "new-fangled" short skirts, popular with the youth of that day.

The hieroglyphic writing states that the older men are disturbed about this younger generation and wondering what will become of the Egyptian nation when it falls into the hands of these addle-pated young people!

In modern times the Duke of Wellington struck out with a rapier-like tongue at the young, saying that he feared to think of the future when the activities of the country were placed in their hands.

One needs only to read and listen to discover that the conservative, atrophied minds of adults and their attitudes toward daring young people has not changed over the centuries.

I have talked with hundreds of young people and their first complaint is that their elders have now forgotten their own youth, want no change in the status quo, and are intolerant of their own children who themselves are finding their way thru new ideas.

Another valid complaint is that the public press and published periodicals give headlines and feature stories almost exclusively to juvenile delinquents and crimes of the most unsavory of our youthful population.

Thruout the country there are hundreds of thousands of young people taking part in exciting programs and activities, creating new ideas, developing new theories in small and large groups. One rarely hears about these because editors of daily, weekly and monthly publications say that this sort of activity is not news.

Recently I became interested in the National Junior Classical League, a group of high school students with 126,000 members each of whom is studying Latin. The local and state program of this group are exciting, full of dramatic flavor as well as indicative of a new trend among young people today. The NJCL annual national meeting is attended by nearly 2,000 teenagers from all over te United States. I was privileged to speak to this group at the 1963 convention, and was tremendously impressed with their mature attitudes and activities.

I attempted to interest several editors in publishing a story about the group. None was interested. One in fact, said "If one of the girls dressed as Dido gets raped by a toga let me know immediately!" This is a sad commentary on the atrophied editorial mind which is the place at which the fury of young people is aimed when they see the flamboyant, juvenile delinquent stores repeated over and over again.

Last week I was invited to speak to a group of young people. They know how much I applaud their daring to be different. They settled in for a long discussion in search of ways to overcome the "What is this younger generation coming to?"; and how to approach editors who are adamant against printing anything good about young people today.

The evening ended with no solution to the problem — but, these serious, thinking young people were still convinced that their new ways were right for their new ways were right for them.

I am convinced that our country is peopled with a younger generation whose ways are different — and undoubtedly better than their parents.

$170 Million Asked for In Highway Construction

Four hundred and thirty-five persons, representing 160 agencies from thruout the state, requested approximately $170 million worth of improvements to the State Highway System at the annual three-day meeting of the Colorado Highway Commission in Denver, Jan. 20-22.

Only six of the state's counties did not send delegations. In addition to the 57 counties represented, those appearing before the Commission included delegations from 55 cities and towns, members of highway associations, chambers of commerce, two Indian tribal councils, planning groups and members of the General Assembly.

Commission Chairman Pete Middlemist of Antonito said the Department of Highways will have approximately $66 million available for its construction budget in the fiscal year beginning next July 1. The Commission will prepare the new budget in May and will present it to Governor John A. Love by June 1.

Many of the counties asked the Commission to designate county roads as state highways, and Chairman Middlemist remarked: "All of the old requests for such designations appeared to have been renewed, and a number of new requests were made." No action was taken on these requests by the Commission.

The City of Denver asked for $11 million worth of improvements, the largest amount requested by any delegation, including the expenditure of $5,800,000 on Interstate 70 from the Valley Highway to Sheridan Boulevard on West 48th Avenue.

Many of the requests by municipalities reflected the pressing traffic problems in urban areas resulting from the increases in population and the number of registered motor vehicles. Other requests were simply for the paving of a few miles of state highway into somewhat isolated farming communities.

Chief Engineer Charles E. Shumate told the Navajo Tribal Council representatives that the Department expects to start construction within 60 to 90 days on the nine-mile spur which will lead from Colo. 40, near Four Corners, to the Utah border. This is part of the long sought road to the Aneth oil field area in southeast Utah. Representatives of the Tribal Council said that a $2,815,000 boarding school to accommodate 420 children will be completed near the Aneth Trading Post by Sept. 1.

Most of the Western Slope counties, and others lying along the Navajo Trail, pointed out that the completion of Colo. 40 to the Four Corners last year had resulted in a notable increase in tourist traffic. Discussions emphasized the increasing importance of the tourist industry to the state's economy.

Director Harry R. Woodward of the State Game, Fish and Park Department outlined plans which are under way to create a 70,000-acre recreation area in North Park. One lake already has been formed, he said, and the recreation area, as planned, would be one of the most extensive in the nation.

The Commission set its next regular meeting for Feb. 3.

Biochemical Defect May Cause High Blood Pressure

A higher than normal ratio of cadmium to zinc in the kidneys may be a factor in the development of high blood pressure, according to Dr. Henry A. Shroeder, Brattleboro, Vt.

A trace metal accumulating in an organ involved in the body's metabolism may be suspected of influencing the development of an age-linked disorder, such as hypertension, Dr. Schroeder wrote in the current Journal of the American Medical Association. Cadmium accumulated in the kidney with age, he said.

Since there are wide geographical variations in the concentration of cadmium, data on trace metals in human tissues in 10 U.S. cities and nine foreign countries were analyzed to determine if there was any correlation with the disease that caused death, Dr. Schroeder reported.

Mean individual ratios of cadmium to zinc were higher for persons dying of hypertension, including cerebral hemorrhage and hypertensive heart disease, than for those who died of accidents, arteriosclerotic heart disease, other cardiovascular diseases, or, in foreign subjects, malignant disease and chronic infections, the study showed.

"These results indicate that an elevated ratio of renal cadmium to zinc is found more frequently in persons dying of hypertensive causes than in persons dying of other major causes, and that this characteristic is usually, but not always, diagnostic of hypertension," Dr. Schroeder concluded. "That it occurs in subjects from several areas of the world whose mean renal cadmium differs, suggests that this alteration may act as an accessory factor in pathogenesis."

Because cadmium is believed to have a tendency to replace zinc, he added, a biochemical defect of the kidney contributing to high blood pressure may exist in those persons in whom the cadmium - zinc ratio is disturbed.

Dr. Schroeder is affiliated with the department of physiology Dartmouth Medical School, Hanover, N.H., and Brattleboro Retreat.

Farewell-to-Space Dinner Is Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Goodbye astronaut, hello politician.

That will be the background for a farewell-from-space dinner to be given astronaut John Glenn by his friends and officials in the Space Agency.

The Washington dinner next Tuesday will be an informal, nonpolitical affair without farewell gifts, a spokesman said.

Glenn has resigned from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to campaign in Ohio for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate.

Corporation Profits at Booming Rate for 1963

By JACK LEFLER

NEW YORK (AP)—Corporation profits rolled in at a booming rate in 1963.

This was evident during the week as many major companies reported big increases in earnings over 1962.

The once familiar cry of "profit squeeze" was heard only occasionally.

The surge in profits was expected to carry over into 1964 at an unabated pace.

Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon was particularly optimistic about the outlook.

"We ought to be able to move ahead steadily through this year and have one of the best years we have had, and that ought to continue into next year," he said.

"It looks like we will have three or four years of improvement, which is the best we have had in peacetime—ever."

His forecast was conditioned on passage of the $11-billion tax-cut bill which may be enacted by Congress next week.

The profit parade was led by General Motors Corp., the world's biggest manufacturer, which in 1963 had the highest earnings and sales of any corporation in history.

The No. 1 automaker earn $1,592,000,000, or $5.56 a share, on sales of $16.5 billion. The previous record was $1.52 billion by American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in the year ended last Nov. 30.

Burlington Line Income Shows Gain in '63

President Harry C. Murphy announced today that net income of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company for the year 1963 was $21,367,648. For the year 1962, net income was $20,412,904.

For both 1963 and 1962, net income results include tax benefits resulting from depreciation guide line lives and investment credit, Murphy said.

Operating revenues totalled $261,713,684 in 1963, compared to $263,434,537 in 1962. Expenses during 1963 were $208,555,126, and in 1962 were $207,899,086.

During the year, strongest traffic gains were in the categories of coal and coke, up 10 per cent; sugar, up 12 per cent; forwarder freight, up 9 per cent; and canned goods, up 6½ per cent.

The year was the 102nd of consecutive dividend payment, Murphy said.

All of the major auto companies have reported higher earnings for 1963.

It was a good year, too, for the steel industry. The top producer, U.S. Steel Corp., earned $202,913,826, or $3.28 a share, against $163,639,817, or $2.56 a share, in 1962. However, Chairman Roger Blough said the percentage of profit to sales wasn't satisfactory.

Bethlehem, Jones & Loughlin, National Steel, Armco, Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Pittsburgh Steel also came in with favorable earnings reports.

Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) entered for the first time the select circle of companies with profit of $1 billion or more. The company earned $1,015,000,000 or $4.68 a share, up from $840,900,000, or $3.88 a share, in 1962.

The cost of living took an unusual step higher in December. It was only the third time in the last 10 years that the consumer price index had risen in December.

The Labor Department said higher vegetable and sugar prices were mainly responsible for pushing the over-all living costs up two-tenths of 1 per cent over November.

The index advanced to 107.6, meaning that it took $10.76 to buy items that in the 1957-59 base period cost $10.

President Johnson asked Congress to make it possible for workers in selected industries to receive double pay for overtime as a means of widening employment opportunities.

The idea was to encourage industry to spread employment, rather than pay overtime for work at peak seasons.

Automobile production during the week was estimated at 160,900 cars, down from 178,471 the previous week but up from 151,172 a year ago.

MANCHESTER—Fire rescue squads were called recently when an English school boy trapped himself in a chimney while playing hide and seek.

House of Pancakes Opening Scheduled Saturday Noon

Grand opening ceremonies of the 72nd restaurant in the interchain will be held Saturday at 12 o'clock at Southgate Shopping Center.

Mayor Harry W. Hoth will preside at a ribbon cutting ceremony at that time. Other officials participating in the ceremony will include Ray Marshall, president of the Southgate Merchants Association, H. C. Gerber, president of the Southgate State Bank, William B. Brown, Jr., of Denver, president of Colorado International House of Pancakes, Inc., and Raymond V. Holwell, Jr., also of Denver, vice president of the organization.

Lewis P. Scifo is manager of the new Colorado Springs restaurant.

The Southgate House of Pancakes is the second unit to be opened in Colorado in the past 11 months. Its unique style of architecture, with the blue roof, is the identifying mark of International House of Pancake units which are to be found on highways and in shopping centers in 15 states in the United States and in Japan.

The Colorado operations are owned and operated by Brown, a 38-year-old mining engineer, and Holwell, a real estate man for the past 15 years.

Brown graduated from the Missouri School of Mines and obtained the Colorado, Wyoming and western Nebraska area franchise from the parent company in 1962. Holwell negotiated the Southgate lease with John McCready of Mortgage Investments Co., Denver.

Preparation of IHP's pancake batters is handled by the firm's commissary laboratories in California. All outlets in the firm's operation are operated in the same manner; the breakfast menu in Chicago is the same as in Hollywood.

Every product served by the restaurant chain is tested and approved by the home office laboratory. The 21 varieties of pancake mixes are packaged in California and shipped to the various locations. All meat products must meet company standards.

Pancakes aren't the only bill of fare on the menu. There are steaks, six types of hamburgers labeled by name for the countries they represent, and egg dishes ranging from sunny-side ups to the country steak combination. The house also serves fried chicken, fish dinners and salads. Small portions for children are featured.

The first IHP restaurant was opened in Burbank-North Hollywood, Calif. in 1958. By 1961 there were 26 units and today, 72. Another outlet will be opened in Littleton in the spring, with plans for three more in Colorado by this time in 1965.

The business is open now. Hours are Sunday through Thursday, 7 a.m. to 12 midnight; Friday and Saturday, 7 a.m. to 2 a.m.

EXPOSURE TO TUBERCULOSIS

At one time, the victim of tuberculosis was treated like a leper. Either he was rushed to a sanatorium or, if home care was to be given, he was isolated completely and the family member who attended him wore a mask and gown. The use of the antituberculosis drugs has much to do with changing this pattern, as they can make the patient virtually noninfectious within a short time.

This disease is less contagious than many other infections and prolonged exposure is needed to pass it along. This does not apply to arrested cases or to infants. These two groups are much more susceptible.

The percentage of infected droplets in the room of an individual with active disease also is important. According to Dr. Ross L. McLean of Atlanta, studies show that "the concentration of infective bacilli in contaminated air is approximately one unit of contagion per 12,500 cubic feet air." This is equal to the amount that an attendant inhales going in and out of a ward over a period of a year.

In other words, there is only a slight risk in breathing the air in a room where an active case exists, if done for a short period. The danger increases with longer exposure. This explains why the incidence of tuberculosis is high in crowded, poorly ventilated surroundings.

The causative bacteria are expelled when the victim coughs, laughs, sneezes, and talks. This spray surrounds the victim with an aerial envelope of contation. In the past, those with active lesions were isolated for this reason but we now know the envelope contains too few infecting agents to require rigid segregation.

There are ways of reducing the number of bacilli below the level at which a visitor or attendant is likely to contract tuberculosis. The first is to ventilate the room by opening doors and windows, to blow out the contaminated air.

With this in mind, we might say the visitors benefited more than the patients from the old open air—sun treatment of a generation ago. The use of ultraviolet radiation is the second means of disinfecting the air, and treatment with the antituberculosis drugs is the third.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self - addressed envelope is enclosed.

Sinus Disorders

J. N. writes: Can sinus disease be present without a discharge?

Reply

Sinus infections usually cause a discharge unless the sinus openings are blocked by swollen nasal membranes or polyps. This is painful and, unless distress is present, it is unlikely that sinus disease exists if there is no discharge.

We May Escape

L. P. writes: Do you know whether the public health people are anticipating a flue epidemic this winter?

Reply

Not a widespread epidemic according to the latest reports. But local epidemics may take place.

Eczema

S. M. writes: Are most cases of eczema chronic?

Reply

Not in my opinion. I say this because the term, eczema, is used loosely and some skin disorders of this type are chronic whereas others are temporary or come and go.

Count Your Calories

Mrs. W. writes: How can a woman lose weight during the change of life?

Reply

By eating less and not feeling sorry for herself. Too many resort to consolation eating at this time.

Wall of Fire Used By Bandit in Texas

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — A bandit used a wall of fire to aid his getaway after robbing a supermarket of $10,000 Friday.

Police said the gunman poured gasoline on a pathway between the store and another building before he entered the store.

Upon leaving with the money, officers said, he dropped a match into the gasoline, then ran down the street.

Store manager Lewis Swan said the flames kept pursuers from following the gunman.

An Illinois field goal attempt backfired last season and Harold Wells of Purdue picked up the pigskin and dashed 62 yards for a touchdown.

Elected Judges Provision May Be Included

By STEPHEN M. AUG

DENVER (AP) — Provisions for elected full, half and quarter-time county judges would be included in a revision of the proposed statewide court overhaul program.

The revised measure was made necessary after the Colorado Supreme Court struck down a provision in the current court overhaul proposal that allowed full-time county judges to appoint part-time associates. The legislature had asked the high court to rule on the measure.

The court said that under the state constitution all county judges — no matter on what basis they serve — must be elected. But the court left one way open for appointive posts.

Sen. Carl W. Fulghum, R-Glenwood Springs, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said Justice O. Otto Moore told him that referees — or masters — may be appointed.

But a proposal to use referees meeting of the Senate and House judiciary committees. They decided that, since a referee's decision must be approved by a county judge, this would be an inadequate solution to the problem.

They decided instead that there would be a system of county judges classified in three ways: county judges on a full-time basis, half-time associate judges and quarter-time assistant judges. All would be elected on a county-wide basis.

The legislature would set up the number of such judges in each county and would decide on the location of the courts in which they will serve.

Representatives of the Colorado County Commissioners Association were asked to poll their members to determine the number of judges they require, the location of the courts and the amount of time the judges would have to be on the bench.

Legislative Council staff members and legal experts confer this weekend to draft the legislation. One staff official said he believes the suggested system would be in conformity with a constitutional provision requiring the election of county judges.

He added that a draft of the legislation would include a prototype of the proposal which would be necessary to cover each county, the prototype would deal with Larimer County in which the committee has suggested that there be one full-time judge at Fort Collins and a part-time judge at Loveland or Estes Park.

Also suggested in committee was a proposal for a third judge in Boulder County. One judge would serve in Boulder, another at Longmont and a third would take in Broomfield, Lafayette and Louisville.

$150,000 Awarded For Dripping Liquid

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Watching dripping liquid from bottles broken in a collision of two trucks caused him psychological injuries, one truck driver contended, and a jury awarded him $150,000 damages.

Jack Newby, 24, of Warren, Mich., won the judgment from Inter-City Trucking Service Inc. of Detroit for a collision in March, 1961.

Newby's attorney, Walter Guth, said that, as a teen-ager, Newby had seen two persons burn to death in a wrecked car on the Ohio Turnpike. Soda pop sent dripping in the collision of Newby's truck reminded him of gasoline dripping from the death car, Guth contended.

Penn State will play four home football games next fall and its home opener on Sept. 19 will be against Roger Stoubach and Navy.

Education Can Be a Business Expense

By Charles W. Shoeneman
Written for Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

In addition to the expenses for which you are not reimbursed by your employer, you can claim certain other business expense deductions simply because you are in the trade or business of being an employe.

These are entered under "other deductions" on Page 2 of your return.

An employe may also carry on his own separate business and qualify for business expense deductions in his own right. In one recent case, the Tax Court ruled that a full-time supervisory employe of an aircraft company was engaged in conducting a separate business in his basement as a free lance inventor of fish lures. In fact, the court allowed the employe a business loss deduction.

But suppose a taxpayer is only an employe and conducts no separate business. What is he entitled to deduct other than certain travel, meals, lodging and transportation for which he is not reimbursed? One item is certain expenses of education.

Education expenses are deductible by an employe if the education is undertaken primarily for the purpose of either (a) maintaining or improving skills required in his employment, or (b) meeting the express requirements of his employer, or other legal conditions to the retention by the employe of his salary, status or employment. (However, the education cannot be required as a minimum requirement for the employe's being employed.)

The key factor in application of these tests for many persons is that under the "maintaining or improving" test, the employe presumably must show only that the education was required by him in his employment. The education need not be required by his employer.

* * *

A recent case recognized this factor in allowing an employe (engineering aide) to deduct his night school tuition in view of the fact he did not go to school with the intention of obtaining a new or better position.

Must such education be customary for a person in the employe's position or among his associates to be deductible? A recent Tax Court case said "no" even though the IRS argued that such a factor was important. However, there must be some connection between the education and the employe's job to be deductible.

Furthermore, the IRS rules that you must be currently employed (or engaged in a business or profession) to deduct education expenses. If not, you may not deduct the cost of schooling to prepare to resume employment, etc. If you go to school during a vacation or temporary leave of absence from your employment, you can deduct the expense of school only if there is a firm understanding that you will return to your employment at the end of such absence.

Drinks Give Driver False Confidence

The person who takes even an occasional alcoholic beverage at the social occasions is misled by the "feeling of confidence" one or two drinks may give him.

'He thinks he can drive as well, or perhaps even better than he could before he had a drink," according to Duke Wo Dunbar, chairman, Colorado Highway Safety Council. "Yet the facts are otherwise — and most social drinkers are tragically unaware of these facts."

Using three volunteers who were a 45-year old former sports car racer, a 26-year old former college athlete, and a 26-year old secretary, the men had three strong drinks of two ounces of 100 proof bourbon each. The woman had two drinks, consuming a total of four ounces of bourbon.

"The movements of the subjects were adversely affected by the liquor. This resulted in making turns too wide or too short, and hitting the brakes harder or softer than necessary.

The driver failed to see in time or at all, emergency traffic situations which they had properly recognized and correctly reacted to earlier. They became careless in overlooking use of seat belts, signalling for turns and use of rear view mirrors," the attorney general pointed out.

After their two or three drinks, the volunteers consistently were late in braking and in their steering reactions, and failed to maintain proper speeds.

Visual tests told a similar story of physical impairment. In every case visual perception was reduced by drinking. Especially affected was depth perception or distance judgment, which was most notably decreased in the oldest volunteer.

Widefield High Windup

By CINDY HUTTER

Information about a student exchange program for seniors was handed out in American Problems classes on January 28. Student council members handled the passing out of the information and will also collect it. The exchange program was set up by the Pikes Peak League Student Council. Senior Claude Burke and junior Donna Knight represent Widefield at the league council.

The Widefield High School Drill Team members presented a half time routine at the Widefield vs Harrsion basketball game held on Jan. 23. A WHS baton twirler, junior Donna Gahierty, entertained the crowd with a twirling duet. Her partner in the act was a Harrison High School baton twirler.

Widefield's Student Council handed out the 1964 Student Directory free of charge to WHS students as they entered the gymnasium for a pep assembly on January 23. Student typists were paid by the council to type the directory. Members of the 1963-64 council are President, senior Larry Rawlinson; Vice president, junior Francis Holzinger; Secretary - Treasurer, senior Cindy Hutter; senior class vice president, Claude Burke; senior representatives Carey Gomez and Bill Bangs; junior class vice president John Henke; junior representatives Cande Korbelick and Donna Knight; sophomore class vice president Jerry Magno; sophomore representatives Steve Rhodes and Dick Hoffman. The directory is an accumulation of names, addresses and phone numbers of every student registered at WHS.

Defense Chiefs To Meet Here This Week

Army air defense chiefs whose missile units help shield "target" centers from Thule, Greenland, to Key West at the southern tip of Florida, and from coast to coast, will meet in Colorado Springs Tuesday and Wednesday.

The ARADCOM Commanders' Conference was called by Lt. Gen. Charles B. Duff, commanding general of the Army Air Defense Command, for a review of the operations, readiness, and effectiveness of the nationwide command, which is the Army component of the North American Air Defense Command.

The Commanders' Conference is Gen. Duff's first periodic meeting with his five region commanders. Also present will be six Army air defense artillery brigade commanders, ARADCOM liaison officers to various Army major commands, and Maj. Gen. Tom V. Stayton, the commanding general of the Army Air Defense Center, Fort Bliss, Tex.

Region commanders scheduled to attend are Maj. Gen. John T. Snodgrass, 1st Region, ARADCOM, with headquarters at Ft. Totten, N. Y.; Maj. Gen. James R. Winn, 2nd Region, Richards-Gebaur AFB, Mo.; Maj. Gen. Robert A. Hewitt, 5th Region, Fort Sheridan, Ill.; Maj. Gen. Mervyn M. Magee, 6th Region, Ft. Baker, Calif.; and Brig. Gen. Robert H. Adams, 7th Region, McChord AFB, Wash. Gen. Snodgrass of 1st Region will be accompanied by his deputy, Brig. Gen. Bernard S. Waterman.

The commanders and other conferees will be meeting with Gen. Duff and key members of his ARADCOM headquarters staff, headed by Maj. Gen. D. B. Johnson, deputy commanding general; Brig. Gen. Howard E. Michelet, deputy chief of staff for plans and operations; Brig. Gen. Kenneth I. Curtis, assistant chief of staff, G-3 (Operations and Training); and Col. Dallas F. Haynes, deputy chief of staff for administration and logistics.

The periodic commanders' meetings are held for a general exchange of views and a look at developments affecting the operations of Nike and Hawk guided missile units deployed in the defense of critical cities and bases against air attack. The meetings are sometimes held in Colorado Springs and occasionally at region headquarters thruout the nation.

The conference will open Tuesday morning with a welcoming statement by General Duff. Gen. John K. Gerhart, commander-in-chief, NORAD, will also speak at the first session.

The American Automobile Association was founded in 1902.

Korean General Scheduled for AFA Visit

Lt. Gen. Sun Whan Chang, chief of staff of the Korean Air Force, is scheduled to visit the Air Force Academy Feb. 13.

Gen. Chang is being accompanied on his tour of U.S. service installations by Brig. Gen. Man Ho Ock, commander of the Korean AF 10th Fighter Wing.

The Korean chief of staff will be met at the Academy by the Superintendent, Maj. Gen. Robert H. Warren. He will receive a briefing on the mission and educational and military training programs, tour the academic area, and lunch with the Cadet Wing staff in Mitchell Hall.

Gen. Chang will also receive a plaque commemorating his visit to the Academy.

A veteran flyer, Gen. Chang was one of the first 10 pilots assigned to the Korean Air Force upon its establishment. He also served as air attache in Washington, D. C., prior to being named chief of staff in 1962.

The third report meeting will be February 7th with the final report on February 13th. More than 150 volunteer workers are taking part in the drive.

RELAXED PATIENT CARE — Is explained to Mrs. Eva Eskanos, 1429 N. Foote Ave. Mrs. Eskanos was one of the first patients able to take advantage of the home-like surroundings of the new patient care unit on the 12th floor of Penrose Hospital. Reviewing the program with Mrs. Eskanos is Mrs. Monahan, head nurse for the unit.

NEW ROOM—Typical of the rooms in the new patient care center on 12th floor of Penrose Hospital is this large, light, airy room which overlooks the city of Colorado Springs.

New Type Patient Care Begun at Penrose

A type of patient care, believed to be unique in the Pikes Peak Region, was begun Jan. 13, at Penrose Hospital. This new nursing unit is on the 12th floor, formerly used as living quarters by the Sisters. The purpose behind this specialized type of service is to satisfy the need for medical and surgical beds in the intermediate care areas.

The service will be provided in a home-like atmosphere, all private and two-bed rooms each with a desk, large wardrobe, private bath and telephone. There is a lounge, complete with fireplace, piped in music and facilities for family style dining, or if preferred, meals may be taken in the privacy of the patient's room.

The specialized care on this new floor will be of a transitional nature, with both surgical and medical convalescent patients being able to avail themselves of the unit.

Patients coming to the hospital for diagnostic studies will also be able to use the area. Patients admitted to this floor usually will be ambulant, and will require a varying amount of nursing care.

An example of the type patient that might be transferred to this new unit would be the recovering cardiac patient.

The physician would have the patient transferred, medications would be continued and the patient could be followed by the health team until such time as it was determined safe to allow him to leave the hospital.

In order to facilitate preparation of the 12th floor, the Sisters gave up their living quarters last July and moved to the third floor of the Margery Reed Nurses Residence. Since that time many changes have taken place, in order to prepare the floor as a patient service unit. All rooms on the west side open to a balcony with a beautiful view of Pikes Peak and the front range.

To insure patient safety, yet retain the view, a decorative iron grille was erected. A patient-to-nurse call system with call lights was installed in each room.

During original hospital construction oxygen and suction outlets were provided in each room, a Lamson tube station was installed, and a carrier for supplies from central service.

Elevator service may be obtained at the central bank or in the new cars on the north end. For fast service in ordering diets or additional food a telautograph was placed in the floor kitchen and connected to the master set in the main diet office.

All furniture for the nurses station and medicine room was manufactured in the hospital carpenter and sheet metal shops.

In making this announcement, the hospital spokesman stated "It is hoped that this relaxed, home-like atmosphere, so long recommended by nursing educators and others interested in patient care, will prove effective as an aid to rapid recovery of the patient."

Driver Point System May Be Tightened

More Colorado drivers can expect to have their licenses suspended, and certain violators who continue driving under suspension or revocation will face mandatory jail sentences, if two bills pending before the General Assembly are enacted into law, the Rocky Mountain AAA Club reported this week.

Under one bill that has already been favorably reported out of a Senate committee, drivers would no longer get a "clean slate" each time the license is renewed.

Proposed changes would permit suspension of a driver's license where the driver accumulates 12 points within any 12-month period or accumulates 18 points within any consecutive 24 months.

Under the present system, explained the auto club, a driver whose birth anniversary occurs during the accumulation of points might escape suspension even tho 12 points is amassed within a month or even within a week.

Further, the bill would assess the points effective as of the date of the violation rather than as of the date of conviction. However, no points would be assessed until after conviction and, as now, no suspensions would be ordered until after a hearing. Some drivers now, said the auto club, are escaping suspension by having trials postponed until point assessments can no longer be added to past points.

Introduced in the House, a second bill affecting drivers would require judges to assess jail sentences upon a conviction of driving under suspension or revocation, where that driver had had his license taken away for either driving under the influence or for hit-and-run driving. Under the present law, a judge is permitted to assess only a fine if he so desires, said the auto club.

Dismal Weather Forecast for Coming Month

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Inclement weather and mild temperatures prevailed over most of the country Saturday, the first day of the primrose month, as the U.S. Weather Bureau issued a dismal forecast in the wake of a relatively mild January.

Hazardous driving conditions were common for northeastern New York and for most of New England. Light snow mixed with sleet and freezing rain fell, and gale warnings were displayed along the coast.

Rain dampened the area from the Carolinas northward into Pennsylvania and Michigan. Rain also fell through the Ohio and Tennessee Valleys.

The far Northwest had rain from Washington to northern California, and snow spread inland through the interior.

Fog shrouded much of the Midwest. In Chicago a motorist driving in zero visibility struck and killed a youth riding a bicycle.

Clear skies and unseasonably warm temperatures prevailed from the far Southwest through the Rocky Mountains and Plains states.

January bowed out Friday on an unseasonably mild note. But the U.S. Weather Bureau had dismal news concerning February, which wasn't even included in the first Roman calendar.

The Weather Bureau said in its 30-day forecast that February will be colder than normal in most portions of the country and that precipitation probably will be greater than usual on the Atlantic seaboard.

The proverbial groundhog is supposed to emerge from its burrow Sunday to look for his shadow. If the sun is shining and the groundhog can see his shadow, he goes back to sleep for a while and winter is not over. But if the animal cannot see his shadow, springtime activities begin.

The other motorist, Curtis E. Bland, 35, escaped injury. Both drivers live in La Junta.

The death raised Colorado's 1964 highway death toll to 25 compared with 30 by this date last year.

Amateurs Warned of Rocketeering Hazards

Amateur rocketry is a fascinating and exciting hobby, but it can also be dangerous —even deadly.

In their space age experiments, amateur rocketeers are literally "playing with dynamite," warned the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies.

Carelessness in the handling of rockets and their propellants by non-professionals has run up a toll of death and injury for both rocketeers and spectators.

A survey of rocket accidents occurring during a six weeks period, conducted by the National Fire Protection Association, showed four persons were killed and 86 were injured, most of them in the 13 to 16 year age group.

A 13-year-old was killed when he and some friends tried to convert an empty carbon dioxide cartridge into a rocket.

A 24-year-old laboratory technician for a chemical company was carrying liquid fuel in a glass jug for use in his home rocket experiments. It blew up and burned much of the flesh off his hands and arms.

In another instance, a 17-year-old high school senior was critically burned by an experiment in the basement laboratory in his home. His mother said he was working on a rocket and police found chemicals used in amateur rocketry at the scene. The boy suffered third degree burns over 75 per cent of his body. The explosion tore out an eight foot section of brick in the house.

Thomas N. Boate, manager of the accident prevention department of the ACSC, described interest in rocketry as commendable and urged that it should be encouraged and constructively guided. But he warned that the activites of non-professional space age enthusiasts — particularly among the teenage missilemen — are not yet adequately regulated and controlled. He emphasized the need for extreme caution and close supervision by qualified personnel in all cases where experimentation progresses to the stage of fuel development or actual firing of rockets.

The ACSC accident prevention department, which regularly investigates and reports on potentially dangerous new activities or techniques, suggested these measures intended to eliminate uncontrolled experimentation:

1 — Hazards should be publicized thru the news media, thru youth and parent groups and thru schools.

2 — Merchants should discourage, insofar as possible, the purchase by minors of materials known to be used in rocket fuels.

3 — Parents should make certain that their children are not experimenting with explosives without adequate supervision.

4 — Actual rocket firings should be restricted to designated firing ranges under the direction of qualified persons who are familiar with the hazards involved.

5 — Youth rocket clubs and amateur rocket groups should register with qualified organizations such as the American Rocket Society and should regularly report their activities for appraisal before experimentation or firings take place.

6 — School administrators, individuals should acquaint themselves with recognized local rocket groups so that experimenters, inquiring about their own rocket experiments, can be directed to such groups for advice and guidance.

What makes amateur rocketry so dangerous?

There are three basic reasons, according to Boate:

First, a rocket propellant is a chemical mixture which has to be handled with great care. Heating it, grinding it, or sometimes merely shaking it can detonate it like TNT. Deaths and serious accidents have occurred when propellants detonated while being mixed on the workbench.

Second, a rocket propellant within a rocketcase is literally a bomb unless both are properly designed. Even a safe propellant in a badly assigned rocket case can explode the rocket and scatter shrapnel like a bursting artillery shell.

Third, the rocket itself is a projectile. It can move at such speed that it can readily kill. A good deal of aerodynamic knowledge is needed to design and make a rocket that will fly where it is supposed to fly.

Boate stated:

"The amateur rocketeer often uses sophisticated explosives in amounts which in industry call for technical equipment and training for safe handling.

"Fuels being compounded as propellants can be compared in energy value to high explosives. Pound for pound, some of the fuels have more energy than TNT.

"They all ignite readily, burn or explode violently with the evolution of intense heat and can build up high pressure when confined. They definitely are not materials to be handled indiscriminately by either children or adults."

Great Decisions Study Groups Will Form Soon

"Great Decisions" study groups will be forming on a nationwide basis beginning in February. "Great Decisions" is a series of eight topics in international affairs prepared in booklet form. Each topic is of concern to all Americans, particularly from the standpoint of what U.S. foreign policy should be. Groups of interested individuals study the topics, meet and discuss the information, and then submit opinion ballots which are tabulated and forwarded to Congressmen and the State Department.

Colorado Springs residents may participate by the following simple steps: first invite six to twelve interested persons to meet once a week, once a month, or at any convenient interval; second, buy Fact Sheet Kits for $1.50 which contain an introductory booklet, eight Fact Sheets, Opinion Ballots and other information.

The Fact Sheet Kits are available at the C.U. Extension Center 1105 N. Nevada. Step three is to check the suggested schedule and set a time and place for the first meeting. Step four is to distribute the Fact Sheet Kits ahead of time so that the discussion participants will have time to read the first Fact Sheet.

Topics for Great Decisions 1964 are: World Communism Today, France and The West, Egypt and the Middle East, Disarmament, Castro's Cuba, Indonesia, Foreign Aid, and Ideological Warfare.

SHAKERS IN WEST

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — Pleasant Hill, Ky., was the first western Shaker village and purportedly the first town in Kentucky to have a waterworks. The Pleasant Hill Shaker community was the largest settlement of that religious sect with the exception of the group's main headquarters at New Lebanon, N.Y.

De Gaulle May Not Find Much Red China Trade

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

LONDON (AP)— If President Charles de Gaulle had consulted Sir Alec Douglas-Home before recognizing Red China, Britain's prime minister probably would have told him.

"Go ahead, it makes sense. We'd do the same if the situation arose again because we think we were right. The Chinese ought not to be isolated. But don't expect wonders in your trade and other relations."

Britain's own trail-blazing act of recognition by a Labor government in 1950 aroused perhaps even more criticism from the United States and allies than De Gaulle's move last Monday.

Fourteen years of stiffly correct dealings since then have failed to warm the British-Chinese relationship. No obvious rewards have come to this country. And to this day only partial diplomatic ties have been established.

Britain's trading and political links with China go back 260 years. Oldtime merchant-adventurers pioneered the silk-and-spice route eastward in the early 18th century, forming a tradition that was at once romantic and profitable. By 1950, they had built up a commercial stake in China valued at about a billion dollars.

There never was much hope in London that those investments would be treated better than Communist interets allowed, with or without recognition. Within two years most of the great British merchant houses, or "hongs," withdrew, shut down, leased or transferred their operations.

Presence of a British diplomatic mission in Peking, nevertheless, kept alive the chance that London still might win back its share of the once-lush China market. Traders have been preoccupied with that possibility ever since. To a degree they have succeeded.

In 1947, when Gen. Chiang Kai-shek still controlled the mainland, the grand total volume of British Commonwealth trade with China was valued at $440 million. By 1962 it had risen to about $712 million, much of it purchases of grain and other emergency food supplies.

No balance sheet could accurately show if the sum total of advantages exceeds the disadvantages derived from Britain's recognition of Red China. Or vice versa. The reason is that some of the chief gains and losses are intangible.

On the credit side:

—Peking may well have withheld action against Hong Kong because of British recognition. The island-colony acquired by Britain in 1842 still functions as a vital clearing-house for China trade, as a port of call for the great shipping lines, as a window looking onto the mainland and as a living reminder to the Chinese of what life is like in the outside world.

—Peking's every link with the non-Communist world may well have helped to lessen China's over-all reliance on the Soviet Union. The British have long argued that to isolate the Chinese from the ebb and flow of world opinion would also be to limit the interplay of Chinese-Soviet differences. The fact of the Peking-Moscow split was in no way influenced by recognition but British and other Western and neutral diplomats have been able to study its development and manifestations firsthand from the Chinese side and so form their own assessmen of an event crucial to the evolution of Western policy.

—Peking provides the British with a chance to transact unseen business with the Chinese which sometimes is vital even to the Americans. Thus the British helped negotiate the release of American fliers and other citizens jailed by the Chinese. And they periodically have transmitted explanations of Western policies which, if they had been misunderstood, might well have led to nasty blowups.

On the debit side:

—London's recognition of Peking over the years has been a festering source of argument with Washington. These differences, stemming from conflicting approaches to the China question, occasionally have led to crisis. Among them: the pressures of some U.S. leaders for military action against Red China during the Korean War and for intervention in Indochina in 1954.

—London's acceptance of the Communists as the lawful (de jure) not mercly the effective (de facto) rulers of China did not encourage Peking to set up full diplomatic relations. Each country is still represented in the other's capital only by a charge d'affaires, below the status of an ambassador.

Peking went out of its way to underplay the importance of British recognition. It was four years before the Chinese sent an envoy to London. It took about as long for the Chinese foreign minister to deign even to receive Britain's representative. The Chinese explain they are waiting for the British to pull their one consul out of Nationalist China. London declines to do so.

Weighing all these things, the British still insist they do not n gnkz iPhietei etgnogreretsr regret recognizing the Peking regime—just as they think they are right in 1964 to urge that Red China be brought into the United Nations.

Bullet Which Killed Evers Mutilated

By BILL CRIDER

Jackson, Miss. (AP) — An FBI ballistic expert told a jury today that the bullet that killed Medgar Evers, a Negro civil rights leader, was so mutilated it was impossible to say definitely which gun it came from.

Richard Poppleton of Washington testified for the prosecution at the trial of Byron De La Beckwith, charged with murdering Evers.

The state contends the Negro leader was killed by a sniper armed with a 30.06 Enfield rifle found at the scene.

Poppleton said in his opinion the bullet was fired from the rifle in evidence by the prosecution, but added that "the microscopic markings were not sufficient for me to say it came from one particular gun."

Earlier, Poppleton testified that the rifle found near Evers' home was the same gun another witness said he traded to Beckwith.

Beckwith, a 43-year-old fertilizer salesman from Greenwood, Miss., faces a possible sentence of death in the gas chamber if convicted of last summer's slaying of Evers. Beckwith has pleaded innocent.

Poppleton said microscopic examinations matched test-fired cartridge cases with 30 cartridge cases fired in the gun before it was traded to Beckwith four years ago.

McCleary has directed the minstrel show for several years.

Local Symphony And Students to Present Concerts

The Colorado Springs Symphony Orchestra, joined by thirty high school music students, will present two concerts for pupils at Wasson High School on Wednesday, Feb. 5, followed by two programs at Palmer High.

These concerts for the students have been made possible thru the proceeds of the minstrel show which was presented last year by the Colorado Springs Lions Club.

Students from the Air Force Academy High School will join the Wasson student body for the programs on Feb. 5. Also attending the Palmer High School Cheyenne Mountain and St. Mary's.

Walter Eisenberg, conductor of the symphony orchestra, has designed a program of contemporary music, including such favorites as Bernstein's "West Side Story" and Gershwin's "American in Paris." Featured in several of the numbers are student musicians who have been selected from the five participating school. Rehearsals of these students have been directed by Nick Rossi of the Wasson music faculty.

Altho the symphony and the local school system have cooperated for several years in a program of youth concerts, this year marks the first time in which the Lions Club has, thru their major contribution, provided the high school concerts with the full orchestra.

The equipment which included saddle-type blankets, ropes, spurs and bridles was stored in a small shed on the property and was there Jan. 26.

One of the saddles is stamped with the name "Dick Harmon, Golden, Colo." and is colored tan with an off-white sear. The other is a full-carved roping saddle with the name "Macks Saddlery" stamped on it.

All-Girl Band Easy on Eyes

By DICK KLEINER

NEW YORK (NEA) — An all girl orchestra somehow suggest slight illicitness, like teetotalers cooking with wine. But that illusion is shattered by the latest all-girl orchestra, which has mostly college girls and a trombonist who doubles as den mother.

Joan Fairfax and her All-Girl Orchestra blew into town with 12 musicians, a gorgeous blonde leader and a 1 p.m. curfew on nights off. When news of the curfew reaches the boys of Local 802, it could be the largest laugh since the last time someone put sneezing powder in a tombone.

But Miss Fairfax thinks the curfew (administered by the honor system) is necessary.

"I feel responsible," she says, "to the parents of my girls."

This responsibility stems from the origins of the orchestra. It began as Miss Fairfax lay in the sun outside her Englewood Cliffs, N. J., home, between singing engagements.

"The idea just came to me," she says. "I thought that the time was ripe for another all-girl orchestra."

A few years earlier, the Toronto-born beauty had fronted an all-girl band on Canadian television. When the band broke up she went on her own, singing in night clubs.

After the brainstorm struck, she and her husband decided to approach the hiring problem through college music schools. Both are licensed pilots so they flew their own plane from college to college.

"We found," she says, "that the music deans were all very enthusiastic and co-operative. They gave us many leads."

Gradually the unit was formed. Miss Fairfax made a point of visiting the parents of every girl, easing their fears of letting their little girls travel with a band.

The hardest to find were saxophone players. So she called Stan Kenton — he runs summer music schools — and Kenton referred her to Matt Betton, who taught in Manhattan, Kan. Betton located three saxophone players (one was his own daughter) and joined the band himself as its musical director.

Many of the others are in their late tens or early 20s; only one besides Miss Sheratt ever played professionally, aside from college affairs.

Miss Fairfax has established certain rules for her girls. They must go out only in groups of two or three, never alone. She frowns on their dating men who approach them on the bandstand. They must always dress neatly.

Two of the original members of the orchestra have been let go — "they just didn't measure up to our standards, socially, — but the rest behave like little ladies.

After the two were dismissed, sax player Joy Gordon was heard to remark, "All right, girls, shape up or ship out."

It is obvious at first glance that they shaped up.

Plastic Bag Containing $180 Reported Lost

Thurman A. Patterson of 801 N. Nevada Ave. reported to police Friday that he had lost a blue plastic money bag containing $180 in bills.

He said he had been to the bank and then gone on to Wades Pancake House, 16 S. Walnut St. where he placed the bag beside him in a booth. Patterson thought he had forgotten it and left the bag there.

Two-Year Study Of Federal Grants Proposed

DENVER (AP) — A Colorado Springs legislator called for a two-year study of federal grants and their effects on the state Friday.

Republican Rep. James A. Braden in a resolution asked that the Legislative Council perform the study and report to the 45th General Assembly in 1966.

Branden noted that federal grants and loans totaling about $135 million are spent on 90 different projects in Colorado each year.

"Such grants. . .usually entail certain obligations on the part of the state in accepting money. The grants," he said, "encourage states to embark upon new programs on a minor scale but result in ever-increasing programs and continually increasing costs."

Included in the study will be examinations of the amounts, controls, standards and obligations imposed by the acceptance of federal money. The Governor's Local Affairs Study Commission was asked to help in assembling the data.

The resolution called for a review of all federal grants to the state, its departments, institutions and political subdivisions.

Johnson City Finds Itself Historic Spot

By WARD CANNEL

JOHNSON CITY, Texas (NEA) —In a lot of ways, the sharpest picture of Lyndon B. Johnson's home town is painted by a truck driver on the outskirts of Austin who explains:

"Johnson City? Well, sir, you go straight down this road for an hour and then you start drivin' real careful or you'll be out before you know'd you was in."

But the wonder of Johnson City is that sudden fame has passed through leaving little more dust than any of the cars hurtling down U.S. 290.

The nation's new Little Washington has only the barest essentials of what you would expect from a brush with immortality.

Three red highway signs announce that Johnson City is the home town of Lyndon B. Johnson.

The country road, 14 miles away, leading to the LBJ ranch has been redesignated Ranch Road.

The Johnson City High School from which the President graduated in 1924, has been renamed for him.

Years ago the incorporated city was named for the President's family which settled there nearly a century ago. If it hadn't been, it's doubtful it would now be calling itself Johnson City instead of, say, Buena Vista or Smithville.

The trouble with Johnson City (pop. 611) is that it has known Lyndon too well and too intimately to get all lathered up because he is now living in the White House.

"I knew his daddy real well," says one old-timer. "Now, there was a feller for you. Talkin' with him was a real lesson in being upstanding."

"I used to spend a lot of evenings over to their house," says another middle-aged man, pushing his ten-gallon hat back from his brow. "I remember when his ma used to give elocution lessons. She was a wonderful woman. Why, shucks, if it was not for her, Lyndon wouldn't never even have gone to college."

And from a lawyer who has known the President since the latter was 8:

"Course, we're real proud of him getting to the top and all. An it's real nice that he came from here. But I don't exactly see how it makes a whole lot of difference to how we live here from now on."

For central Texas—as for most of rural America — The White House and national destiny are considerably farther removed than Congress. If Lyndon Johnson had gone no deeper into national politics than the House of Representatives, to which he was elected in 1937, he would still be Johnson City's favorite son.

"He got us electric power," recalls A. W. Moursund, an old friend and associate. "And folks here don't forget it. It was one of the greatest things that ever happened to this part of the country."

Little he did as senator made that kind of an impact. Paradoxically, as vice president his stature seemed somehow to be reduced. With fewer demands on his time, he became again, for the first time in nearly 30 years, a familiar figure around Johnson City.

"Seems kinda funny," a young ranch hand said, "that last May he was talking to the graduation class at the high school about the space age and now here he is President."

In precisely what stride Johnson City takes that transition can be documented at the O & S. dry goods store where a sales lady says:

"I guess there must be lots of important people coming here now. Why, I sold a pair of boots to an easterner in December and then I saw his picture in the paper and you know who he was? He was Mr. Rusk. That's the Secretary of State. Well, you just never know, do you?"

It is with this magnificent Texas shrug that Johnson City is rising to meet its state occasion.

"We get a good bit of mail nowadays," says Mrs. Minnie Cox of the county clerk's office, "asking for recipes for ranch beans now that Mr. Johnson's had his big barbecue here. Well I just write back and tell them there's no such thing as ranch beans. They're plain ole pinto beans."

Mayor George Byars reports an increase of mail, too, from people as far away as Germany asking to become honorary citizens of Johnson City.

"Sure beats all, don't it?" Mayor Byars said from his office as operations manager for the telephone company. "People wantin' to be honorary citizens when it's all you can do to get 40 of the real citizens out for an election unless there's a bond issue or a tax rate on the ballot."

If it were Cape Cod, somebody would have printed a million honorary citizenship cards by now. If it were New York or California, there would long since have been a brand of Johnson City Ranch Beans. If it were any place but Johnson City, the dry goods store would have had a picture of Dean Rusk in the window, a duplicate pair of the boots he bought and maybe a photostat of the check he paid with.

But it is Johnson City ,nearly two months after a local boy has been in the White House, and the only official nod to international status is a deliberation by the Chamber of Commerce — still undecided—about the advisability of putting up a souvenir stand.

Real estate values are up a tentative 10 to 15 per cent. The number of tourist cars asking directions at local gas stations has increased a hundredfold. Presidential security and communications men have taken up every available house and motor court room. But:

Johnson City has made no move to build a hotel. ("We had one, but it didn't make out so good, so we turned it into a rest home.")

There are two movie houses —one open in winter, the other in summer. ("Heck, we're not much for the movies. Most folks on the ranches go to bed real early.")

Not one start has been made on a new home or apartment house. ("Who'd want to move here?")

The only real signs of the exploitation that usually follows the hand of fate come from Dalias where, reports have it, a money syndicate is making plans to make something of Johnson City.

Only half aware of what is sure to happen if President Johnson is re-elected, Johnson City listens to a reporter's questions with mild humor and disinterest. The Pedernales Stream is a long way from the Potamac. Fawcett's drug store is on Main Street, not on Broadway.

In only two places can you find the sense of history that has been conferred on this tiny town.

One is the office of High School Principal John S. Moursund.

"The old Johnson House has been fixed up," he says, "and who knows —maybe if a historical society asked in the right way, we could get it for a museum."

The other indication of historical perspective is to be found at the LBJ ranch, now closed to "all but authorized personnel," and where cows, horses and Secret Service men share the front lawn of the Little White House.

Drying in the sun along the side gate are cement plaques signed by the movers and shakers who have come to call on the man who holds the most powerful office in the world.

"Now what in the world is he gonna do with them?" asks a young Texan in Johnson City.

"If he wants their names, why don't he just get them to sign a book?"

Another Polaris Sub Launched at Groton

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — The Polaris missile - firing submarine Casimir Pulaski was launched Saturday near the spot where the nation's underwater nuclear fleet was born 10 years and 11 days ago.

Mrs. John A. Gronouski, wife of the postmaster general, christened the Pulaski, named for the young Polish count who became a hero of the American Revolution.

The Pulaski is the 53rd nuclear - powered submarine and the 28th capable of firing missiles.

HANNOVER—A letter to the editor of a German newspaper started a drive recently against a cement plant which spread dust over the nearby town. As a result, the cement plant will install devices to eliminate dust.

NEW YORK (NEA) —There's a major difference between the English version of That Was The Week That Was and its brand new American counterpart, TW3, for short.

"The English one," explains producer Marshall Jamison, was designed to be journalism — it was an extension of the BBC's news coverage. Ours is designed to be amusement —it is an extension of television's entertainment function."

Because of that distinction, and the presumed tenderer sensibilities of the American audience, Jamison doubts if TW3 here can ever be "as tough" as the British show was.

But he doesn't feel that satire must necessarily be hard and cruel to make its point.

"You can satirize someone gently," he says, "without flaying them alive. I hope we can poke fun at everybody and be monpartisan. But I imagine some viewers will think we're slanted. As a matter of fact, I imagine the measure of our success will be the mail we get. I'll be very unhappy if we don't get a lot of nasty letters."

Charles Boyer is going back to television for the first time since the old Four Star Playhouse and that was seven years ago. Boyer, David Niven and Gig Young will rotate in a series, The Rogues.

"We'll play French, English and American rogues," star of the Broadway play, "Man and Boy," said. "It will be a tongue-in-cheek series, light but with drama and pathos, too. Some of them will be shot in Europe, I think."

Boyer says his ultimate am- that appearing in only one out of three shows will make his work easier.

"It's a misconception," he says, "that it is one-third the work. I'll have to be there for them all, because we'll all make brief appearances in every one. I figure it will take seven months' work to do the first set."

Boyersays his ultimate ambition is to produce. His son, who wants to direct, is working now as a dialogue director to learn the trade.

"I'm glad," the actor says, "that he didn't want to act. Actors are so vulnerable. If a picture is a box office flop, it's because the actor isn't a draw not because the story or director is bad. If it succeeds, it's because the story and direction is good, not because of the actor."

Fabian will record again. The young star will have his career traced on Hollywood and the Stars, Jan. 20, over NBC-TV.

"Im doing mostly acting these days," the erstwhile jivin' juvenile says. "But I will record again. I've looked at around 100 million tunes —but nowadays, who knows what kind of tunes will make it?

"I think people will be surprised by my new records. I have been taking singing lessons right along, and I think my voice is better now. You know, if I'd let all that bad publicity about my bad singing to my head, I'd be in a strait jacket."

Looking at Hollywood

RICHARD HARIS HAS A BAL WHILE AT HOME

HOLLYWOOD — Richard Harris has had a rich, full life since he finished "Mutiny on the Bounty." Back here from England for "Major Dundee," he says "I've broken my nose twice since I saw you last. You see I've lost my driving license — I've been suspended for life. So I drove thru a fog, hit a wall, and ruined my nose. In the hospital they tied me jaw up and patched up me nose. A few days later after a few pints of beautiful beer, I feel in a British pub and broke it again. Also, I had another son. That makes three boys. The child was born the day I won the Cannes Film Festival award, and I delivered it myself. The doctor and nurse had left the room; I heard a cry, pulled back the cover, and there was Harris No. 3." . . Richard finished a picture in Italy at 5:20 a.m., caught the next plane for the United States. "I hadn't slept for four days when I arrived. When somebody else pays for my ticket, I take advantage of all that free drink and refuse to sleep on the plane." His wife joins him here in a few weeks.

Metro is about to cash in on the popularity of their three young TV stars — Dr. Kildare, Mr. Novak, and the Lieutenant — by starring them in movies this summer. Dick Chamberlain will do "Joy in the Morning," and Gary Lockwood goes into "Every Man Should Have One," playing a rugged young logger in backwoods Washington. Nanette Fabray's husband, Ranald MacDougall wrote the yarn. When the studio finds a property for Jim Franciscus, they'll be set. What they should do is star all three in one explosive picture; then let them go on their own. . .George Maharis is hotter than the desert where he's making "Satan Bug." Had to come up over the week-end to discuss a picture with M-G-M. Universal wants him to co-star with Sandra Dee, and he has several offers from Europe. George fought his way out of a TV series and it looks as tho he was right. For him, anyway.

Raymnd Burr visited Japan, Okinawa, Iwo Jima, Philippines, and Viet Nam during the Christmas holidays and he'll go back again when Perry Mason winds up in April. "What did you find there?" I asked. "People," said Burr, "and I didn't get to talk to all of them.' He's one of our state department's best people-to-people promoters. Burr is closing his beautiful Beverly Hills gallery. "It was not supported by the public nor the Los Angeles press," he said . . . Judy Garland tells me she had to resign from her TV job to get in shape for another court battle with Sid Luft, who's filing a suit in February charging Judy with everything but grand theft and threatening to take her children. "He calls at night," she said. "His main objective is to destroy me. I've been appearing for 38 years; have raised three children rather well. I could not have appeared weekly on TV if I did all the things he's accusing me of."

I watched Jerry Lewis direct a passel of pros for "The Patsy." Among them, Keenan Wynn, Everett Sloan, Peter Lorre, Phil Harris, John Carradine, and Ina Balin. He did it remarkably well. He rehearsed them thoroly and with no wasted film finished it off in two weeks. He's writing, producing, directing, and acting. I must say he looked happy with all those chores. . . Merle Oberon gave a farewell dinner before taking off for Palm Beach. Jack Lemmon came in smoking a cigar, followed by Billy Wilder, who had a caseful in his pocket, but was smoking a cigaret. In complete defiance of the recent disclosures about the evils of smoking. Wilder said "When I was 12 my father told me about the birds and bees and cautioned me to use sex sparingly — I'd live longer. I didn't take his advice and don't intend to take this." His wife was her beautiful self in pale pink chiffon. . . After dinner, in popped Frank Sinatra wearing a bump on his head and his little finger in a cast. He said the injuries were given him by the manager of that Pebble Beach hotel who swung at him with a bottle of champagne.

U.S. Complains To Reds About High Port Fees

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has complained to Russia about the "abnormally high" port fees charged U.S. ships delivering American wheat to the Soviet Union.

State - Department officials said Russian port charges for American ships are about three times the regular rate for other ships.

Deliveries by U.S. ships of American surplus wheat recently sold to Russia have not yet reached Soviet ports. The first vessel left the United States Friday, but officials said that apparently the same higher port charges would apply as in the past.

The State Department has ordered the U.S. Embassy in Moscow to ask that the rates be lowered. Under the terms of U.S. recognition of the Soviet Union in 1934 Russian vessels calling at U.S. ports pay the same port charges as American ships.

U.S. officials regard the Soviet rate system as somewhat ironic. Only two months ago the Russians threatened to cancel the wheat deal on grounds that U.S. shipping charges were "discriminatory."

BON — German stamp collectors have complained their country does not issue enough new special postage stamps.

Nurseryman Elected to State Post

Art Langman, owner of Colorado Gardens and Nursery, 2406 Wood Ave., was elected vice president of the Colorado State Nurserymen's Association at its recent meeting in Ft. Collins.

Langman had been secretary-treasurer of the organization for a number of years before being elected to the executive post.

The association is composed of experienced nurserymen who know the hardy varieties of plants which will grow well in Colorado. This year the organization is publishing a booklet on the proper planting methods, featuring drawings and ideas on how to care for plants. The publication will be aimed at assisting gardeners in Colorado only.

Langman is a third generation nurseryman in Colorado Springs. His father, A. R. Langman headed the business for many years until Art Langman took over the firm in 1946.

Art Langman is a native of Iowa State University and Colorado State University. He attended the nursery managemnt course in New York sponsored by the American Nurserymen's Association.

Langman is president of the Sunrise Sertoma Club, and is a member of the local Home Builders Association, the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce and the Colorado Springs Nurserymen's Association. He has been active in the formation of the Horticulture Arts Society. He is married and has two sons, 12 and 16.

The Colorado Nurserymen's Association was organized primarily to further interest in horticulture and maintain high standards in the nursery industry.

Burn Victims May Escape Pain in New Medical Tank

By RALPH DIGHTON
AP Science Writer

The shock of losing almost a third of her skin was wearing off.

Moaning in agony, the 32-year-old woman, victim of a kitchen stove explosion, muttered through clenched teeth: "Yes, I'll sign . . . only help me."

She scrawled her name on a waiver and thereby authorized an experiment that saved her weeks of excruciating pain, perhaps even saved her life.

Taken minutes later to a special room in Baylor Hospital in Houston, she was immersed to the neck in a bathtub - like tank that was to be virtually an all-protective womb for the next 16 days.

Inside the tank was a new "dry liquid" silicone compound that coated her burns against the air, prevented infection, buoyed her unbandaged, unclothed body almost weightless on a padded rack. She could move without fear of rolling her weight on a burn, never developed a bed sore.

Once, when removed for medical examination of her burns, she begged: "Put me back in the tank."

That was the closest the horribly burned woman came to pain in the entire 16 days—a time when strong men similarly seared have pleaded, "Let me die," as they waited for charred skin to slough off so grafting could begin.

"She took only three aspirins during the entire period," says her physician, "and that was for headache."

Even more significant is the fact that grafting of skin on her legs, hips, chest, hands and feet began on the 18th day. In conventionally treated burn cases, this cannot be started until the fourth, fifth or sixth week.

The woman's skin grafts "took" quickly, she recovered and today her scars are clean and smooth—with little of the ridged and twisted tissue characteristic of extensive burns.

Dr. Frank Gerow, 34-year-old plastic surgeon at Geisinger Medical Center in Danville, Pa., reported the case at a recent congress of the American College of Surgeons in San Francisco.

His treatment is frankly experimental and requires much more testing before it will be made available to general practice.

But, Dr. Gerow believes, it not only offers new hope for burn victims—it may have application, through a unique system of patient-temperature control, in the infant science of anesthesia through freezing.

Looking far down the road, Dr. Gerow says he also is studying possible use of silicone-filled tanks to cushion space travelers against the stress of acceleration during rocket blast-off.

"I designed the silione fluid to have about the specific gravity of water—enough to provide body support without making the patient float," he said in an interview. "But it certainly would be possible to change the fluid so the subject would be completely weightless, and thus unaffected by acceleration.

"And the fact that the silicone is bacterio-static—will not support the growth of bacteria—could offer a way of delivering astronauts to other planets and bringing them back with no danger of germ contamination at either end of the journey.

"We haven't tried these things yet—they're still in the thinking stage—but they may well be worth exploring with this modality."

Dr. Gerow first became familiar with the properties of silicones in developing, as an intern in Houston, a plastic restoration for breasts after surgery. Later, in hunting a better fluid in which to support burn victims—water shrivels tissue and encourages infection, he thought again of silicones.

He ordered a compound — specifically, di-methyl polysiloxane, an oily feeling almost colorless substance sometimes used as a lubricant—mixed to his specifications and began experimenting with pigs.

Then he ran into trouble.

The silicone fluid was "dry" —in that it contained no germ-feeding water—to start with, but it soon picked up water and other contaminants from body wastes.

The fluid would have to be circulated and filtered.

Dr. Gerow tried several medical supply houses and was told "It can't be done." Finally he appealed to a swimming pool equipment dealer, who relayed the request to the company's headquarters in El Monte, Calif.

There it went to the desk of William O. Baker, who as president of Swimquip Inc., supervises a continuing research in circulation and filtration for swimming pools and industrial plants.

"I remembered seeing a cousin of mine suffer through two years in the hospital getting over a bad burn," Baker recalls. "I went to work."

It wasn't as easy as Baker first thought. The liquid had to be piped through diatomaceous earth, to filter out water and bacteria down to .2 of a micron and through carbon for removal of odors. By the time this was worked out, he faced another problem: the silicone fluid, much like penetrating oil, leaked through threaded pipe joints. The answer was welded tubing.

After two years of research on Dr. Gerow's project, Baker today says: "I think we've got it whipped. There will be improvements as we go along, but the Houston case proves the system works."

To Baker, a wealthy industrialist, the project has been an expensive philanthropy. "I'm about $200,000 out of pocket so far," he says, "and it will be another year or so before we could go into commercial production of the units. It may never make any money, but it will be worth the cost if it saves one life."

Despite the development cost, Dr. Gerow figures the treatment eventually will have a substantially lower price tag than current methods.

"We expect the unit will run around $12,000," he says, "plus another $3,000 for the 150 gallons of silicone in the tank and filter system.

"Because the silicone can be used over and over again by reprocessing it after each patient, the unit probably would amortize itself at about $500 per patient. And its simplicity means there will be much less handling of the patient—changing of bandages and so forth—so hospital staff requirements will be reduced."

An extremely painful part of current treatment is the cutting away of charred tissue as it is replaced by growth underneath. This is eliminated by the tank treatment. Dr. Gerow has found that a jet of silicone, played against the skin through a nozzle, sloughs off the burned tissue just as effectively — and without pain.

Dr. Gerow says three people have been in the tank so far. The burned woman was the first. Later a medical student volunteered to spend 14 days in the silicone bath for refinement of procedures. The third was an elderly man whose severe burns had become badly infected during conventional treatment. The silicone treatment helped, but it was too late to save him.

"After we have set up a dozen or so units around the country we'll be able to tell just how effective the system is in a wide range of cases," Dr. Gerow says, "but as of right now I'd say it is completely successful."

Building Third Unit

Two units are in operation currently, one at Danville and the other at Houston, now moved to Ben Taub General Hospital. An improved model, destination undecided, is being fabricated.

A unit consists of four big cylinders filled with diatomaceous earth to filter out germs and water, two cylinders filled with carbon to remove odors, a stainless steel tank equipped with exercise bars to offset the weakening effects of inactivity in an almost weightless environment, and a temperature control panel.

"The temperature of the liquid must be kept constant between 87 and 88 degrees Fahrenheit," says Dr. Gerow. "Above that, the patient perspires, increasing our filtration requirement. Below that, he feels chilled."

CAPITOL STUFF

By TED LEWIS

WASHINGTON — Inasmuch as Defense Secretary McNamara has told Congress that the military situation in South Viet Nam is loused up, there is a question: What is going to be done about it?

After all, we have 14,000 troops of various kinds in the Red-infiltrated country. If the war effort deteriorated after the overthrow of the Deim government in November and there is only what McNamara calls "hope" of improvement, then where do we go from here?

It is generally agreed in Congress that the time is ripe for President Johnson to clarify his Viet Nam policy. In the process he is going to have to straighten out a mess right here in Washington which for too long has crippled and befuddled our military assistance program as it pertains to South Viet Nam.

McNamara's Congressional testimony that the war is going far from good only points up the need of a Presidential decision.

The Defense Secretary is now being criticized — unfairly in the opinion of his supporters — for giving an honest account of the Viet Nam military situation without proposing what should be done to straighten out the mess.

However, it isn't up to McNamara to spell out in public testimony what this government's policy should be. That is up to Johnson. All McNamara and the Pentagon can do is to inform Congress that the U. S. military is operating as efficiently as possible in Viet Nam under circumstances largely beyond its control.

Why should McNamara, for example, be the whipping boy because this government announced only a few months ago that the war was going so well that by 1965 we would be able to withdraw most of our military personnel?

That was a White House statement issued by John F. Kennedy. Our military did not instigate it, but it felt required to support the stand of the Commander in Chief.

SECOND-STRING STRIPED PANTS BOYS GOOFED

Why should McNamara and our military also be booted around for the "accelerated rate" of Viet Cong activities after the November overthrow of the decrepit Diem government?

Neither the Pentagon nor Gen. Paul Harkins, commander of our Viet Nam assistance forces, was responsible for the coup d'etat. Our military didn't like Diem either, but they opposed any revolt against his regime until there was a junta capable of taking over efficiently.

The mess the war effort is now in is largely due to second-level Asiatic "experts" in the State Department, who sold President Kennedy on the idea that Diem must go even tho there was no strong leader in sight to succeed him.

Not even the often properly criticized Central Intelligence Agency wanted any part of that blunder. And blunder it turned out to be, as anyone can tell by reading between the lines of McNamara's cautious testimony.

Both the CIA agents on the scene and military intelligence colleagues agreed that while Diem was pretty bad, it would be worse to have an unstable succession lacking popular support.

Yet such State Department figures as W. Averell Harriman and Roger Hilsman, assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs, helped sell JFK on the idea that Diem must go. Now see what has happened, as McNamara said, in effect, the other day.

A TUG-OF-WAR AMONG U. S. AGENCIES

What is obviously required from President Johnson is to restore order out of this chaos of contradictory U. S. teams operating in the Viet Nam show. One agency should be in charge. Up to now the military has been contesting with the CIA, and both are vying with our State Department over matters of authority.

Is our Viet Nam operation primarily military, intelligence or diplomatic? Right now it is a little bit of all three, which is a helluva way to run an operation in which the lives of uniformed Americans are at stake.

And while the President figures out what to do now that McNamara has obliquely brought up the issue, he might consider whether it is smart to have as U. S. ambassador in Saigon a man suddenly restive political climate back home.

Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge was certainly chosen by Kennedy for the job last summer because, in part at least, it looked like good politics to have a name Republican on the Saigon scene. If South Viet Nam blew up, it would be difficult for the GOP to ride the issue hard if Nixon's 1960 running mate was in the action in a responsible role.

SITUATION POSES A WORRISOME PROBLEM

But is it equally smart politics for Johnson to have Lodge as his ambassador? When JFK named Lodge last summer, the latter's days in elective politics appeared definitely over. Now Lodge clearly has the Presidential bug.

There could well be worried White House imaginings over this. Like Lodge quitting an ambassador early this spring and returning to charge that the Pentagon and the CIA had, under Johnson aupsices, prevented him from cleaning up the Viet Nam mess.

Johnson must know by now that the military and Lodge don't get along. He also must know that there are suspicions that the planted reports that Gen. Harkins is to be replaced leak out of the embassy itself.

There is a crying need for a Presidential straightening-out of U. S. policy in Viet Nam on another count. There are more and more disturbing rumors that the Administration is leaning toward a neutral status for Viet Nam. This has been Gen. Charles de Gaulle's idea; it has some support here primarily because of the lack of any marked success so far in our military aid program.

The President should at least clear up the uncertainty over this aspect.

Aristocrats Not High Livers, Research Says

By TOM A. CULLEN

LONDON (NEA) — British aristocrats are said to be good judges of racing cars, women and port wine.

The typical British nobleman has the reputation of being an eccentric, and also a bit of a rake. In the popular view, he keeps at least one mistress hidden away and leads a mildly dissolute life.

But this popular image is false, according to Dr. Tom Hollingsowrth, a 31 - year - old statistician of Glasgow University. Today, aristocrats are almost like ordinary folk, except that they are more prone to divorce, says Dr. Hollingsowrth.

One in four marriages among Britain's titled people now ends in the divorce courts, the statistician finds. On the other hand, the number of illegitimate children born to peers today is only a sixth of the total for the rest of society.

Dr. Hollingsowrth was not just concerned with per cent behavior of Britain's nobility. In a survey which lasted three years, he employed a 15-man research team to dig back as far as 1603 for light on the love life of British aristocrats.

Specifically, he was looking for trends in marriage, fertility and deaths. The records of some 28,000 titled persons were examined.

Dr. Hollingsworth found that until 1900 the divorce rate among the peerage was low. "Since then it has really shot up," he claims. "And it is still climbing. Possibly one in three marriages will be dissolved."

However, only 1 in every 100 children born to nobility is illegitimate, while the national average is 1 in 16. In fact, the illegitimacy rate among noblemen has been low throughout the ages.

A notable exception was the 17th century Earl of Ferrers, who had two wives, 27 legitimate children—and 30 children born out of wedlock.

Juliet may have married Romeo when she was 14, but in Britain the average nobleman's daughter tends to marry relatively late in life. In 1603 she was 22 when she wed, in the last century she delayed until 27, and now she gets married at around 24.

The picture of British aristocrats as high livers, whooping it up with ripe pheasant and champagne has been knocked on the head by recent surveys.

This study shows that of the 1,750 noblemen listed in "Who's Who," nearly a fourth are at least 50 years old, and nearly two-thirds have passed their 55th birthday.

In 1603 a nobleman could expect to live 30 years, while in the 18th century his life expectancy was 47. Today, he can hope to survive as long as 73 years.

Excluding those who are age 75 or more, more than one third of Britain's noblemen have never had to earn their own living. Yet, despite differences in education and employment, Dr. Hollingsowrth still thinks that peers are tending towards ordinariness. "The nobility has always been different from everybody else," he says. "But I think it can be said that today they are more like the rest of the population than ever."

Moscow's Mad Killer Executed by Squad

MOSCOW (AP) — Moscow's "mad killer," Vladimir Ionesyan, who was accused of murdering five persons and raping a girl, has been executed by a firing squad, the Tass news agency reported today.

The official Soviet news agency said that Ionesyan's mistress, Alevtina Dmitrieva—who reportedly assisted him by wiping the blood off his murder ax, was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment by the Supreme Court.

The 26-year-old Ionesyan, a former comedy singer, and his mistress went on trial several days ago at a secret location for slaying two women and three boys. The court rejected Ionesyan's plea for a pardon.

Ionesyan terrorized Moscow for two months until he was arrested two weeks ago.

QUALITY USED CARS

MOVE UP TO A USED CONTINENTAL

You can become the owner of the finest automobile made in America, yet realize the full savings of today's used-car market with a late-model Lincoln Continental.

You can scarcely tell that it is not brand new. The classic look has not changed. This car has been restored to prime condition in both appearance and performance.

And the price includes as standard equipment, virtually every luxury and perfomance feature you can imagine, too. This could be your year to move up to a Lincoln Continental.

Former Governor Receives Unique Tribute

A tribute such as few living men have received was paid to Edwin C. Johnson, former governor and U.S. senator, Thursday, when he was presented with a book containing more than 50 letters honoring his long service to the state and nation.

The book, inscribed "Homesteader — Governor of Colorado — United States Senator," contained letters of praise from such national and state figures as President Lyndon B. Johnson and Governor John A. Love.

The presentation was made at the Johnson residence in the Sherman Plaza by Ellis P. Lupton of Denver, chairman of the board of the consulting engineering firm of Barton, Stoddard, Milhollin & Lupton, Inc., a close friend of Johnson and the writers of the testimonials.

Lupton was arranging to present the book at a dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and more than a score of intimate friends when the former governot's illness forced a cancellation of the plan.

In a foreword to the book, Lupton wrote:

"Ed Johnson lists his greatest pleasure as being among friends. He says if everyone knew his neighbor as well as he does a member of his family, many of the present problems of the world would dissipate.

"The letters in this book are a living tribute to how Edwin C. Johnson practices his philosophy."

The book included letters from the following:

President Lyndon B. Johnson, Sen. Gordon Allott, Colorado; Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, New Mexico; Tim Armstrong, assistant vice president, Majestic Savings and Loan Assn.; Con. Wayne N. More Struggles Predicted for South Viet Nam

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—South Viet Nam marked time today as Maj. Gen. Nguyen Khahn's new military junta faced a major job of government reorganization, threats of heightened Viet Cong attacks and the possibility of more army power struggles.

The nation continued its business on momentum following the Khahn's seizure of power Thursday in a quick, bloodless coup.

Khahn, 37, who vowed to step up the war against the Communist guerrillas, appointed a 35-member military junta. There was no announcement of who would hold the key posts.

The tanks and troops that helped overthrow the old junta disappeared from Saigon today.

Most people had paid scant attention to developments.

As the new regime slapped posters on walls and broadcast slogans over the radio, one Vietnamese official commented: "This kind of thing has been going on so long and so often we Saigonese are a little bored."

A young lieutenant who was promoted after the first coup said cynically: "If I get promoted each time we have a coup I figure I should be chief of state by the time I'm 35."

Khahn made his first public appearance since the coup. He went to the Saigon airport to say goodbye to Gen. Le Van Ty, who reportedly is going to the United States for medical treatment. Dapper in an airborne camouflage outfit, Khahn joked with photographers and posed for pictures.

Khahn appointed 17 generals and 18 colonels to a new revolutionary council replacing the three-month-old junta of Maj. Gen. Duong Van Minh, provisional chief of state.

Minh, popular leader of the generals' revolt against the late President Ngo Dinh Diem Nov. 1-2, was ousted after he refused to continue as figurehead chairman of the new junta. Minh was not arrested, however.

Khahn also dismissed Premier Nguyen Ngoc Tho, the government's civilian leader who has held public office continuously since 1930. He was vice president under Diem.

While the political maneuvering continued, U.S. military advisers feared the Communists would capitalize on the confusion to make major military gains, as they did after Diem's ouster.

At daybreak, a bomb exploded inside a U.S. military compound. Although such bombings are not unusual in Saigon, it could have been the first Communist reaction to the coup. Two Vietnamese girls were slightly injured and an official U.S. car was damaged.

Besides the Communists, Khanh faces grave dangers from within South Viet Nam's army.

He has arrested several key leaders of the old junta, accusing them of conspiring with France to bring about the neutralization of Viet Nam.

These leaders include the defense minister, Maj. Gen. Tran Van Don; the military chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Le Van Kim; the Saigon police chief, Maj. Gen. Mai Huu Xuan, and the interior minister, Maj. Gen. Ton That Dinh.

Col. Duong Ngoc Lam, chief of South Viet Nam's two paramilitary forces, was named supreme police chief, succeeding the jailed Xuan. It was the regime's first major appointment.

A reliable source said the new junta also ordered the release from jail of Dr. Tran Kim Tuyen, once South Viet Nam's top secret police chief under Diem. Tuyen fell from favor several months before Diem's ouster. He was arrested after the Novmber coup.

In a statement to the nation, Khanh said the revolt was aimed at purging supporters of French President Charles de Gaulle's neutralization policy. But most Americans in Saigon believe the coup was the result of a military power struggle.

Khahn, once a trusted associate of Diem, waited until the last moment before joining the revolt against Diem. For this reluctant support he was given command of the isolated 1st Corps in the northernmost part of the country. Since he had been commander of the 2nd Corps region, the transfer was no reward.

As his resentment mounted, Khahn enlisted the support of Maj. Gen. Le Van Ngiem, who had operational control over all marine, airborne and special forces; Brig. Gen. Do Mau, former armed forces security chief who had become information minister, and others.

While Saigon slept Wednesday night, eight airborne and marine battalions took over the city supported by tanks and armored cars.

Before the sun rose, Khahn's revolt was over. The only shot fired was by an excited paratrooper. His angry lieutenant slugged him for disobeying orders, providing the only injury of the coup.

In Washington, the State Department withheld recognition of the new government until further developments, although it was believed the United States eventually would recognize the junta. A qualified American source in Saigon said there would be no interruption in American aid to the government.

With Khahn's strongly anti-Gaullist views, it was assumed in Saigon that relations between South Viet Nam and France would be severed.

Three hundred persons, apparently with the blessings of the new junta, gathered in the capital's main market today for an anti-French rally. Banners denounced De Gaulle.

In Moscow, the Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda said, "The hand of the American military is clearly in evidence behind the latest coup in South Viet Nam, as it was in the overthrow of the bankrupt Ngo Dinh Diem dictator."

The U.S. State Department disclaimed any responsibility for the coup. In Saigon, U.S. sources said Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge had learned of Khahn's plans only on the night of the coup and urged him to avoid bloodshed.

Although U.S. Sources welcomed Khahn's strong pro-U.S. and anti-Communist stance, they were deeply concerned about the fate of a nation to which the United States has committed 14,000 troops.

Elsewhere in Asia, expressions of doubt also were heard.

In a typical comment, the Manila Times said: "Every time a new military clique takes over the chances of real democracy in South Viet Nam are diminished. If rebellion in the army can succeed as easy as that, what is to prevent others from staging a third coup, a fourth and so on?"

Noted Musicians In Recital at Perkins Hall

The Colorado College Music Department will present Ronald Hudson, newly appointed professor of violin, and Max Lanner, noted pianist and head of the department, in a sonata recital in Perkins Hall on Sunday, February 9, at 4:00 p.m. This concert will be Hudson's introductory appearance in Colorado Springs.

Hudson joined the music faculty this fall. He came here from Evansville, Ind., where he taught at the Evansville College, was concertmaster of the Evansville Philharmonic Orchestra and first violinist of the Evansville Philharmonic String Quartet. In the spring of 1962, this quartet was chosen by the State Department for a ten week tour of Spain, Portugal and the Middle East under the auspices of the cultural exchange program of ANTA. The quartet also performed several times at the famous Aspen Festival.

Hudson studied with such distinguished artists as William Kroll, Eudice Shapiro and Szymon Goldberg. He was Assistant Concertmaster of the National Orchestra Association in New York under Leon Barzin and for four years Concertmaster of the Albert Tipton Chamber Orchestra. He is a valuable addition the list of fine musicians in this community and will undoubtedly contribute much to the musical life Colorado Springs. His wife, Nancy, is a fine violinist in her own right who is playing in the first violin section of the Colorado Springs Symphony.

Max Lanner has been in Colorado Springs since 1946 and is well-known to all but the newest of this community. Many solo recitals, chamber music concerts and four appearances with the Colorado Springs Symphony have established him as one of the foremost performers in the region.

The two artists have chosen sonatas by Handel, Brahms and Carlton Gamer for their February concert. Of special interest will be the work of Carlton Gamer, composer on the music faculty of the college. His sonata for violin and piano is a composition of major proportions.

It gives both performers the opportunity to display their musicianship and virtuosity. Rich in melodic material and rythmic variety, the style is highly polyphonic and moderately modern.

The concert will be free to the public.

SECTION E COLORADO SPRINGS—SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1964 SECTION E

Personalines

The social complexion of Colorado Springs has changed from the rosy red of the holiday gaiety and is gradually reflecting the lovely purple and white of the Lenten season which begins Ash Wednesday, Feb. 12.

While many people take to the high seas for mid-winter vacations, or to the high hills for weekends of skiing, the larger social events generally take on the "benefit" pattern.

There will be benefit fashion shows every few minutes—pardon the slight exaggeration—climaxed by the ten-dollar-a ticket CARE style show of Denver Designers' creations to be held at the Broadmoor Hotel in March.

One of the major pre-Lenten social events will be the Mardi Gras Ball Saturday at the International Center, with proceeds going to the Sacred Heart School.

All during January, clubs played bridge for the March of Dimes; mothers left household duties for the more pressing duty of the Mothers' March, and clubs held projects of various kinds to raise money for this annual drive.

Heart Fund workers met over coffee and planned the Heart Campaign, which started Saturday; and one of the major accomplishments of the first month of 1964 was the KO Polio project.

Every club, sorority chapter, auxiliary and guild will probably have a Valentine party of some sort, or at least a Valentine exchange; the good ladies of the many church circles will devote their time to meditation and study, and to assistance with plans for the Easter season. Many of the churches plan Shrove Tuesday pancake supper.

United Church Women are occupied with plans for the impressive "World Day of Prayer" scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m. Feb. 14, and follow the sun around the globe with prayer services wherever the Light of Christendom exists.

This week Civic Players will present their midwinter production, a rollicking comedy, "Come Blow Your Horn," for a six night run at the Fine Arts Center, and many small intimate dinner parties will precede each performance.

The final performance will be followed by a convivial cast party when the players and their mates or dates, and members of the board will relax and assess the merits of the production.

Announcements of engagements for post-Easter and summer weddings will fill these pages, and weddings which do occur in the Lenten season are apt to be small and quietly elegant. Private cocktail parties are sure to follow the same relaxed, intimate pattern.

This is the season that makes it difficult for a society editor to fill a column with party patter; but women need this relaxed interlude, as a worker needs the Sabbath. Even so, we'll keep on ringing your number and asking for news of trips and guests, and non-organizational parties, no matter how small! (And please don't forget to call us when you return from the fantastic winter vacation you asked us to omit until your return!)

Among skiiers who spent the current weekend at Aspen were Dr. and Mrs. Oliver Campbell and son Ody.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Ming of 719 E. Cache La Poudre St. announce the marriage of their daughter, Lily Joy Dutson, to Omar D. Stemple, of Colorado Springs, which took place Jan. 31 in Greeley. They will make their home in Greeley, where Mr. Stemple is Assistant Supervisor of the Colorado Highway Commission.

Lunching together Monday at the El Paso Club were Mrs. Joseph Reich, Mrs. Douglass Corley, Mrs. Arnold Hatch, Mrs. Ben Wendelken, Mrs. Charles O. Giese, Mrs. James Peck, Mrs. Raymond Haigler, Mrs. Harry Holman, Mrs. G. R. Morath, Mrs. Harry McColl, and Mrs. F. F. Wing.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Kosley of Ramah celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary Friday, Jan. 31., with a family dinner at their home. Sixteen of the eighteen children were present. The couple had twenty children, two of whom are deceased. All live in Colorado Springs except two who live in Ramah, one in Philadelphia and one in California. The family of twenty included ten boys and ten girls.

The Kosleys were married in St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Calhan and have lived in Ramah for 52 years.

Mr. Kosley was a section foreman for the Rock Island Railroad for 47 years, and is now retired.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Du Pont Cornelius and Mr. and Mrs. Travis Anderson were hosts at a Campers reunion held at the Cornelius home, 1601 Cresta Road on Jan. 29.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson run the Colorado River Ranch for Boys at Gypsum, and they invited all the campers from Colorado Springs, who had been with them for the last two summers, to come and see a movie of themselves and the camp activities and have refreshments.

Among those attending, most of them with their parents, were: Jim Antonides, Alfred Brown, Berry Davis, Walter and Mark Drake, Bill Freeman, Dick Ike, David and Jimmy Migliaccio, Craig Larimer Jr., Bill Porte, James Knowlton, Fred Offutt, Clyde Tullis, Dickie Simpson, Mark Robinson, and Andy Cornelius.

David Anderson came down from Denver and the boys brought several other friends including Girvan Peters, John Cogswell and Whit McGinley.

A recent report from Mr. Glenn Hutchinson, who was called to Cleveland three weeks ago by the critical illness of his wife, states that her condition is slightly improved, altho she is still unconscious.

Mrs. Hutchinson underwent surgery for a broken hip sustained when she fell in her hotel room. She was in Cleveland with the National Figure Skating Association of which she is secretary.

Rudy Fahl brought us each a sprig of pussy willow this week, with only an occasional pussy peeking out from the brown buds. But we're feeling closer and closer to spring, as each day another little soft grey fellow breaks thru his winter coat!

MRS. MORGAN (PAT) BERTHRONG

* * *

Pat Berthong Calls Dialect Comedy Role 'a Challenge'

By GLAD MORATH

Versatility, thy name is Pat Berthrong!

Civic Players patrons have seen Pat in the staggering lead of the "Miracle Worker;" as the mother in "Bad Seed;" as the title role in "The Matchmaker;" as "Grace" in "Cue for Passion;" as a night club singer at the Falcon Room in the Antlers Hotel; and as an entertainer at a recent convention at the Broadmoor Hotel.

Last summer she played a leading role at the Diamond Circle Theatre in Durango under the direction off Orvis Grout, director of Civic Players, who has now cast Pat in her first dialect role!

Appearing as the mother in Neil Simon's comedy, "Come Blow Your Horn," Pat must play the part of a mother with a Bronx accent.

"This is a challenge and I love it," said Pat. "I'm not finding it too difficult, as I lived in New York before I married and am familiar with dialect. It has been a little harder for Wayne Roper, a veteran trouper, who plays the father, who has not heard it as much as I. But he is certainly picking it up wonderfully."

"Come Blow Your Horn" is the story of a very prosperous Jewish business man, who has won his success as the manufacturer of artifical wax flowers. He is trying to interest his two sons in carrying on in the business, but neither is too impressed. Capt. Charles Roades as the elder son, Alan, is the typical playboy, who can't be bothered. Dusty Loo plays Buddy, the younger brother, who is just the opposite—more on the beatnik side.

Pat is the fastidiuos, excitable, doting mother, who ministers devotedly to the needs of her two sons, hoping to keep them at home as long as possible. She uses every technique including those of the hypochondriac to accomplish peace and harmony between her domineering husband and their sons.

Alan gets himself a swank apartment, and Buddy decides to move in with him, emulating Alan, until their types are reversed, much to the amazement of mama! Naturally "the plot thickens," for there is a girl, in Alan's life, Constance Dayton, played by Trina Ann Delaney; and another, Ginger Merrion, who will play Peggy Evans.

But getting back to Pat Berthrong and her versatility. She is in real life the wife of Dr. Morgan Berthrong, Pathologist at Penrose Hospital, and the mother of six children. The oldest girl is doing well in dramatics at an Eastern College. This year the Berthrongs have a house guest— and exchange student, Shaheen Al Ghanim of Kuwait, Arabia, who is the age of their son, Jim. Both are students at Wasson High School.

The play opens at 8:15 p.m. Monday at the Fine Arts Center. Tickets may be obtained at the Civic Players Box Office in the Chamber of Commerce Building. The phone there is 633-3003.

TO WED THIS MONTH—The engagement of Miss Susanne Louise Ethridge to Kirby Hall Cannon has been announced by her parents, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Floyd C. Ethridge of the U.S. Air Force Academy. Miss Ethridge is attending the University of California at Berkeley. Mr. Cannon, son of Col .and Mrs. R. C. Cannon of Novato, Calif., is a graduate of the University of California where he was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. He is currently at Officer Training School, Lackland Air Force Base, Texas. A February wedding is planned.

Open Meeting Announced By American Music Society

The officers of the American Music Society will be the hosts and hostesses of the open meeting to be held Wednesday, at the Fine Arts Center. Mrs. Elizabeth Hylbom will be commentator for the varied program.

"Two songs of My Spanish Soil", by J. Osma, sung by soprano Sheila Volkman, will open the program. "Oluno, Che La Lume" and "Ninn, Nanna, Abuzzese", both works by Davico, will close Mrs. Volkman's portion of the program.

Verda Lawrie, pianist, will play the "Ballade in A Flat" by Chopin. The ballads of Chopin are in a form larger than the nocturne, etude, prelude, or waltz. They have an improvisational character in which ideas are presented and then developed freely and elastically. As the name implies, the ballade appears to be telling a story, tho no definite program is followed.

Clare DuBois, soprano, will sing three numbers; "Nancy Hawks" by Katherine Davis, the ever-popular "Songs My Mother Taught Me", by Dovorak, and "Bird of the Wilderness" by Horsman. Her accompanist will be Virginia Andrews.

Continuing the program, the "Sonata in E Minor" by Mozart will be played by Frank Gilles, violinist, accompanied by Richard Maag, pianist. Mozart wrote over forty sonatas for violin and piano. Altho, generally speaking, he might have been less profound and less original in his violin sonatas with such a wealth of lovable and ingratiating melodies that they never fail to enchant the listener.

Completing this program, Dr. Max Lanner, pianist, will offer the second and third movements (Adante and Vivace) of Sonata Number 8 by Prokofiev. This composer's creative work is considered among the most original and valuable which the Russian art of this century has produced. He is perhaps best known for his delightful orchestral fairy tale, "Peter and the Wolf", and his opera, "The Love For Three Oranges".

This interesting musical evening is open to the public.

Arthur Baylis, a long-time resident of Colorado Springs, and the niece of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene J. Lyons also of this city. Mr. Stevens is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Stevens, Jr. of Concord and Annisquam, Mass. He prepared at the Brooks School, and was graduated from Harvard College in 1957. He was a member of the Spee Club and the Hasty-Pudding Institute of 1770. A July wedding is planned.

June Show To Feature Bonsai Trees

Bonsai growers of the Pikes Peak Region are invited to participate in the Colorado Springs Flower and Garden Show to be held next June at the City Auditorium, according to an announcement by Mrs. Morris Esmiol, chairman of the show.

Due to widespread interest in the art of Bonsai, the growing of artificially shaped and diminished trees or shrubs in containers, it is hoped that there will be a large number of entries in the show. Bonsai growers who have not yet been invited to participate should contact Mrs. Esmiol.

The Flower and Garden Show, sponsored by the Broadmoor Garden Club, will be held on June 25 and 26, and will present garden settings, flower arrangements, conservation exhibitions and other notable exhibits in addition to the Bonsai.

Hostesses will be Mrs. Walter Lutz and Mrs. Charles McGee.

Chairmen Named for CARE Benefit

Mrs. Walter Freudenberg, in charge of decorations for the Denver Designers' CARE custom fashion showing and luncheon March 4 at the Broadmoor Hotel, has announced the members of her committee. They are: Mrs. Thomas McNeill, Mrs. Robert Christiansen, Mrs. James W. Bickford, Mrs. Wesley Jones, Mrs. Robert A. Jones, Mrs. Penna Alton, Mrs. Kenneth Gloss, and Mrs. Frank Cotten III.

These women are busy creating the centerpieces to be featured as table decorations at the showing. Since the project receiving the proceeds from both the Denver and Colorado Springs shows is building a school in El Refugio, Columbia.

Ms. Freudenberg and her committee have chosen to combine two of the gayest Colombian colors, which, happily, happen to be in the fashion spotlight this season with something of the Colorado landscape. Those attending will find that imaginative and colorful decorations are indeed unique.

The fingertip veil was held in place by an aurora borealis crown. She carried a white orchid with streamers of white carnations on a white prayer book.

The maid of honor, Miss Carol Giordano, wore a red velvet dress with a bell-skirt. The bridesmaid, Miss Leonora Giordano, wore an identical dress. They both carried red and white carnations.

The best man was Jerry Fielder, and ushers were Richard Weish and Ronald DeMarco.

The bride's mother wore a blue lace dress with blue and white accessories and a frosted pink carnation corsage. The bridegroom's mother wore a teal blue wool sheath with beige accessories and a pink carnation corsage.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Mary Kelemen, Mrs. Margie Plumlee, Mrs. Loretta Moneypenny and Miss Edith Palomba assisted at the reception. A dinner for close relatives was held at the Swiss Chalet.

It is difficult to display any personality when the opponents have reached a game or slam and you are gazing at an assortment of cards that are better adapted to the game of gin rummy than to contract bridge. Nevertheless, on those occasions it behooves one to maintain a stiff upper lip. Boredom may give away the show and enable declarer to place the missing strength in the hand of your partner.

East little suspected when he picked up his cards that he was to be the leading man of the very exciting drama upon which the curtain was about to be raised. West's preemptive bid of four hearts prevented any scientific investigation of the hand and North's slam bid was a good gamble. South, feeling that he had rather more than he might have held, went on to a grand slam, a venture, which I for one, am not inclined to recommend.

The king of hearts was opened and taken by the ace. The low heart was ruffed in dummy with the ten of spades and East had to make a discard. The appearance of the dummy made a club discard out of the question, so that the temptation was to let go the deuce of diamonds. East, realized, however, that holding four diamonds might be important if partner held the king (if declarer held the king there appeared to be no hope). He, therefore, discarded a trump. Note that a diamond discard would have permitted declarer to cash four tricks in the suit after the successful finesse, and the losing club could be shed on the three of diamonds.

Declarer entered his hand with a trump and took the diamond finesse; the then drew the trumps and repeated the finesse but, when diamonds and clubs both failed to break, he had to give up a club trick at the end.

Despite East's brilliance, declarer should have made the hand. West is known to have nine hearts and one spade. The clubs and diamonds cannot, therefore, break. This is corroborated, though no corroboration is necessary, by East's discard of a trump. After ruffing the heart, declarer should return to his hand with a spade and take the diamond finesse, another trump lead permits him to repeat the diamond finesse and the king shows up out of West's hand. At this point the three top clubs should be cashed and the remaining trumps led out.

Dummy discards the six of clubs and is reduced to the ace and three of diamonds. Declarer has a diamond and a club. East who holds the ten and nine of diamonds and the jack of clubs must make a discard, which he is unable to do without committing hara-kiri.

THE NOSE KNOWS

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP)—A 73-year-old African herdsman escaped being mauled to death by an enraged antelope by biting the animal on the nose. The antelope attacked Jan Pondo who was sitting under a tree. Pondo grabbed it by the horns, but the animal refused to give up. Finally in desperation Pondo bit the antelope on the nose causing it to flee.

Before an all-white background of gladioli, snapdragons, mums and seven-branch candelabra in First Congregational Church of Traverse City, Mich. Saturday evening, Jan. 18, at 7:30, Miss Elizabeth Anne Pratt exchanged marriage vows with Glenn Van Riper.

Escorted to the sanctuary by her father, the bride wore a gown of candlelight peau de soie fashioned with a scoop neckline. The bodice featured a v-shaped insert of Alencon lace embroidered with pearls and sequins with long sleeves ending in points at the wrists. The full skirt accented with an inverted v-shaped front insert of Alencon lace, ended in a full chapel-length train. A crown of pearls and sequins held her waist-length veil of bridal illusion and she carried an arrangement of white roses.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Gale R. Gleason, Jr., of Mt. Pleasant, sister of the bride, wore a ballerina-length dress of electric blue velvet styled with a modified neckline, long sleeves and full skirt of wide box pleats. A matching blue velvet bow held a circular face veil and she carried a pink nosegay.

Jack Van Riper of Fort William, Ontario, Canada, was best man for his brother. Seating the guests were Dr. Gale R. Gleason, Jr., of Mt. Pleasant, William F. Matson of Saginaw and Robert Graham of this city.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Pratt chose a three-piece silver knit suit with blue accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Van Riper chose an aqua knit suit with black accessories and pink carnation corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hoard were master and mistress of ceremonies at the reception held in the Fireside room of the church immediately following the ceremony. Assisting with the serving were Mrs. E. H. Iverson, Mrs. Jan Van Riper, Mrs. Bruce Graham, Mrs. Clarence Samuelson, Mrs. Joesph Muha and Mrs. Raymond Canute. Miss Marles Exo registered the guests.

LAUNDRY & CLEANERS

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

I would like to pass along one of my favorite hints:

When I open a new can of paint, I take a strip of a rag about an inch wide (depending on the weight of the cloth) and a little longer than the circumference of the can.

I twist this rag and push it into the groove in the top of the can. This prevents the paint from collecting there.

When I have finished painting it is then a simple matter to pull out the twisted rag "strip", and you have a nice clean groove and the lidfits perfectly, with no paint splashes, when it is pounded into place.

I then store any remaining paint in the can "upside-down" and when used again the paint mixes easily with no "skin" on top. —G. C. K.

Letters Of Truth

What would you do if your husband sat in the living room and watched baseball or football games on TV while he had a "million other things" to do, such as fixing leaky water faucets, repairing the flat tire on Jimmy's bicycle (and he needs it "now"), trimming the hedge, repairing the plug on the end of my iron (and I can't get the ironing done without it), getting a new safety sticker for the car . . . and you couldn't do any of these things yourself? — "Homemaker"

Let's leave it to our readers! Anyone have an answer? Write to Heloise care of this paper. We would like to hear both sides of this story.

Letters do "not" have to be signed to appear in this column. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

When I make powdered sugar frosting, instead of using milk or any other liquid, I use real hot "strong" coffee. It gives the icing a fudge taste and it's not at all like the usual powdered sugar icing. —Mrs. E. A.

Dear Heloise:

My husband laid a magazine on top of my hardwood coffee table and there was some moisture under it. It stuck. What can I do? I'm afraid to try sandpaper, and my fingernail and the kitchen knife won't take it off. —Housewife

Dear Homemaker:

Never use sandpaper or a kitchen knife to remove this type of stuck paper.

Take some salad oil (from your kitchen cabinet) and saturate a piece of cotton with the oil. Lay the cotton on top of the stuck paper. Leave it 24 hours. The next day wipe it with a soft cloth. May take more than one application.

Lots of people who do not keep salad oil in their homes use mayonnaise'—and yes, it works. I do not recommend mayonnaise for some types of wood, but it works on most of them. Just dip up a spoonful of mayonnaise and smear it on the stuck paper. When the paper gets oily use a cloth and wipe it off. Repeat if necessary. — Love, Heloise

Dear Heloise:

In regard to old out-dated neckties, here's what I do with them.

Anyone who can sew, can rip the ties open, lay them side by side and stitch them together. They make a novel and fascinating skirt for ballet dancers, ice skaters, roller skaters, etc.

The brighter the ties, the prettier the skirt will be. — Dorothy Louis

Dear Heloise:

For almost three years I tried in vain to get radiators in our home clean by using a radiator brush. One day I tried blowing the dirt out with the exhaust end of my vacuum cleaner. Never again will I struggle with a brush which doesn't reach where it should anyhow.

Blow the dirt from your radiator first, then clean your floor and do the dusting. —Reader

Yankee Pen Pals Find Dearth of Latin Scribes

By MARGARET RICHARDS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)— People - to - People's mail-order diplomacy branch is having a little trouble matching supply with demand, a spokesman for the international goodwill organization says.

It needs more "pen pals" in Latin America to correspond with women in the United States. Thousands of North American women, a spokesman said, have applied to write their counterparts in Latin America. They want to exchange opinions, learn of other cultures and folkways and build bridges of friendship.

Letters reveal a variety of reasons for wanting a Latin American correspondent.

A Forth Worth, Tex., woman who wrote to People-to-People requesting a Latin American pen friend said, "It would be so nice to see a friendly 'Just-because-I-want-to-write letter' in among my bills."

Another woman wrote, "I am curious to learn about people from countries I have heard a great deal about, but have never visited. I have a million questions to ask."

One woman requested the name of a housewife to write, so they could compare notes on the joys and exasperations of raising small children.

These letters were among about 10,000 letters received at People - to - People headquarters here from North Americans, most of them housewives 21 years of age or older, who would like to correspond with Latin American women.

People-to-People calls the requests for Latin American correspondents "overwhelming." As a result, the supply of names is depleted.

People-to-People is a non-profit, non-political movement of private citizens working to promote international understanding through individual communication.

The letter exchange program is one of the areas in which it hopes to stimulate international friendship through a simple, direct exchange of ideas and beliefs.

In the past year, People-to-People successfully has matched 24,000 United States citizens with writers sharing the same interests in 127 other countries.

Volunteer workers in charge of the matching have established a system which sorts correspondents on the basis of common interests. Housewives correspond with housewives, students with students, business and professional people with their counterparts in other lands.

What's New

United Press International

Chemistry's answer on how to keep dry comes in a 12-ounce spray can that puts a liquid glass coating on thread fibers. Each can provides 90 square feet of the water repellant substance that can be sprayed on anything from delicate chintz to heavy canvas. (Safeway Products, 332 Grand St., Hoboken, N.J.).

Boasting a crimp "which is the property of the fiber rather than a mechanically introduced quality" is a new seamless and run - resistant stocking. The stocking is made by a new kind of construction, incorporating monafilament - nylon yarn. (Hanes Hosiery Mills Co., Winston-Salem, N.C.).

A new instant-bonding cement, which forms a permanent and waterproof bond without pressure or clamps, has been introduced. The manufacturer said the cement bonds to wood, rubber, metal, glass, plastics, ceramics, canvas and paper. It is resistant to oil, grease and alcohol and is suggested for cementing counter tops and loose tiles as well as bonding stair treads or applying decorative trim and molding. (Devcon Corp., Danvers, Mass.).

Tai silk, now being featured by furniture manufacturers, combines the traditional richness of fine oriental fabrics with the attributes of scientifically-perfected vinyl. It was introduced at the Chicago Furniture Market and can be pleated, biscuit-tufted, or deep button-tufted without raveling. (The General Tire & Rubber Co., 155 East 44th St., New York, N.Y.).

Sax Albert Stone Weds Miss Margaret Ann Stoner

Margaret Ann Stoner and Sax Albert Stone were united in marriage Sunday Dec. 22, in Lehmberg chapel. The Rev. Dr. Ben F. Lehmberg officiated at the double ring ceremony before an altar decorated with candelabra and large bouquets of white mums, pompons, and and evergreen. White satin bows marked the first pews; and traditional Christmas greens and candles were in the windows.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Stoner, 3014 Maizeland Rd. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Stone, 706 Elling Drive, Manhattan, Kans.

Mrs. Helen Phelps provided appropriate music at the organ preceding and during the ceremony. She also accompanied Rex Stone, brother of the bridegroom, who sang "When He Gave Me You," before the ceremony, and "The Lord's Prayer," as the couple knelt at the altar during the ceremony.

The bride, escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white peau de soie. The fitted bodice was designed with round neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. Gathers and soft pleats formed the fullness of the skirt, which had a lowered back waistline, pointed at the center. Her bouffant veil of pure silk illusion was held by a crown of lace embroidered with pearls and sequins. Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls. She carried a cascade arrangement of feathered mums, centered with a white Cattleya orchid, which she later detached and wore with her three piece gray knit suit for traveling.

The bride was attended by Miss Joan Owens of Des Moines, Iowa, as maid of honor, and Miss Janice Chigro of Pueblo, as bridesmaid. Both wore street length dresses of royal blue peau de soie and matching tiaras centered with white pom pons.

Max Stone of Kalispell, Mo., brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Donald Stoner, who also assisted as an usher, was the groomsman. Jack Smith of Colorado Springs also served as an usher. All the men wore midnight - blue tuxedos with white feathered mum boutonnieres.

For her daughter's wedding the bride's mother chose a pink wool dress with white accessories. The bridegroom's mother wore a beige brocade accessories. Both wore corsages of phalaenopsis orchids.

A reception was held in the church parlor immediately following the wedding. The bride's colors of blue and white were carried out in the table arrangement. Assisting with the serving were Mrs. Burton Wilson of Prairie City, Iowa; Mrs. Wendell McBride of Colorado Springs; and Miss Neva Murphy of Littleton. Miss Jean Alice Robinson of Denver, attended the guest book.

The bride is a senior at Western State College, Gunnison. The bridgegroom, a graduate of Kansas State University, is employed by the Silver Burdett Co. The couple will make their home, temporarily, near Gunnison.

The romantic wrap's the newest way to cover up for evening. The jackets, fragile and lacy, are made of organdy and organza. Added feminine accents: ruffles.

Jewelry makers are promoting: bunchy bracelets to ring the arm, necklaces made of bigger beads to fill the plunging necklines.

Capes are seen everywhere in the spring fashion collections. Trend - setting designers put them on suit jackets, dresses, coat. They ranged from elbow to longer lengths and tended to be more molded than billowy.

Even non - swimmers will be plunging come spring. Necklines go deep, beautiful and feminine. Other necklines are cowled, often multiple cowls, circling like smoke rings 'round the throat.

Sculptured wool columns in the new James Galanos collection were commandingly simple evening dresses. The only accent: the California designer's white starched camellia with jeweled stem.

Formally attired, the leather slipon for men drops the ties and strap treatments and adopts a sleek look for spring and summer. Side gores are hidden, toes are plain or wing-tip, and leather textures are mirror smooth or very fine grained.

Cobb-Vanderlinden Nuptials Held in Commerce City

Caren A. Vanderlinden and James S. Cobb were united in marriage in a double ring ceremony recently at Goode Centennial Methodist Church, Commerce City, Colo. The Rev. C. E. Birkmeyer performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Lucille E. Vanderlinden and the late C. T. Vanderlinden of Commerce City. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George O. Cobb of Colorado Springs.

The altar was decorated with two sprays of white gladioli and carnations. The altar also held candelabra and an open Bible. The pews were decorated with white satin bows and holly.

The bride, given in marriage by her grandfather, Frank Sheets, wore a floor length gown of imported peau taffeta featuring appliqued alencon lace at the neckline. The gown had a sabrina neckline, long pointed sleeves, a figure molding bodice and bouffant bell-shaped skirt. The fingertip veil of silk illusion fell from a crown of alencon lace accented with seed pearls and the chapel length train was detachable. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Enid Ritchy, and the bridesmaids, Miss Linda Power, Miss Anita Cobb and Miss Lynn Vanderlinden, wore red velveteen dresses with white fur crowns and muffs with holly.

The candlelighters were the Misses Claudia and Carla Blide. The flower girl was Sandra Lynn Davis and the ringbearer was Ray Leon Detherage.

Richard S. O'Donnell was the best man. G. Thomas Morton and J. D. Vanderlinden were groomsmen, and the ushers were T. Arthur Howells, Charles L. Martin and C. Harry Blunt.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony at the Kearney Motor Hotel in Denver. The reception tables were decorated with holly and white roses. Miss Martha Maguire was in charge of the guest book.

After a two week wedding trip thru Old Mexico and Southern California, the couple will be at home on Overlook Rd., Cheyenne Mountain.

The bride and bridegroom are attending the University of Colorado and will return there in June.

The Mature Parent

'Imperishable' Friendship

By Mrs. Muriel Lawrence
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Often, after we have become a mother, we find very peculiar things happening to our old friendships. The unmarried roommate with whom we once shared an apartment comes to weekend with us—and we find our minds wandering away from conversation we used to find stimulating.

As she tells us about the men she's dating, the possibility that her firm will send her to Paris, her impressions of off-Broadway's latest hit, the interests of the "best" friend with whom we once had so much in common suddenly seem as remote from us as the moon.

We think, "My goodness, what foolish things Jane goes on about! Isn't that the baby crying? It's that tooth coming in . . ."

I mention this common experience in response to a mother who writes:

"Our 11 -year - old girl has formed a friendship with a new neighbor's child who at first seemed a quiet and well-mannered little girl. Now I don't trust her at all. She has gained influence over Betty who runs to the telephone to complain about me whenever we have any argument. There is no use in forbidding the calls as they see each other in school every day. My husband thinks that this child encourages Betty to exaggerate her troubles with me because she has problems at home of her own. I know that parents are not supposed to interfere with children's friendships. But this girl is not a friend . . ."

You know that, Betty doesn't. It's what she has to find out. I know that it's hard to let her find out. But if we will remember how time alters our attachments to people who were once our "best" friends, it may become a little easier. We lose some of the anxiety that insists we must detach the child from the friend we consider undesirable and find it easier to stand aside so that he can discover the undesirability for himself. Our own emotional experience with outgrown friends comes to our rescue and supports what we know with our brains.

However, by "standing aside" I do not mean effacing ourselves and our feelings toward the child's undesirable friend. Par- opinion, to express their disapproval of a child's friend. What we are not entitled to do is to demand that he share it.

Griffith-Ray Vows Recited In Pleasant Valley Baptist

Glenys Mae Ray became the bride of Duffy Clarence Griffith in a double ring ceremony performed recently at Pleasant Valley Baptist Church, the Rev. L. D. Sowder officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Bessie I. Ray of Springfield, Mo. and Archie L. Ray of Lamar. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion D. Griffith, 1118 W. Vermijo St.

The altar was decorated with green and white feathered carnations with fern. Mrs. Wanda Shoemaker, organist, played traditional nuptial music and Lloyd Rigby sang "Because" and "The Wedding Prayer"

The bride, given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Charles Smith, wore a gown of chantilly lace and taffeta featuring a fitted bodice and long tapered sleeves. The scalloped neckline shaped a "V" in the back and was scattered with seed pearls and sequins. The full skirt flared in front from a pointed waistline. The chapel train began from a dropped waist accented with five lace rosebuds. The scalloped hem also had seed pearls and sequins scattered thru it. The bride's only jewelry was a strand of pearls.

Layers of imported silk illusion, gathered to a single rose set in orange blossoms, formed a bouffant veil that fell to the bride's shoulders. She carried a large white orchid and stephanotis arranged with green and white streamers on a satin and lace covered Bible.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Rose Ann Smith, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaid, Mrs. Mary Lou Moore, sister of the bridegroom, wore identical emerald green taffeta sheath dresses. Their hats were crowns of matching taffeta with self bows and circles of net veiling. They also wore matching pin sets and carried bouquets of green and white feathered carnations.

Miss Linda Lea Ray, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore an emerald green dress with a flared skirt and long puffed sleeves. The skirt was covered with a lace apron and she carried a basket of rose petals.

The ringbearer was Michael James Griffith, nephew of the bridegroom. He carried the rings on a heart shaped pillow of satin and lace with white streamers.

Jim Wilson was the best man. Charles Griffith, brother of the bridegroom, and Glen Ray, the bride's twin brother, were ushers.

The bride's mother wore a royal blue silk suit with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations trimmed with silver ribbons. The bridegroom's mother wore a black velvet suit with pink accessoris and white carnation corsage trimmed with silver ribbons.

The reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the church parlor. The table carried the green and white theme. The five tier cake was white with green decorations, fading to a pure white top layer. This was a gift from Mrs. Robert Johnson, who made it. Helping Mrs. Johnson serve were Mrs. Kenneth Ray, Mrs. James Griffith and Mrs. Delpha Leavenworth. Miss Sharon Rigby took care of the guest book.

The bride wore a green and black plaid knitted suit with beige accessories and a corsage from the bridal bouquet for her traveling ensemble. The couple will live in Long Beach, Calif., where the bridegroom is currently stationed with the Navy.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of Palmer High School. The bridegroom is a fireman in the Navy and has just returned from a cruise on USS Princeton.

The out of town guests were the bride's mother and brother from Springfield, Mo.; Mrs. Kenneth Ray, David, Linda and Kevin of Loveland; Mr. and Mrs. James Griffith, Mike and Randy Canon City; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, Terry and Kathy, Grand Junction; and Mrs. Rowena Gruber, Denver.

Theta Sigma Phis to Hear Travel Talks Wednesday

Members of Theta Sigma Phi, national professional organization for women in journalism and communications, will have their regular February meeting at 8 p.m. Wednesday, when they will be guests of Mrs. George R. Lum, 601 N. 30th St.

Mrs. Robert L. Turnbaugh, president, urges all Theta Sigma Phi members in the region to attend and to join in activities of the group. Since local military units have been enlarged and there are many families new to the area, she particularly invites any members of Theta Sigma Phi from these groups. Also an invitation is extended to Theta Sigma Phi members whether residents or guests. Mrs. Lum may be contacted at 633-0565, for reservations.

Following a short business meeting, the program will be presented by two members who last fall took trips to foreign countries, and who will give resumes of their journeys, telling something of the scenery, peoples, and customs observed during their visits to other lands.

Mrs. Harold D. Stumbough, who with Mr. Stumbough, had a voyage to South America, with major distances covered by jet plane, will relate some of their experiences in Latin America.

They visited Mexico City; Lima, then Cusco, Peru, from which point they went to see the Inca Ruins; they visited Sao Paulo, Brazil, where they were guests of native Brazil friends; after visiting Rio de Janeiro, Brazil they took the longest overland flight in the world, 300 miles, from Rio to Caracas, Venezuela. Before returning to Colorado, they made a stop in Houston, Tex., to visit their son and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Charles Stumbough, and two sons, who formerly resided in Manitou Springs.

Mrs. Gladys H. Carlson joined the annual KKTV tour, leaving Colorado Springs the latter part of September and returning Oct. 30, after visiting nine countries of Europe. Major distances on this journey also were made by jet plane, with chartered sight-seeing busses engaged at each destination for transportation to principal points of interest nearby.

Countries visited were: Ireland, Scotland, England, Germany, where the party's bus was permitted to cross the Berlin Wall and to make a tour of East Brlin; Amsterdam, Netherlands, Venice of the North, where trips along the canals were made in a glass-topped motoboat; Brussels, Belgium; Paris, France; Madrid, Spain, and finally, Lisbon, Portugal, from which point the return flight was made.

Beacuse the first Wednesday of January, regular meeting date, was on New Year's Day, there was no meeting during that month. The last meeting was the annual Christmas dinner and party, with husbands as guests, at the Antlers Hotel.

A talk was given by Virginia McConnell, author of, "Ute Pass Route of the Blue Sky People." She believes that history is both vital and exciting, and gave numerous examples of how Ute Pass has served in development of this region. The Pass always has been used for transportation. First by Indians who trod it by foot, then by gold seekers on foot and by burro and horse, and there followed the development of the railroad, which afforded access to Cripple Creek and Victor and the mines of the vicinity.

"Ute Pass will remain the principal inlet to the mountains," declared Mrs. McConnell. "Its use since early days and establishment of the railroad trace the real history of the development of the region. Colorado Springs started as a resort town, which was spurred greatly by the railroad. Towns nearby have grown with an increase of year-round residents. Also there has been an increase of tourists, and traffic up and down the Pass has multiplied many times. I only wonder if the greater population and closer settlements will obliterate the natural beauty which induced people to live there originally."

Individuals who have helped to make the history of the area have kept records which aid to those wishing to do research." According to Mrs. McConnell, one of the best sources of material is the microfilm record of early newspapers. Pioneer Museum has much data, but does not have sufficient personnel to handle the material, and is in need of financial backing to afford means of proper cataloguing. Tutt library has an excellent historical collection, but is rather inaccessible. One of the best sources of historical information is the Denver Public Library, which also has excellent facilities for obtaining material, Mrs. McConnell announced.

The program was concluded with a group of operatic and light musical sketches by members of the Colorado Springs Opera Association. Dr. Julius Baird was both piano accompanist and conductor; other members of the vocal group were: Sheila Volkman, George Garriques, Phil Layton, Jerry Teske and Cliff Kolstrud. They presented a scene from, "A Mall and the Night Visitors."

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

To Those in Doubt—

DEAR ABBY: As a journalist, responsible for writing the truth, did you do a competent research job before giving credit to the Houston Police Department for "Ten Easy Rules for Raising A Delinquent"? —Sincerely yours, MINISTER, PHILLIPSBURG, KANSAS

My Dear Reverend: The item in question was sent to me by a Chicago reader, crediting the Houston Police Department with authorship. Believing that people are honest until proved otherwise, I ran it verbatim, including the credit. My primary purpose in using the item was to share it with my readers, not to applaud the author. I have since heard from 22 readers, each ascribing authorship of "The Rules" to a different source. If the Houston Police Department did not originate them, I hope the real author will step forward, make himself known and accept my apologies. And now I am reminded of an appropriate quote (I know not whose): "There is no end to the amount of good people could accomplish in this world if nobody cared who got the credit." —Respectfully yours, ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a newspaper compositor and your column comes to my attention frequently. I agree with your advice—most of the time. An exception being your reply to the man whose name was erroneously included with the list of employees who, though uninvited to the wedding, gave the boss' daughter a gift. His reasons for not conforming were valid, and his name could have been added purposely either to make him conform; become a conspicuous nonconformist in the eyes of his boss; or live a lie among his associates. Your reply dictates that he should allow himself to be tricked into donating to something he believes to be incorrect or to expose himself to a potentially vindictive superior. I feel he should be defended and commended — let the one who added his name to the list kick in with the five bucks. —TED FARABEE

DEAR MR. FARABEE: I don't know for which newspaper you work, but they are lucky. Although I gave a great deal of thought to my reply, I must admit I missed the boat. Your answer was better, and I thank you.

DEAR ABBY: My brother claims to be a religious man, but when he does his chores (he is a farmer) he beats his animals so unmercifully it would make you sick to watch him. I saw him club a poor old cow so bad one day I actually cried for her. Another time, I saw him kick a newborn calf halfway across the barn for no reason at all. He also kicked a pig in the mouth until it bled just because it wouldn't wait until he had put all the food in the trough. This same brother can quote passages from the Bible as good as any preacher. I go to church, but I don't attend as regularly as he does. He wouldn't miss a service for anything. Now, what kind of religion do you call that? —NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Your brother may be exposed to religion, and even preach it, but he isn't practicing it. It's difficult to believe that a man who is as familiar with the word of the Lord could behave so inhumanely to any of God's creatures. I think he needs to have his head examined.

Get if off your chest. For a personal, unpublished reply, write to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send one dollar to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif., for Abby's new booklet, "HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS."

Research, Surgery Help Rheumatoid Arthritis Victims

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — A barber, 52, lost his job when the fingers and knucles of his bread-winning hand came to a standstill because of rheumatoid arthritis.

Pain locked his hands to the no-move point.

Surgeons removed the diseased middle joints of his crippled fingers. Stainless steel hinges were inserted.

Three weeks after the barber's date in the operating room he resumed trimming hair.

The case of the rehabilitated barber is just one of dozens on file under "S" — for success — at the National Foundation, the March of Dimes voluntary health associaton that runs 26 arthritis treatment and research centers nationwide.

Or, take the case of the general manager of an Alaskan broadcasting network.

The same savage disease struck him 20 years ago. He eventually reached the point where he could not walk. Some time ago he underwent orthopedic surgery on both knees and legs.

Today, the foundation reports, he walks unaided and travels constantly to his stations in Anchorage, Fairbanks and Juneau.

These capsule histories are typical of the increasing reliance on orthopedic surgery today in the treatment of certain cases of rheumatoid arthritis.

Surgeons are quick to note that surgery is no panacea for the disease. They emphasize it is only "one" mode of therapy among others.

But, whereas only a few years ago, many eminent rheumatologists avoided surgery as being "meddlesome," today the rheumatologist will frequently call in the surgeon as an invaluable ally.

Several of the nation's leading orthopedic surgeons, specializing in rheumatoid arthritis, recently were asked by the foundation to express their views on the usefulness of surgery in treatment of the disease.

They all agreed there was far more recourse to surgery now than even five years ago. They felt there should be more, ranging from preventive or prophylatic surgery in early stages of the disease to its practice in far more advanced cases.

"With early surgery, in many cases, we can often avoid a lifetime of crippling," says Dr. Peter Casagrande, assistant clinical professor of orthopedics at the University of Buffalo and orthopedic surgeon at the March of Dimes Arthritis Center in Buffalo General Hospital.

"Surgery in arthritis has become versatile. We can help even an advanced 'burnt-out' case — at least, say, to feed himself or comb his hair.

"To the advanced sufferer, the benefit physically and psychologically is enormous. Progress in hips, knee and hand surgery has been phenomenal."

Another expert, Dr. Adrian E. Flatt, associate profressor of orthopedic surgery at State University of Iowa, Iowa City, noted that surgery isn't the answer in every case of rheumatoid arthritis, but he also warned of the dangers present in a "wait and see" attitude.

"This is a reasonable policy, but it depends on who is doing the waiting and seeing," Dr. Flatt said. "If it's being done by the orthopedic surgeon, well and good.

"If it's being done by the untrained patient or members of his family, that policy is exceedingly dangerous. In some of those cases, crippling is just around the corner."

Meanwhile, Dr. Louis H. Paradies, orthopedic surgeon at Southwestern Medical College, University of Texas, Dallas, and a "medical team" member of the March of Dimes Arthritis Center there, put the case for corrective surgery this way:

"More and more we orthopedic surgeons are on the outlook for the rheumatoid arthritis patient with an incipient crippling deformity. This deformity is what we want to—and often can—prevent if we see the patient early enough. We are now seeing such patients sooner — in time to be able to help."

Why has this kind of corrective surgery increased in recent times?

Dr. Robert Duthis, orthopedic surgeon at the University of Rochester, and a member of the March of Dimes surgical team there, answers the question this way:

"Probably the chief reason for the widening resort to surgery in arthritis is that there has been little advance in drug therapy in this disease in recent years.

Based on the foundation's survey of leading orthopedic surgeons, the breakthrough in restorative surgery is just a wagon train ahead of the scientific research into the causes of rheumatoid arthritis.

The scientists are hoping for the day when medicine is at its best: at the preventive stage.

The foundation thought in terms of prevention through research in its fight against polio. The hope has paid off.

Cook's Tour

By JEANNE LESEM

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hamburguesas (Spanish for hamburgers) and snack bars lend an American air to Spain these days, but meal hours remain dreadfully late by United States' standards, says Betty Wason, food expert and author.

"You can get lunch by one o'clock, but the Spanish don't eat until two or three," she said in an interview after a recent trip to Spain. "Breakfast is early—usually just a beverage and dry bread. Las onces, the English elevenses, served about 11 a.m., is like a small lunch to us—sherry, coffee or beer, sandwiches and tapas. Tapas are bite - sized appetizers, mostly made with seafood.

"One of the most delicious is salpichon de mariscos, a mixture of seafood with finely chopped peas, carrots and onions. It's served cold, to be eaten with a spoon."

The big meal is lunch, and usually consists of a hot fish course, a meat course and desert, said Miss Wason. The last is nearly always fresh fruit — pastries and other sweets are served separately at coffee houses between lunch and supper.

"Restaurants open for supper at nine p.m., but few Spanish eat before ten and some as late as midnight," she said. When supper finally comes, it usually consists of soup and a tortilla, the authentic Spanish omelet—not a Mexican - style tortilla. Such omelets may contain a variety of ingredients, including seafood, meat, chicken livers or vegetables.

In between, there are snacks—the teenagers' favortie hamburguesas, perros calientas (hot dogs), pollo al ast (rotisserie-cooked chicken) and tapas. The big tapa time is from 7 to 9 p.m., accompanied by very light dry sherry, lower in alcoholic content than the export variety, said Miss Wason.

So-called regional dishes are served far from their points of origin these days, she said. The recipes vary only in the use of locally plentiful foods. Paella, the rice, meat, poultry, and seafood dish of Valencia, is available so widely that many visitors think it is the national dish, she said.

"But is isn't. It's cocido, chickpea stew containing meat. Yet, I've never yet seen cocido on a restuarant menu there," she added. "I'm sure paella is a gift of the Moors. They brought rice to Spain, but potatoes are eaten much more often than rice in most of Spain. Incidentally, you are never supposed to order paella at night. It's cooked to order and the chefs are too tired to make it by nightfall."

She added that the Moorish influence also shows in the wide use of oriental spices such as cumin, saffron and cloves, and the inclusion of fruit in meat rice and fish dishes and sauces.

"Practically every Spanish sauce starts with olive oil, garlic, onion and parsley, fistfuls of parsley," she said. "Spain produces 65 per cent of the world's olive oil, so it's plentiful and cheap there and better than butter,which psiols quickly in a country where regrigeration is scarce."

Other typical foods include pimientos, eggs and fish. "I once counted 36 egg dishes on a menu in Malaga—and the fresh fish is wonderful, too. Trucks rush it inland overnight from the north and south coasts, and no one will buy fish more than a day old."

Household Hints

United Press International

Looking for the most cheese per pound? Select a natural or a pasturized process cheese. If you want a specialty cheese, one that is milder, easy to spread and quick to melt, select a cheese food or a cheese spread.

Medium size potatoes are preferred for general use. It's easy to estimate portions and there is less waste in paring than there is with small potatoes.

Heavily starched linens will not stick to a clothes line if you place a piece of wax paper on the line.

To cool angel food cake rapidly, invert the pan and place a tray of ice cubes on it.

To ease threading of a needle, push it through a piece of white paper. The white background will help you see the eye better.

To keep gravy from becoming lumpy, mix a pinch of salt to the flour before adding water.

Cut fur leather with a sharp knife or razor blade, never with scissors.

Clean grease stains with carbon tetrachloride before washing.

Baby's Cry Tugged At Heart of Soldier

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI)—On a bitterly cold morning in the winter of 1952, an eight-man intelligence unit of the U.S. Army entered a demolished village that had been pounded to pieces by north Korean artillery night before.

The village of grass-thatched mud huts seemed to be populated only by the dead bodies of its unfortunate inhabitants. Those who escaped death had fled into the hills.

But as Master Sgt. James R. Briney and his seven companions eased into the striken village, he heard the voice of life amidst the tragedy of death.

"It was a baby crying," Briney recalls. "We followed the faint sound and found a baby sitting on the floor of a partly demolished hut. There were dead women in the room. One of them was presumed to be her mother."

Little Kim Yong Hi, as she was registered on her birth certificate, was taken by Briney to an old woman for safe-keeping. He gave her money for food and clothing for the child. Later Briney took the baby to an orphanage, visited her every Sunday, left money for her care and wrote his wife back in the United States about the experience.

It was not difficult for Briney and his wife, although they had four children of their own, to decide what they should do — adopt Kim Yong Hi.

At the age of three, the child began a new life in the United States and her name was changed to Brenda Sue Briney.

At 14, Brenda today is a typical teen-ager who shares in all the activities at the Briney household in Augusta. The silk jacket and red silk skirt (containing the gold-imprinted seals of approval from Korean mayor and President Syngman Rhee) have been replaced by American skirts and blouses.

Brenda shares a room with her 18-year-old foster sister, Helyn, and their room is filled with dolls, records, souvenirs and trinkets. At Murphy Junior High Brenda is a bright student. She likes to cook but her favorite dishes are Italian, not Korean.

Queen Studies Open Door Palace Policies

By MARGARET SAVILLE

LONDON (UPI) — Britons—and tourists—may in the near future see the inside of Buckingham Palace, including the state apartments, for the first time.

Queen Elizabeth, United Press International learns, has asked her palace staff to look into the possibility of opening at least part of the United Kingdom's chief royal residence to public view.

State apartments might be thrown open—as they are now at Windsor Castle — when the royal family is not in residence.

This summer the Queen also intends to open the royal mews behind the palace, where the state coaches and other equipages are kept.

It's all part of a long-term plan for Buckingham Palace to become more a kind of formal London headquarters for the Queen and Prince Philip, where they carry out official duties, attend to correspondence and receive and entertain their visitors. For family life, they are turning increasingly to Windsor Castle, an hour's drive from London.

At Windsor they can enjoy a privacy impossible at Buckingham Palace which now is overlooked by several new skyscraper buildings.

Such customs as family tea on the lawn in summer and walking the dogs could be watched by hundreds of spectators at their windows. At Windsor the Queen and her family can go riding, swim in the pool, stroll in secluded gardens and play lawn games completely in private.

Following the birth of her fourth child in about two months, the Queen plans to spend several weeks resting at Windsor and to hold an Easter house-party there.

It's wise to cut meat for stews into cubes that are at least 1 inch.

Teaching Approach Adds Interest in Foreign Affairs

By MIKE FEINSILBER
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — The subject is arithmetic and the teacher holds up a textbook from Greece. Her class is delighted to discover it can do the math without understanding the printed words.

The subject is physical education and the pupils learn the games of children abroad.

The subject is business education and the class of future secretaries learns the format of a good business letter written by a Japanese steelmaker who wants to build a bridge in Denmark.

In this way, an understanding of the world at large is being integrated into the classrooms of America.

The trend—and ways to foster it — are surveyed in a special issue of "Intercom," a periodical published by the Foreign Policy Association (FPA), which seeks to stimulate interest in foreign affairs.

The FPA acknowledges that teaching international affairs can be a touchy topic. "In some communities," it says, there will be opposition "from those who fear that teaching about the world is somehow equivalent to teaching what they fearfully call one-worldism . . . that it will somehow fail to foster and may even lessen the patriotism of the students . . ."

But, it argues, "This is a nation governed by consent" and "its continuing greatness depends upon how well its citizens understand the world in which our national purpose must be served.

"Education for international understanding does not imply a sentimental blurring of distinctions. It means understanding peoples' differences as well as their similarities, a recognition of conflicting interests as well as of common human needs."

The day is coming, Intercom says, when "a course or textbook, whether it deals with art or economics, with literature or social studies, which stays within the old limits of the U.S. and Western Europe will be as obsolete as a medical book which does not take into account the circulation of the blood."

Intercom cited these examples of the new education movement:

—In Glen Falls, N.Y., teachers of all subjects gave their classwork an international overtone. Homemaking teachers brought in geography in discussing food and clothing styles from abroad. Soon the community joined in, started a town-wide world affairs program, organized a World Affair Council and adopted a sister city in Europe.

—Pennsylvania made a "world cultures" course part of its schools' required curriculum. Explained a Pennsylvania educator: "International understanding is another term for survival and we feel that our mandated world cultures is a 'survival' course."

—St. Paul, Minn., borrowed the teaching techniques of Oxford University for a six-week summer course for high school students on "Africa: Images and Realities," co-sponsored by the public school system and the Junior League. Experts are on tap, but each student is responsible for his own conduct and his own learning in seminars led by students themselves. Africans in this country on diplomatic business participate. A local television station offers programs on Africa and the library, museum and art gallery cooperate.

—Piattsburgh State University College for teachers in New York State is seeking to find out how exposing a college student to four years of "education for international understanding" affects his outlook. The college is recruiting foreign students and faculty members and "globalizing" its entire academic program so that every course ties its subject to relevant topics from abroad.

The Intercom issue also lists projects undertaken outside the classroom to stimulate interest in world affairs.

Among them are exchange letters with youngsters abroad, exchange art and records; recorded "talking letters," exchange students, model United Nations sessions, essay contests and the FPA's well-known "Great Decisions" discussion program which involves 900 schools with 50,000 pupils and thousands of adults.

The magazine seeks to forestall the argument that extra courses in any subject — driving, cooking or international affairs — weakens education in the basics, the three R's.

"What we are talking about here is not a new educational gimmick," it says, "not just another course to pack into the already tightly packed curriculum. The implications of the new up-to-date three dimensional globe permeate the whole curriculum."

Forty thousand extra copies of the magazine were printed for distribution to teachers and school officials with a grant from the New World Foundation.

Now Is the Time to Sew

By MARY BROOKS PICKEN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

There is so much more sewing done in the first five months of the year. Somehow after the hectic winter holidays, women's thoughts turn to spring and Easter sewing, vacations and hoped-for leisure moments. Clothes buying and making are largely influenced by what we need — what we can "make do" with and what we must have new.

The New York World's Fair will be a great incentvie to make clothes ready for a spring or early summer vacation. A fair is a "workout." Really it is hard work. Comfortable, easy, good-looking clothes are a necessity.

Sloppy clothes will be seen, but people who wear them do not do themselves proud. We can make attractive clothes now that will pack nicely, take hard wear and still look presentable, even after several days of sightseeing.

Here are some fashion tips that should help you with your early sewing.

Color — Bright, clear pastels are favored above all else — and bright they are. Almost any pastel, if it has real color and is becoming to you, is a completely safe buy.

Norman Norell, one of our greatest designers, predicts a navy blue spring and summer. He uses it abundantly and with stark white.

Fabrics — There are more plain than printed fabrics, yet there are many prints; a great deal of Schiffli all-over embroidery. Linens and imitation linens are in big favor. Lace is seen for sleeves, to trim the neckline, which is lower in many instances. Lace emphasizes femininity, which is perhaps fashion's most heralded feature for the new season.

There is definitely a softer look, much less trimming. The dress, suit or coat depends on color and fabric quality; a simple cut to give it the true feminine elegance that 1964 acclaims.

Waistlines are finding their natural habitat, even on shift dresses.

Skirt Lengths — Some say a wee bit shorter. Norell says they just cover the knee, a length becoming to most.

Sleeves — Sleeves minus, sleeves short, sleeves just below the elbow, only a very few are longer.

Choose fabrics that will not soil quickly, choose those that will pack easily and require a minimum of pressing. Sew for fashion rightness. Sew several dresses. Make each one as perfect as you can, but each with a minimum of tedious detail.

Prepare for the good sewing months ahead now. Buy patterns, fabrics, matching thread and zippers, bindings, anything you need to complete a garment. Buy for several dresses. When the rainy bleak days come, get out your sewing. Make every stroke count; do your cutting, basting and fitting, stitching and pressing. Save the handwork for evenings when you are enjoying good music or the television.

You will be surprised how much sewing you can accomplish by planning ahead. Just as with any creative work, you must make time for it and become so interested that you will forget all else until your creation is finished.

ASPINALL 'CONFIDENT'

DENVER (UPI)—Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall, D-Colo., chairman of the House Interior Committee, said Thursday "I am confident of final action this year" on the much delayed wilderness bill. Aspinall said he would try to get a "satisfactory" bill through Congress this session. Aspinall's public lands subcommittee recently conducted hearings at Denver, Olympia, Wash., and Las Vegas, Nev., on wilderness legislation.

CHICAGO (UPI) — On washday, the modern housewife must cope with a combination of washer speeds, cycles, water levels and temperatures, 422 assorted detergents, conditioners, starches and bleaches.

Add to this chemical laboratory problems of hard water, lint, fading, yellowing, shrinking and even legislative charges that high suds detergents pollute local water supplies, and it becomes clear how far washday has progressed beyond the scrub board and a cake of yellow soap.

The nation's home laundry bill is approximately $4.5 billion a year, says Glenn Evans, chairman of the American Home Laundry Manufacturers Association.

"Equipment has been simplified and improved and fabrics are more washable and easier to care for," Evans said. "But the constant advances in equipment, fabrics and laundry supplies add up to complexity and confusion unless the housewife gains some knowledge and skill in the field of home laundry."

Evans, who also is vice president of the Whirlpool Corp., said tests conducted by his firm showed that an expert homemaker with top equipment and thorough knowledge of additives and fabrics should be able to do her weekly laundry in 66 minutes per member of the family.

If she still owns a 1954 automatic washer and belongs to the 80 per cent of households who do not own dryers, she will spend 93 minutes per week per family member, and 139 minutes with a wringer washer, Evans said.

Evans said that laundry manufacturers must provide more instruction on how to wash the multitude of new fabrics and how to care for new laundry equipment.

"A great many homemakers still believe lint is only the tearing down of fabrics. Some refuse to recognize the importance of rinsing the filter after each use, or the differences between combed and uncombed cottons, lint-resistant and lint-prone fabrics," he said.

"Or consider our non-communications in service. When the lady gets a new car, she accepts a long list of things she must do to keep up her investment," Evans said.

"She must periodically change the oil, check the battery, add anti-freeze, rotate tires, replace spark plugs and check the fan belt. Her clothes dryer also has a belt, but nobody insists that she check it," he said.

Evans urged manufacturers to give better instructions on how to operate modern equipment.

"The more the homemaker knows, the less time she will need for thinking, planning, and correcting errors," he said.

Check Socks For Feet's Sake

NEW YORK (UPI) — Salespeople in children's shoe departments refer to socks as the "forgotten partner" — since it takes both shoes and socks to provide real foot comfort.

Mothers who are careful to have children's shoes properly fitted, often spend little thought on buying socks. One important point to keep in mind after the first washing, socks should be one-half-inch longer than the child's longest toe.

Don't guess about proper fit. Salespoeple know how to determine sock size by the size of the shoe. From then on, check from time to time to determine whether your child's feet are getting ahead of the sock length.

Also remember that a normal youngster's activity is hard on his feet. A sudsy foot bath every day and frequent changes to freshly laundered socks will add to both foot comfort and health.

If you are making hot chocolate (from cocoa or chocolate) at home, don't remove any film that forms at the top because it holds calcium and protein; just beat the beverage before serving.

Mrs. Charles Hall who observed her 93 birthday last week tells that when sh was five years old and living in Springfield, Mo. She was very fond of reciting poetry. One day her father who called her "Pinkie" on account of her pink cheeks, gave her the poem below and told her that if she would learn it well enough to recite that night at supper he would give her a dime. She wanted the dime very bad so worked hard at the verse until she had learned it, putting in all the proper gestures in which her father so delighted.

THE DRUNKARD

"As I was walking down the street
A drunkard chap I chanced to meet—
So vexed and earnest was his gaze
That I thought to ask what made his maze.
Now on a store just closely by
A sign hung forth, 'Cash paid for hides'
And close beside it on a nail,
Out from a knothole hung a tail.
A calf's tail it was hung for a sign
For a calf skin leather rare and fine.
The drunkard said, 'I cannot see upon my soul
how that calf got thru that hole hole.
But there it was beyond a doubt
The calf got thru and the tail hangs out.
I smiled and left my drunkard friend, no
Aid to him my words could lend. He's Standing yet, for all I know
Wondering where that calf did go'"

William S. Crosby has sent us the following article. It was found in an old scrapbook made by Mr. Crosby and his wife over sixty years ago.

"The Brakeman at Church"

The Burlington Hawkeye gets off the following good thing on "The Brakeman at Church."

On the road once more, with Lebanon fading away in the distance, the fat passenger drumming idly on the window pane, the cross passenger sound asleep, and the tall, thin passenger reading "Gen. Grant's Tour Around the World" and wondering why Blair's Keystone Stationery should be painted above the doors of A Buddhist Temple at Benares. To me comes the brakeman, and seating himself on the arm of the seat, says:

"I went to church yesterday."

"Yes?" I said, with that interested inflection that asks for more. "And what church did you attend?"

"Which do you guess?" he asked.

"Some union mission church?" I hazarded.

"No," he said. "I don't like to run on these branch roads very much. I don't often go to church, and when I do, I want to run on the main line, where your run is regular, and you go on schedule time, and don't have to wait on connections."

"Episcopal?" I guessed.

"Limited express," he said, "all palace cars, and two dollars extra for a seat, fast time, and only stop at the big stations. Nice line, but too exhaustive for a brakeman. All trainmen in uniform, conductor's punch and lantern silver plated, and no train boys allowed. Then the passengers are allowed to talk back to the conductor, and it makes them too free and easy. No, I couldn't stand the palace cars. Rich road, though. Don't often hear of a receiver being appointed for that line. Some mighty nice people travel on it, too."

"Universalist?" I suggested.

"Broad gauge," said the brakeman, "does too much complimentary business. Everybody travels on a pass. Conductor doesn't get a fare once in every fifty miles. Stops at all flag stations, and won't run into anything but a union depot. No smoking - car on the train. Train orders are rather vauge, though, and the trainmen don't get along well with the passengers. No, I don't go to the Universalist, though I know some awfully good men who run on that road."

"Presbyterian?" I asked.

"Narrow gauge, eh?" said the brakeman, "pretty track, straight as a rule; tunnel right through a mountain rather than go around it; spirit-level grade; passengers have to show their tickets before they get on the train. Mighty strict road, but the cars are a little narrow; have to sit one in a seat and no room in the aisle to dance. Then there is no stop over tickets allowed; got to go straight through to the station you're ticketed for, or you can't get on at all. When the car's full, no extra coaches; cars are built at the shops just to hold so many, and nobody else allowed on. But you don't often hear of an accident on that road. It's run right up to the rules."

"May be you joined the Free Thinkers," I said.

"Scrub road," said the brakeman, "dirt road-bed and no ballast, no time card and no train dispatcher. All trains run wild, and every engineer makes his own time, just as he pleases. Smoke if you want to; kind of a go-as-you-please road. Too many side tracks, and every switch open all the time, with the switchman sound asleep, and the target lamp dead out. Get on as you please and off when you want to. Don't have to show your tickets, and the conductor isn't expected to do anything but amuse the passengers. No, sir, I was offered a pass, but I don't like the line. I don't like to travel on a road that has no terminus. Do you know, sir, I asked a division superintendent where that road run to, and he said he hoped he'd die if he knew. I asked him if the general superintendent could tell me, and he said he didn't believe they had a general superintendent, and if they had, he didn't know anything more about the road than the passengers. I asked him who he reported to, and he said, 'Nobody'. I asked a conductor who he got his orders from, and he said he 'didn't take orders from any living man or dead ghost.' And when I asked the engineer who he got his orders from, he said, 'he'd like to see anybody give him orders; he'd run that train to suit himself, or he'd run her in the ditch'. Now, you see, sir, I'm a railroad man, and I don't care to run on a road that has no time, or makes no connections, runs nowhere and has no superintendent. It may be all right, but I've railroaded too long to understand it."

"May be you wnt to the Congregational Church?" I said.

"Popular road," said the brakeman, "an old road, too; one of the very oldest in this country. Good road - bed and comfortable cars. Well - managed road, too; directors don't intefere with division superintendents and train orders. Road's mighty popular, but it's pretty independent, too. Yes, didn't one of the division superintendents down East discontinue one of the oldest stations on this line to or three years ago? But it's a mighty pleasant road to travel on. Always has such a splendid class of passengers."

"Did you try the Methodist?" I said.

"Now you're shouting," he said with some enthusiasm. "Nice road, eh? Fast time and plenty of passengers. Engines carry a power of steam, and don't you forget it; steam gauge shows a hundred and enough all the time. Lively road; When the conductor shouts 'all aboard', you can hear him to the next station. Every train-light shines like a head-light. Stop over checks are given on all through tickets; passengers can drop off the train as often as he likes do the station two or three times, and hop on the next revival train that comes thundering along. Good, whole-souled companionable conductors; ain't a road in the country where the passengers feel more at home. No passes; every passenger pays full traffic rates for his ticket. Wesleyan air brakes on all trains, too; pretty safe road, but I didn't ride over it yesterday."

"Perhaps you tried the Baptist?" I guessed once more.

"Ah, ah!" said the brakeman, "she's a daisy, ain't she? River road, beautiful curves; sweeps around anything to keep close to the river, but it's all steel rail and rock ballast, single track all the way, and not a side track from the roundhouse to the terminus. It takes a heap of water to run it through; double tanks at every station, and there isn't an engine in the shops that can pull a pound or run a mile with less than two gauges. Yes, sir, I'll take the river road every time for a lovely trip, sure connections and good time, and no prairie dust blowing in at the windows. And yesterday, when the conductor came around for the tickets with a little basket punch, I didn't ask him to pass me; but I paid my fare like a little man; twenty-five cents for an hour's run and a little concert by the passengers assembled. I tell you, Pilgrim, you take the river, and when you want—"

But just here, the loud whistle from the engine announced a station and the brakeman hurried to the door shouting:

"Zionsville! This train makes no stops between here and Indianapolis!"

Mr. Crosby's mother Sara Ann Crosby who's home was on Prince Edward Island has left him a scrapbook that when opened measures three feet. It is over one hundred years old. Little Telephone Company to Get Air Force Pay

MOUNTAIN HOME, Idaho (AP) — The Air Force announced today it is paying a $41,000 bill that caused the president of a small Idaho telephone company to cut off service to two missile installations.

The base procurement officer at Offutt Air Force Base, Neb., was reported preparing "a voucher in the amount of $41,373.03 payable to the GEM State Utilities Co."

The public information officer at Mountain Home AFB said the payment "is being made as a result of a review of all documents, records and transactions by representatives of all affected air force agencies."

Edward Streigel, president of the company, said he cut off communications service to two underground missile sites for an hour and 10 minutes Jan. 21 because the Air Force had failed to respond to repeated demands for payment.

GEM State, a small company that serves only about 700 customers in southern Idaho and northern Nevada, won a contract to install communications at the two sites for $585,000. The system was completed in 1962.

Soil Survey Work Chairman Elected

SEATTLE (AP) — Members of the Western Regional Soil Survey work planning conference elected Prof. Dale S. Romine of Colorado State University as chairman Friday.

E. Milton Payne, Denver, was chosen vice president. The next conference was tentatively set for the first week of January 1966 at either Denver or Fort Collins, Colo.

Soil scientists of 11 states are represented in the conference.

Study Expansion Asked to Keep America Free

GREELEY (AP) — Better teachers and expansion of study courses were urged Friday at the 36th annual Midyear Conference at Colorado State College.

Dr. George F. Budd, president of St. Cloud (Minn.) State College, said, "What America wants and must have to remain free and strong is extraordinary teachers."

He said the extraordinary teacher must have more than energy, sound scholarship, patience, humor, sound character and a liking for children. He must be an idealist.

He said he "should never reach the point where he thinks he knows all there is to know about his work."

Dr. Willard Goslin, head of the education department at George Peabody College of Nashville, Tenn., said teachers should have the courage to depart from traditional patterns.

Two chief shortcomings of education in this country, he said, are in the areas of language and geography.

"We can't possibly face up to the last half of the 20th Century as free men unless hundreds of thousands of us are able to speak more foreign languages," Dr. Goslin said.

He said he was booed off a lecture platform not many years ago for advocating the teaching of Russian to high school students. Now 500 high schools offer such instruction.

"A part-time school system is the most expensive luxury a country can have today," Dr. Goslin said. "Many school children in America aren't even attending school for half of the year."

Cuba 'Bunkum' Is Charged by Sen. Goldwater

By WALTER R. MEARS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Republican Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona has accused the Johnson administration of "cockeyed thinking" on the cold war, "juggling of words" on disarmament and "bunkum" on Cuba.

Courting Missouri Republicans in his bid for the GOP presidential nomination, Goldwater insisted it is time for the party to offer the voters a choice and stop trying "to ape the Democrats."

The Arizona senator pressed his campaign Friday at airport rallies in St. Louis and Kansas City, on a "Goldwater special" charter flight that carried 91 Republicans between the two cities and at a $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner here.

Goldwater took on Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, charging the Pentagon chief had "so far failed to prove" that U.S. missiles are dependable.

"This administration is not doing justice to the government's responsibility . . . to tell the people the whole truth," Goldwater told more than 500 Republicans. They greeted his charges with repeated applause.

The Arizonan also told newsmen he thinks former Vice President Richard M. Nixon is his toughest opponent for the Republican nomination. He ranked New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and Henry Cabot Lodge, U.S. ambassador to South Viet Nam, behind the party's 1960 candidate.

West Virginia Will Not Be Key State

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP)— West Virginia apparently will not be a key state for presidential hopefuls this year as it was in 1960 when John F. Kennedy fought and won a pivotal primary election.

Only one candidate — New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller—has indicated he will enter the state's May 12 primary. Rockefeller announced Friday he will file today for the Republican primary.

The only other major announced candidate for the GOP nomination, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said Friday he does not plan to enter the West Virginia race.

Rockefeller called on all aspirants to file in West Virginia. "I want them to get into the fight," he said. "The more the merrier."

Grand Champion Steer Brings $7,000 Price

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — The grand champion steer of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show brought $7,000 at auction Friday.

The sale price, paid by Lone Star Brewing Co. of San Antonio, equaled the record paid by Lone Star for the 1957 grand champion.

The current champion, a 940-pound Hereford, belong to Lile Lewter, 19, of Lubbock, Tex.

Coca Cola Bottling Co. paid $1,609 for the champion Charolais, owned by Duell Brothers of Kersey, Colo. The same price was paid by Texas Electric Service Co. for the champion Shorthorn, owned by Stoner Brothers of Mount Vernon, Iowa.

Jim Tescher of Medora, N.D., scored a 55-point ride on a saddle bronc named Buckskin Joe for the best ride of the night in the rodeo.

Tescher's score gives him a total of 163 points on three go-round rides and moves him into top place for finals money.

Lawyer Claims Rebel Flag Flies Over Alabama Pen

DENVER (UPI) — An attorney for an Alabama chain-gang fugitive charged in district court Friday that his client should not be returned to the Southern state because of Confederate flag flies over the capital.

Richard Burns, in an amended petition filed in court, said Alabama flew the flag of the Confederacy, a fact which "represents insurrection against the United States and no state in that posture should be permitted to make demands against another state."

The petition was the latest action in a series of moves to prevent the return of Richard C. Bortner, 32, to Alabama to finish out a six-month jail term for assault and battery.

Bortner escaped July 8, 1962, and was arrested in Denver in March, 1963. When first arraigned in court, his lawyer charged Bortner "will be dead in 60 days if sent back there."

Bortner was charged with brutally beating a truck driver following a traffic accident in February of 1962. He also appealed to Colorado Gov. John Love against being returned, but was turned down.

Bortner is next scheduled to appear in court Feb. 27 in his fight against extradition.

Martz Wins Change of Venue On Murder Charge

PUEBLO (UPI) — Frank Martz, 53, foreman of the sprawling Red Creek Ranch, Friday won a change of venue because of the community's "sympathy and pity" for the family of the man he is accused of murdering.

Dist. Judge S. Philip Cabibi ordered Martz's trial on first degree murder charges moved to El Paso County District Court at Colorado Springs. Judge Cabibi also continued a motion for bail and said it should be ruled on by the judge with jurisdiction.

Martz is accused of killing Lonnie Thomlison, 41, of Pueblo while Thomlison, his brother Jesse and Harold Lovesee, 35, both of Pueblo, were gathering wood on the ranch Dec. 18.

Martz has admitted he borrowed a .22-caliber pistol and rode toward the three men to scare them away. He said the gun went off when his horse shied.

January Leaves Moisture Trace In Peak Region

Only a trace of moisture was recorded in January by the U.S. Weather Bureau at Peterson Field.

Normal precipitation for the month just ended is .29 inches, leaving a deficiency of the same amount for the new year.

The city's water restrictions are still in effect from last summer, incidentally. Persons living in odd-numbered houses may water on odd-numbered days, and those living in even-numbered houses may water on even-numbered days.

Temperatures in January remained near normal.

The mean maximum temperature recorded was 43, the normal is 42. Mean minimum temperature recorded was 17, normal is 15. Mean temperature recorded was 30, normal is 29.

A high of 59 degrees was reached on Jan. 2, 20 and 28, far short of the previous all-time January high of 73 recorded in 1890.

A low of -2 was marked on Jan. 13, far above the previous January all-time low of -32 in 1883.

There were six days in January when the maximum temperature was 32 or below; 31 days when the minimum temperature reached 32 or below; and only one day when the minimum temperature was zero or below.

January had 16 clear days, eight partly cloudy days and seven cloudy days, according to U. S. Weather Bureau reports.

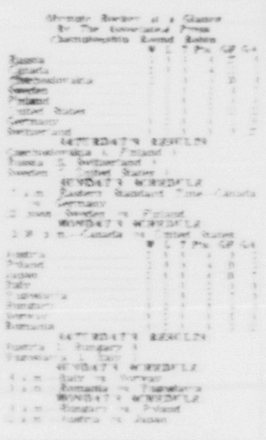
Reds Continue to Dominate Olympics

Sweden Defeats U.S., 7-4

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — Sweden's slick-passing Olympic hockey team rallied to defeat the United States 7-4 Saturday night and virtually ended the Americans' chances of winning the gold medal. The U.S. took the Olympic title four years ago.

Trailing 3-1 after the first period, Sweden scored two quick goals and took the lead in the second, while the Americans were shorthanded because of penalties then added three more goals in the final period.

It was the second defeat in three games of the championship round-robin competition for the American team. Sweden had won one and lost one.



Russia took the lead in the eight-team round robin earlier Saturday by routing Switzerland 15-0. That gave Russia a 3-0 record. Canada, idle Saturday, has a 2-0 record. Czechoslovakia moved into third place at 2-1 by beating Finland 4-0.

The U.S. and Sweden had to play their important game with one star out of action. Tom Yurkovich, the regular American goalie, was on crutches because of knee injuries suffered in a losing game against Russia.

Sweden's Carl Oberg was suspended for this one game as a penalty for throwing a broken stick over the boards Friday and hitting the Canadian coach, Father David Bauer.

Star performer for Sweden was Ulf Sterner, aggressive forward who has been offered a professional tryout in America. He scored two goals.

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — Dauntless Jean Saubert of Lakeview, Ore., survived a foul claim and brought in the United States' first medal—a third place bronze in the women's slalom ski race—while the powerful Russian team added to its avalanche of victories Saturday in the ninth Winter Olympic Games.

There were 70 minutes of anxious waiting for the 21-year-old Oregon State coed while an international jury deliberated on a report that she had missed one of the 56 gates in the last of her two runs.

Gate guards made the report. The Americans demanded a review. Finally, after viewing movies, the jury ruled there was no infraction and gave Miss Saubert the No. 3 position behind a pair of French sisters, Christine and Marielle Goitschel, first and second, respectively.

Wild jubilation swept the American camp, but there was no escaping one sobering fact. This is a Soviet Union Olympics.

The fabulous Lidia Skoblikova, 24-year-old Siberian school teacher, won her third speed skating championship in an Olympic record time by streaking the 1,000 meters in 1 minute 33.2 seconds. And another Soviet school teacher, Claudia Boyarskikh of Sverdlovsk, led a 1-2-3 Russian sweep in the women's 10-kilometer ski race.

At the end of the day, the Russians boasted a whopping total of 12 medals—five gold, three silver and four bronze—and threatened to dominate the spectacle as no country ever has done.

Russia also took the lead in the round-robin hockey championship by defeating Switzerland 15-0 while Sweden just about knocked the United States out of contention.

The favored Russians piled up the score against the chance of a first place tie, which would be decided on goal averages. An amazing performance by the Swiss goalie, Gerald Righet, who made 93 saves, couldn't stop them.

Sweden, runner-up to Russia in last year's world championships, came from behind to beat the United States 7-4.

Russia now is 3-0 in the championship round robin and Canada 2-0. Czechoslovakia moved into third place at 2-1 by beating Finland 4-0. The United States has lost two of its three games.

Mrs. Skoblikova, a dimpled, blonde housewife who is a phantom on ice, emerged as the outstanding individual star of the Games with a chance of winning an unprecedented fourth medal Sunday. That's when she races in the 1,000-meter speed skating event.

* * *

The fourth day's other honors went to a pair of daring British Robin Dixon, who defied the treacherous turns of the icy Igls chute for a two-man victory that snapped the longtime monopoly of Italy's fabled Sergio Zardini and Eugenio Monti.

The British pair, their sled strengthened by an axle borrowed from the Italians, banged against the wall at the notorious Witch's Kettle turn and almost left the track on their second run. However, they zoomed down in safety for a combined time for four runs of 4 minutes, 21.90 seconds.

This was Britain's first gold medal in the Winter Games since 1952.

* * *

Zardini's sled was second and third went to Monti, the mountain man who has won eight world championships.

Larry McKillip of Saranac Lake, N. Y., with James Lamy of Lake Placid, N. Y., at the brake, finished fifth in 4:24.50.

The sturdy, round-faced Goitschel girls—Christine, 19, and Marielle, 18, daughters of a Val d'Isere inn keeper — became the first sister combination ever to win gold and silver medals in the Winter Games.

Christine, trailing after the first run, rallied on her second spurt down the 365-meter Lizum Valley course with its 64 gates to win by a fraction of a second. Christine was clocked in 1 minute, 29.86 seconds for the two runs, Marielle in 1:30.77.

Miss Saubert's time was 1:31.36. She went wide on the upper reaches of the course on her first effort and fell into sixth place. She cut loose on her second run and shot down the course like a rocket, clocking 46.58 seconds.

She was being hugged and kissed by her teammates when the report came that a guard at gate No. 8 had reported that she had failed to make the gate properly. Missing a gate means automatic disqualification.

American spirits fell. Amos Little, U.S. delegate to the International Ski Federation, immediately demanded a jury review. An hour and 10 minutes later, the good news came.

"That's wonderful, that's wonderful," Jean gushed. "I only wish it could have been of another color. But it's wonderful to win the first medal for America, just the same."

Disqualifications were numerous in the women's slalom, where the slightest mistake can bring automatic elimination.

Barbara Ferries of Houghton, Mich., was among those thrown out. After finishing 19th with a time of 1:42.39 for two runs, she was disqualified for missing a gate.

Linda Meyers of Bishop, Calif., got 12th place with 1:37.93 and Joan Hannah of Franconia, N.H. 19th with 1:47.39.

Janice Smith, an 18-year-old high school girl from Rochester, N.Y., who piled into a snow bank after Friday's 500-meter race, had the best American time in Saturday's 1,000-meter speed skating test. She clocked off 1 minute, 36.8 seconds for seventh place.

Mrs. Skoblikova's winning time was nine-tenths of a second better than the Olympic mark set by Klara Guseva of Russia at Squaw Valley, Calif., four years ago.

Miss Boyarskikh's time in the 10-kilometer ski race, a course of 6.2 miles, was 40 minutes, 24.3 seconds. Second place went to Eudokia Mekshilo, a 22-year-old teacher from Lenin-Olympic champion, Maris Gusagrad, and third to the defending kova.

The United States had no competitors in the women's ski race.

Russian's Speed Skater Only Multiple Winner

By TED SMITS
Associated Press Sports Editor

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — An attractive blonde Russian skater Lidia Skoblikova is busy collecting gold medals at the ninth winter Olympics.

So far she is the only multiple winner in the Games.

She took the 1,500 meters women's speed skating title Friday in the record Olympic time of 2:22.6.

Lidia, 24 and married, captured the 500 meters gold medal on Wednesday. She set an Olympic record then, too—45 seconds flat.

She adds these medals to an already impressive display of gold and silverware. She became world champion at all four speed-skating distances in Tokyo last year and has two gold medals from the 1960 Olympics for the 1,500 meters and 1,000 meters.

And she entered today's 1,000 meters speed skating the heavy favorite.

In the 1,500 meters, Kaija Mustonen of Finland took the bronze medal in 2:25.5 and Bertha Kolokoltseva of Russia the silver in 2:27.1.

Norway's national hero, 27-year-old ski jumper Toran Engan, was dethroned by 22-year-old Veikko Kankkonen of Finland in the 70 meters ski jump Friday.

Kankkonen won the first gold medal ever awarded at the Olympics for the 70-meter jump. In doing so, he also captured Engan's world title.

Kankkonen had the unnerving ordeal of jumping last of 54 entrants. The Finnish physical training instructor went 259 feet, 2 inches and collected most points for both distance and style with his dramatic last jump.

Kankkonen finished with 229.90 points. Engan had to be content with a silver medal for 226.30 points, and Torgeir Brandtzaeg, also Norwegian, won the bronze with 222.90 points.

Jumping on the 90-meter jump takes place on the last day of the Games, Feb. 9.

Britain, which has not won a Winter Olympics medal since 1952, made a good start in Friday's two-man bobsled runs. The British pair, Tony Nash and Robin Dixon, had the best total time of 2:10.84.

They were closely followed by the two Italian teams, Sergio Zaedini and Romano Bonagura, Siorpaes.

The medals are awarded for the best total time of four runs. The final two runs were slated for today.

Sjoukje Dijkstra, the 22-year-old Dutch ice princess, who won the world title the last two years, took a commanding lead after completion of the five compulsory figures.

Miss Djikstra had 9.5 ordinals and 1,113.2 points. Second was Austria's Regine Heitzer with 20 ordinals and 1,074.8 points with Canadian champion Petra Burka third with 27.5 ordinals and 1,050.2 points.

All three American entrants were in the first 10 but still virtually out of contention.

Christine Haigler of Colorado Springs, Colo., was sixth with 53 ordinals and 1,000.9 points; 15-year-old U.S. champion Peggy Fleming of Pasadena, Calif., eighth with 81 and 968.6 and Albertina Noyes of Arlington, Mass., ninth with 88 and 951.3.

The competition will be completed with free skating on Sunday.

Mottley Tops World Mark For 440 in Boston Meet

By BOB GEEEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP)—Sturdy Wendell Mottley of Yale rushed to a world indoor 440-yard record of 48 seconds flat Saturday night in the Boston A.A. Games, trimming two-tenths of a second off the 22-year-old mark.

Earlier, veteran Hayes Jones flashed to his 50th consecutive indoor hurdle victory and announced he plans to retire at the end of the season.

Mottley, the Yale captain, bolted into the lead at the start of the 440 and held it all the way. He finished about two yards in front of Charley Mays of the Grand Street Boys Club of New York.

Mottley's effort wiped out the old record of 48.2 set by Roy Cochran in New York in 1942 and stamped the Trinidad native one of the major threats in the 1964 Tokyo Olympics.

Mays, who set a meet record in the broad jump in afternoon events, was just one-tenth of a second off the old indoor mark at 48.3.

Jones, 25, said he will continue competition only through the Olympics this fall.

Jones, whose string of victories stretches over five years, had a clear lead, nearly a yard, when the field cleared the first of three hurdles and won by about a yard over John Bethea of Morgan State.

Mays, 23, representing Grand Street Boys AA of New York, leaped 24 feet, 4¾ inches to better the mark of 24-3½ set by Mike Herman of New York University in 1962.

Cubs Sign Catcher Merritt Ranew

CHICAGO (AP)—The Chicago Cubs today signed Catcher Merritt Ranew, one of the National League's top pinch-hitters last season, and rookie outfielder Billy Ott and pitcher Dick Scott.

The Cubs now have 31 of their listed 37 players under contract.

Jean Wins 1st Medal For Yanks

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)— "When I looked at the course from below it scared me," said Jean Saubert, the blue-eyed, pink-cheeked collegian from Lakeview, Ore., who won America's first medal at the Winter Olympics Saturday.

"You know," she said, "I kept telling myself over and over that this was just another race, but it wasn't. You can hold top position right up to the Olympics, but the Olympics is just in a class by itself."

Miss Saubert had quite a bit of difficulty holding her position—even after she had finished third and apparently won a bronze medal.

It took only 1 minute and 31.36 seconds for the 21-year-old ace of the American team to slip her curves through the twisting women's slalom courses. But there was an additional 70-minute wait before she finally was awarded the medal.

As she leaped across the finish line on her second run, the 21-year-old Oregon State collegian said, "It felt real good. But is it good enough for a medal?"

The time was good. But the guard at flat No. 8 claimed that Miss Saubert had failed to take the gate properly.

Miss Saubert's composure was shaken. She whipped off her yellow goggles. She ran her fingers through her short-cropped hair. She fidgeted. And she waited.

Finally the international jury handed down its decision—Miss Saubert had not missed the gate.

Amos Little, U.S. delegate to the International Ski Federation, brought the news.

"Miss Saubert is definitely in," he said. "A review of the control film by the judges definitely proved that she passed the gate in proper fashion."

"That's wonderful, that's wonderful," said Miss Saubert. "I only wish it had been a different color medal. But it is wonderful to win the first medal for America, just the same."

Miss Saubert won America's first medal by ramming her 150-pound frame down the two runs in 44.78 and 46.58 seconds. She finished behind a pair of French Sisters, Christine Goitschel, the winner with a 1:29.86 clocking and Marielle, the runner-up at 1:30.77.

She admitted having difficulty at the start.

Pikes Peak Meadows Pick For Horse Track Name

Officials of Midway Enterprises, Inc. have announced that a name has been selected for the new race track, located halfway between Colorado Springs and Pueblo on Interstate 25.

The name selected is Pikes Peak Meadows. The lucky winner of the grand prize, a $500 U.S. Savings Bond, is D. L. Epple of 808 Acero, Pueblo.

There were six entries with the winning name, but Epple is the winner because of the earliest postmark. Others who submitted the same name are: Mrs. Fred Hunicke, 2006 Grand Ave., Uueblo; Heman H. Davis, 2705 E. Boulder, Colorado Springs; L. D. Leinger, No. 8 Mesa Place, Colorado Springs; Richard W. Harris, 2220 N. Royer, Colorado Springs; and Leonard Anderson, 721 S. Cascade, Colorado Springs. They will receive $25 U.S. Savings Bonds.

Presentation of the prizes will be made on opening day at Pikes Peak Meadows.

Directors of Midway Enterprises, Inc. were gratified by the huge number of individual entries. There were over 3,000 entries received and well over 9,000 names submitted. Decision of the judges was most difficult, but the winning name was selected because of its close association with the famous Pikes Peak area, a household word thru the United States and most parts of the world.

Construction is proceeding at a rapid pace at the new plant, and the new name is being widely circulated to horsemen and the area population.

Americans Win Seeds In Slalom

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)— American skiers, shut out thus far on the slopes in the 1964 Winter Olympics, won another conference table victory Friday when three U. S. men were awarded favorable starting positions in Sunday's giant slalom competition.

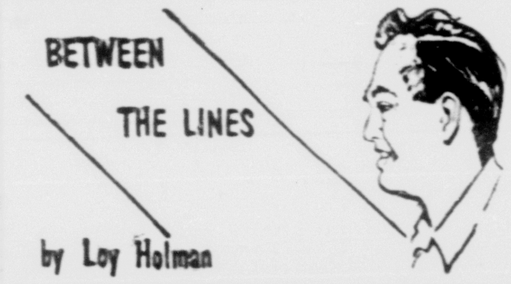
The International Ski Federation, bowing to U. S. Manager Fred Casotti's protest against low seedings of American entrants, revised its list and placed Jim Heuga of Tahoe City, Calif., Billy Kidd of Stowe, Vt., and Bud Werner of Steamboat Springs, Colo. among the first 15 starters in the giant slalom.

Heuga subsequently drew the sixth starting number, Kidd the No. 8 slot, and Werner No. 10.

Pepi Spiegler, Austria's 1960 runner-up in the event, will start first. Heavy favorite Egon Zimmerman, also of Austria, will be 11th down the Birgitzkoepfel course.

Zimmerman easily won Thursday's downhill event as Americans finished far back after a similar protest had moved up their starting positions.

Kidd, first to compete in the downhill, and Werner were 16th and 17th. Heuga wasn't entered in the downhill. Neither was Bill Marolt of Aspen, Colo., who will go in the giant slalom from the No. 28 slot.



Olympic Nausea

It's hardly been a secret to the rest of the world that this nation has long been infected with a disease, which, for the lack of a better name, could be called a case of apathetic nonchalance.

Most of the time the sores from the malady can be hidden with a cloak of isolationism and even those closest to the sick room can be led to believe that it's merely rash that will go away when the facts are known.

The truth of the matter is that all the facts point to a lingering slow death.

But it's only during a period like this week and last that these malignant sores are bared and nation-wide nausea sets in at the sight.

We're speaking of the United States' showing in international competition, and namely the Winter Olympic Games currently in session. It's nothing less than a disgrace — and make no mistake about it, the prestige of the country is taking a fall which could be fatal in the matter of winning friends and influencing peoples around the globe.

We can do much talking around the conference table without success, and can attempt to bribe partnership with foreign aid that soars into the millions annually. But what good has it done?

On the other hand, there are few opportunities for rival nations to compete where a box score is kept . . . such as in the Olympics. And more than a lot of people would like to admit, there is tremendous influence gained thru this open competition. It is an open display of a nation's well-being and it's unspeakable that this country with all its facilities and opportunities can't produce the best in any field.

Oh yes, there are those who will cop a plea that we are the only innocents among a world of cheaters. That our athletes are simon pure in amateurism while the subsidized entries from other nations are nothing less than professionals.

Nonsense!

Just because the subsistence comes from a different source does not change the facts. It's hardly realistic to say an athlete plays only for the enjoyment of the game when he's handed thousands annually in tuition, books, fees, room and board and spending money for his services. And just think a minute — how far would we get without the athletes who have not been on athletic scholarships in our colleges and universities?

We claim amateurism because they may not belong body and soul to a designated professional league or team, but under our own definition they are just as soiled as those in foreign countries who are paid by their government to perform a service of propaganda thru athletics.

And then there are the "amateurs" who work for a sponsoring company with such as an industrial basketball team, hockey team or athletic club who "just happen to be" good players. And how about the many we have on our national teams who are in the military service but get special duty and leave time for their athletics?

No, the fault is not with our system for we "cheat" on amateurism just as much as any country competing. There are those who would advocate the government to fully subsidize our national teams for all their expenses, but really most of us would not want to see this regimentation if we truly believe in the American way of life.

The answer, then, is to get away from this apathetic approach to international athletics. That is, with very few exceptions, nobody worries about it until far too late. There may be concern this week and again next October when the Summer Games are held in Tokyo, but our defeats are quickly forgotten in the rush to make an extra buck and they won't return for another four years . . .

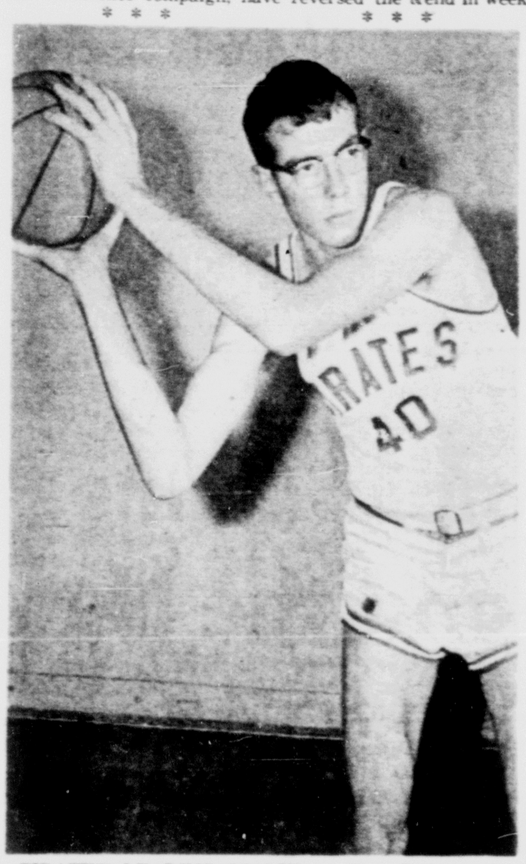
Bucs Meet Regis In Denver Today

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

DENVER—St. Mary's remaining hopes for a second straight Denver Parochial League crown are all wrapped up in a neat four-quarter package here this afternoon when Dan Wright's surging Pirates level their sights at unbeaten Regis.

The Bucs, who stumbled thru a disasterous string of home floor defeats early in the conference compaign, have reversed the trend in weeks and now own a victory streak of four straight. The upturn in Pirate fortunes has moved the team into third place with a 6-3 record, two games behind second place Holy Family (8-1) and three games back of Regis (9-0).

* * *



PIRATES' LEADING SCORER — Dick Pfalmer, St. Mary's scoring and rebounding mainstay, will be an important factor in today's crucial game with Regis in Denver. That game is slated for the Regis Fieldhouse with tipoff time set for 2:30 p.m. Pfalmer leads the Pirates in scoring with 123 points in 12 games. In addition to his scoring, the 6-3 senior is a standout on defense. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

* * *

Slim as the Pirates' title hopes are, they will definitely come alive if St. Mary's can do what no one else has this winter—whip the Raiders. Regis will be a solid favorite, however, for the 2:30 p.m. battle at Regis College Fieldhouse. The Denver club handled St. Mary's in convincing fashion, 62-50, in an earlier meeting on the St. Mary floor.

That first round outcome could be misleading, however. Wright's Pirates have shown a surprising efficiency on Denver courts this winter, running up four straight triumphs in that city. The St. Mary's offense, which features pattern play or the fast break with comparable success, flows more smoothly on the bigger Denver floors. If that tendency continues, the Pirates should find the Regis Fieldhouse very much to their liking. It is easily the most spacious quarters in the entire DPL.

St. Mary's enters the game off Friday's solid 57-34 spanking of Cathedral, a club mired deep in the second division. In that victory, the Bucs once again displayed excellent balance, with three men scoring in double figures and a total of nine contributing points to the attack.

Dick Pfalmer, St. Mary's spring-legged center who paced the Friday scoring with 15 points will be in the starting unit this afternoon. The forwards will come from among Ralph Layman, Mike Conway, and Dave Grantz, with Tom McCarthy and Sam Zavatti the probable starters at guards.

Regis's last effort was a 62-54 thumping of St. Francis Thursday night to start the Parochial League weekend. Ace Tom Robinson hit 21 points in that outing and it will be necessary for the St. Mary's defense to throw a net around him if the Pirate's hopes for victory are to be realized this afternoon.

Other games today have Mt. Carmel at Cathedral, St. Joseph's at Mullen, and Machbeau at Annunciation. Friday's other DPL contests saw Holy Family retain its second place spot with a 79-64 conquest of Mullen and Annunciation whip St. Joseph's, 54-44. A scheduled game between Machebeuf and Mt. Carmel the same night was postponed due to the death of Machebeuf player, Bob Hickey, who was killed in an automobile accident Thursday night.

Cheyenne Defeats Bruins; Widefield Clips Brighton

Cheyenne Mountain and Widefield of the Pikes Peak League won non-conference contests Saturday night in the only action involving teams of the southern AA circuit.

The Indians, who Friday night took a big step toward winning the conference championship by upsetting defending titlist, Salida, turned in another impressive performance in downing Cherry Creek of the AAA Adams-Arapahoe League, 61-44.

Widefield broke away quickly in the opening quarter to pin a 50-45 defeat on Brighton. The Gladiators piled up a 17-8 advantage in the first eight minutes but trailed at halftime after being outscored 16-4 in the second period. Widefield had a one point deficit at 35-34 heading into the final quarter but outscored the northern visitors 16-10 to clinch the triumph.

Wyoming Five Nips Air Force

By LOY HOLMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Editor

Wyoming stole a page out of the Air Force Academy's book of style Saturday night by outstalling the patient Cadets at their own game of Keep-away with a 62-59 overtime victory at the AFA's gymnasium before a crowd of some 2,000.

The Cowboys had to overcome a steady first half which saw the Falcons flying into a 32-25 lead, and then a rally right at the buzzer which saw tiny guard Johnny Judd fire in the tying bucket to send the contest into overtime.

But flashy Flynn Robinson, Wyoming's fancy shooting junior from Elgin, Ill., came thru with seven key points in the overtime period to seal the win for the Pokes. This erased a great defensive job turned in on the hard-to-guard playmaker as he was held to only three points in the first half.

Robinson finished the game with 23, just below his season's average, to pace both teams. Judd was right behind, however, with 21 of the Falcons markers.

Altho it was tension - packed throut the game, the top thrills came in the final seconds as the Air Force fought off what looked like certain defeat.

With Wyoming holding a 51-49 advantage on Robinson's tie breaking free throws with only six seconds to go, the Air Force immediately called time out to set up a scoring play — but nothing Coach Bob Spear could have said would sound anything like it turned out.

Judd took the ball out at midcourt and tossed a high lob to center Roger Head who was driving under the basket for the possible tipin. The ball was deflected out of bounds, tho, and this time the Falcons had but four seconds for their desperation shot.

Scott Etnyre drilled the ball into Judd, who was 30 feet out and to the left. But Judd's attempt was blocked in mid-air by guard Ron Long and the sphere was loose on the floor. Judd picked it up immediately and fired it thru the cords.

That brought on a heated controversy at the scorer's table as there was some question as to whether the buzzer had sounded before, after or right at the shot. The scorer ruled the ball was in the air, and Air Force had another chance.

* * *

This went by the boards in the overtime as Wyoming took the first lead on a long jumper by Long and they tried to play possession ball with the Falcons. Robinson hit on a couple of free throws to pull the Pokes into a four-point lead. The teams traded baskets, but the Cadets lost the ball twice on floor mistakes and Wyoming went up by four again with sophomore center Leon Clark dunking one from right under the bucket.

That just about sewed it up for the visitors as they went into another stall and the AFA was forced to foul in order to try and get possession. They picked Robinson to foul and the Wyoming ace pumped in three more to pad the final margin.

Actually the big break in the game came midway thru the second half after the Air Force had drilled a fine 52 per cent of their shots in the first stanza to take the seven point lead at the intermission. They continued that pace for the first part of the second half, but then for some reason they slowed the pace even more than usual after pulling 10 point ahead with 14 minutes to play.

* * *

Wyoming then went to the very same strategy and it paid off with a pressing defense that swiped the ball away from the Falcons on several occasions and made easy shots for the taller Pokes. To boot, Robinson suddenly warmed up his sight after a frustrating first half, and he delivered 13 points in the final 13 minutes.

Over the last nine minutes of the game, the Cadets could connect on only three field goals with Judd getting two of them, including the last exciting shot of the regulation contest. Thru most of this span, Wyoming either held the slim lead of two points or was tied, and the Pokes were content to force the Falcons to come get them.

Wyoming broke away for the first substantial lead in the game for a three point margin with five minutes gone. But Air Forve caught up at 12-12 with seven minutes played in the game and then stretched the lead to four on jumpers by Judd and Etnyre.

The three points Robinson was able to collect in the first half was his lowest of the season, with Mike Pavich and Rich Porter alternating on his defense. But the strong-arm Negro more than made up for this with his crucial second half scoring and with his points in overtime.

Wyoming also beat the Falcons at the Cadet Gym year before last in another overtime contest, 61-60, but is history repeats the Air Force should get revenge when the same teams meet later this season at Laramie. At least that's the way it happened two years ago.

The win was Wyoming's eighth in 16 starts and the Academy now has a 8-7 record for the season, with this being only their second loss at home this winter. The other came against Colorado University in the home opener.

Michigan Routs Tigers In Second Straight, 12-4

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — The University of Michigan scored four goals in each period with no less than nine players getting into the act for a 12-4 decision over visiting Colorado College here Saturday night in a Western Collegiate Hockey Association game.

The win was the second straight over the Tigers from Colorado Springs, the Wolverines winning by a 7-0 shutout Friday night, and it kept them atop the WCHA standings with four victories in five games. CC's cellar dwelling record now stands at 1-5.

There was hardly a Michigan player who didn't have a hand in the run-away score, but the handiest was winger Mel Wakabayashy who fired in a three-goal hat trick.

Leading the Colorado College scoring was senior Johnny Simus with two of the four goals, while Wayne McAlpine and Steve Ebert each had a singleton.

The game came to a furious finish with Michigan's defenseman Tom Polonic getting four penalties with but four seconds to go in the game. The first was a slashing, this doubled up with a spearing call, then he was docked 10 minutes for misconduct and finally banished from the game by referee Frency LaCross.

Polonic will not be able to play in the next league game Michigan has scheduled, but this was little consolation to the Tigers who have finished with league-leaders this season.

The closest CC ever came was in the first period when McAlpine found the mark with the Tigers' opening tally. But already they were trailing by four at the time. The teams traded goals at the start of the second period, but the Wolverines retained the four-goal margin.

The third period had an oddity for the visitors when goalie Art Warwick was credited with an assist on Simus' second goal. It was his pass out from the cage that started the scoring play.

Warwick, who is still recovering from a leg injury of last weekend, was called on for another tough night in the nets as he stopped 51 shots by the Wolverines. Michigan's goalie Bob Gray stopped 26.

In other action Saturday, preseason favorite Denver University defeated North Dakota for the second straight night, 4-2, to keep in the running for the league title.

The next action for the Tigers will be next Friday and Saturday nights at Minnesota.

Eagles Win Sophomore Mat Tourney

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Pueblo East piled up an impressive victory in the annual Sophomore Wrestling Tournament at the Palmer Gymnasium Saturday — without winning a single individual championship.

The Eagles, who constructed an overwhelming lead in the early going by advancing the majority of their entries into the semi-finals, finished the day's work with 85 points to 69 for George Kalber's Wasson team, which also made an excellent showing.

Trailing the two leaders were Centennial with 58, Pueblo South with 53, Central with 52, Arvada with 27, and Palmer with 26. Longmont, which entered only a partial squad, picked up only a single point.

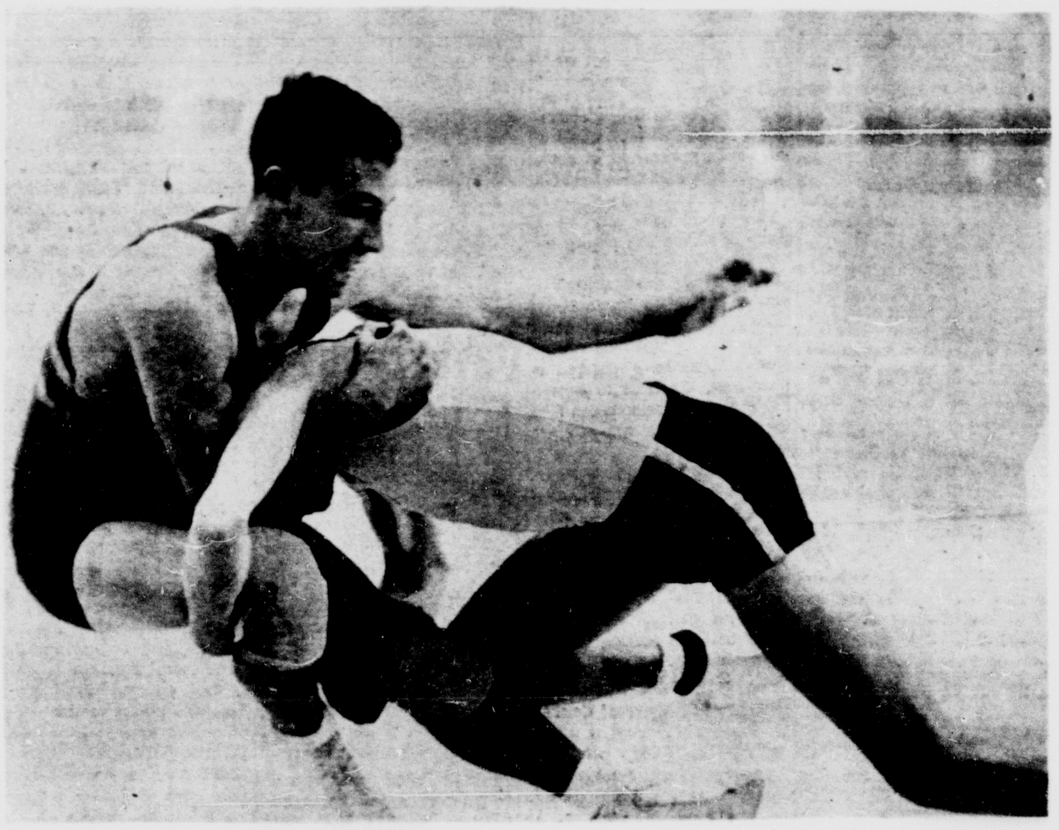
East needed the majority of its whopping early margin before the evening was over. The Eagles had six athletes in the finals but none picked up a title. Wasson led in that department with four, while Centennial crowned three champions, South and Central two each, and Arvada one.

Wasson had winners in Jim Ranals who decisioned Ross Medina of Central 11-3 in the 112 pound finals; Terry Skodack who whipped Glen Johnson of Arvada, 5-0 in the 145 pound championship match; Greg McDonald who earned a 5-0 decision over Wayne Laird of East at 180; and heavyweight, Bob Sears who slipped past Mike Shroyer of South on a referee's decision in overtime.

Palmer had only one man, Steve Sanchez, reach the finals but he was defeated in his championship match at 154 pounds by Ben Casuas of Central on a third period pin.

Other champions were Dennis Gonzales of Central at 95 pounds; Neil Parker of South at 103; Henry Struna of South at 120; Art Luna of Centennial at 127; John Romero of Arvada at 133; Gary Johnson of Centennial at 138, and Craig Dotson of Centennial at 165.

Wasson also got a third place performance from Dennis Sydow at 120 pounds while Palmer had third place winners at 145 in Mike Risk and at 165 in Frank Barnard. In addition the Thunderbirds' Jack Jenkins was fourth at 127, Mike Hendricks fourth at 133, and Rich Roswurm fourth at 165. Mark Street at 180 was the Terrors' lone fourth place finisher. Wasson also got a second from Bob Fittje who lost an 8-6 decision to Gary Johnson of Centennial in the 138 pound championship match.



ON THE WAY DOWN—Palmer's Mike Risk, (right), has Terry Skodak of Wasson headed for the mat in this 145 pound semi-final match during the Sophomore Wrestling Tournament at the Palmer Gymnasium Saturday. Skodak, however, slipped free and went on to post a 3-0 decision over Risk. Eight teams, including six from the South Central League, participated in the day-long tournament which was open to freshmen and sophomores only. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)—Holland's 22-year-old Sjoukje Dijkstra has all but wrapped up the gold medal for ladies' figure skating in the ninth Olympic Winter Games.

The two-time world champion took a huge lead in Friday's school figures and appeared headed for certain victory in the free skating finals Sunday.

The powerful Miss Dijkstra who came into the competition an uncontested favorite, lived up to expectations. She swept all five figures to score 1113.2 points and compile a near-perfect ordinal placement score of 9.5.

Ordinals are based on the placement of each skater by individual judges, and Miss Dijkstra had eight unanimous first places and a tie for first.

Her closest rival, 19-year-old Regine Heitzer of Austria, was 38.4 points behind. Canada's Petra Burka trailed by 63 points in third place.

Miss Heitzer had 1074.8 points and 20 ordinals, and Miss Burka had 1050.2 points and 27.5 ordinals.

While it appeared that nothing short of injury or illness can halt Miss Dijkstra's gold medal rush, the 17-year-old Miss Burka has set her sights on moving up to second place.

Miss Heitzer's forte is school figures, while Miss Burka is a dazzling free skater.

Miwa Fukuhara, 19, of Japan and Nicole Hassler, 23, of France finished fourth and fifth respectively, but both seem to be too far back to make a run for a medal. Miss Fukuhara has 1019.2 points and 41 ordinals, and Miss Hassler has 1015.2 points and 47.5 ordinals.

The United States, which had not been expected to make a strong showing, came up with the best team effort of the competition by taking three places in the top 10.

Sixteen - year-old Christine Haigler, Colorado Springs, Colo., advanced three places on the most difficult figures to finish sixth and head the U.S. entry.

American champion Peggy Fleming, Pasadena, Calif., and Albertina Noyes, Arlington, Mass., each placed eighth and ninth, respectively.

Kansas State Edges Kansas In Key Big Eight Contest

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP)—Kansas State battled from behind to edge Kansas 58-55 in an important Big Eight basketball game Saturday night despite a surprising 32-point outburst by Kansas rookie Walt Wesley.

The 6-foot-11 sophomore had a season high of 17 going into the game. Willie Murrell, 6-foot-6 K-State standout who leads the conference in scoring, was held to 15 points by a tight Kansas zone defense the first half and by the tight guarding of veteran Al Correll in the second.

The victory was K-State's second straight and gave the Wildcats a 3-2 league record. It ended a three-game winning streak for Kansas and dropped the Jayhawks to 3-3.

Kansas was down 22-15 but rallied for a 32-30 half time lead, with Wesley scoring 16 of the last 20 Jayhawk points. The lead changed hands until Ron Paradis hit a corner shot, moving the Wildcats in front to stay, 43-42 with 12:58 left.

K-State held a six-point bulge, 54-58 with 6:52 left. Coach Tex Winter ordered his team into a delay game with three minutes left and the score 58-54. Correll, playing his last game for Kansas, made the last point. Roger Suttner, seven - foot K-State pivot, fouled out with 8:28 left. George Unseld, a 20-point man for Kansas, had eight points.

K-State hit 45 per cent from the field, Kansas 38 and the Wildcats had a 42-29 rebound bulge with Murrell grabbing 16, Wesley 10.

or at least just a couple months before the next Olympics.

But not so with other nations. Those who are weighing the merits of the Free World against the spread of Socialism and Communism will long remember the success or failure in these "games." To them, it is a direct reflection of our way of life and the softness of Americans in general. Those looking for a "winning side" in the war of philosophies could certainly take this into consideration.

If there are those of us who are really concerned with the representation our nation has in the only direct competition with other countries, there should be something done about it — but not just for a couple months every four years.

Actually, about all it would take is some simple planning. But a big part of our national apathetic infection is the germ of "letting someone else do it."

For instance, it's as plain as day and night that our chief competitor, the Soviet Union, has a plan of this type that's as strategic as a battle field maneuver. They have picked up our weaknesses and exploited them to the fullest.

Even locally, we staged a late and somewhat futile drive to raise private funds to finance the U.S. entry in Olympic hockey. But all the while, our best schools are importing players from other lands who generally return to their native country to use the four years of experience gained here while under scholarship.

But in the Winter Games, for another instance, Russia could just about wrap up the "unofficial" Olympic team title on speed skating alone. Yet what have we done in this important sport, where one individual has the chance to win FOUR TIMES the number of gold medals as our entire hockey squad? There has been an effort on a local basis for improvement in this field, especially this year with the training camp set up by the Broadmoor for the U.S. team, but otherwise there's little done to encourage those best adapted physically for this sport.

The same is true for many of the "minor" sports in the Summer Games, such as gymnastics, cycling, judo and wrestling and weightlifting. In gymnastics alone the Soviets have found an Achilles heel where they can cancel out nearly all our victories in such other activities as track and field, or in basketball where the entire team can possibly match only one individual in one event in gymnastics.

It's only thru the efforts of a few people, such as the figure skaters in this country, that we've done as well as we have in the past. Their devotion to the sport has cost thousands-upon-thousands personally and years of time and hard work, just to represent this country in international competition. One of the few rewards will come here next winter when the Broadmoor, undoubtedly the main supporting body in skating in the U.S., will host the World Championships.

The only answer I can think of to the situation, is that if there are enough people concerned there could be an Olympic committee of devoted individuals to make plans not only for a couple months before the Games, but on a continuing basis.

This would not only be a group to screen and choose the best available talent, but also to have a year-round campaign yearly to finance the national teams. One of the main difficulties now is that by the time most athletes have matured to their best, it's time to earn a living and they seldom can take the time to train and compete on their own.

In all probability, however, there is no one who cares that much about the situation after all. So we'll continue in our slipshod ways of entering half-trained "amateurs" against the "professionals" of other lands. And we'll go right on with the losing battle of seeking prestige around the world.

Site of Winter Olympic Games Combination of Old and the New

By JIM BECKER

INNSBRUCK, Austria, (AP)—This Alpine city, where the winter Olympics opened this week, is a curious combination of sleek modern buildings and quaint old castles that look as if Hansel and Gretel have just stepped out to lunch.

The skyline along the river Inn apparently was copied from a Christmas card, or vice versa.

The buildings erected for the Olympics, including the skyscraper Olympic Village, are as sleek as an Italian railway station.

The narrow streets in the old town leading to the Hapsburg palace contrast with the modern highways built for the games. The new roads have put Innsbruck 10 years ahead of its planned development.

The 100,000 residents of Innsbruck must be among the world's leading linguists.

The city is the capital of the Alpine province of Tyrol, in the corner of Austria where it meets Italy and Switzerland. The Brenner Pass is 30 miles away, and all the roads and rails lead through here.

That explains a lot of the languages that are rattled off, but not the fact that an amazing number speak English.

"We learn it in school," was the explanation of one young lady dressed in typical local costume—a smart suit out of a Paris shop and narrow high heels from Italy.

Leopard, ocelot, mink and seal are the popular furs, and they're needed. Innsbruck is only 1,500 feet high, but it sits in a bowl of mountains and the average daytime temperature is around 20 degrees.

Life is leisurely. A girl in the Innsbruck post office said she had only one telephone book for Vienna, the cosmopolitan capital of Austria 300 miles away. Some of the pages are missing. She said she is waiting for the new one to come out to replace it.

Contrary to many expectations, Mozart is not the leading musical fare, although the house where he stayed briefly at the age of 13 is marked with a plaque.

The music output of the local radio tends more toward a sort of Austrianized jazz.

A popular number is "Old Man River," sung in English. It comes out: "We sweet and strain, bodies all aching und wreeekd with pain."

There is one television channel, the Austrian state network, with three hours of programs a night.

The schedule will be extended during the Olympic events. Judging from the number of television sets being installed in Innsbruck hotel lobbies many of the expected 100,000 visitors are going to take the easy way out and watch the games on television.

Many people follow the ski circuit but never go near the slopes. They customarily drive sleek sports cars and get their exercise dancing the twist in tight ski pants before an open fire.

This is among the major after dark activities in Innsbruck, along with eating, and tankard-banging to the accompaniment of an accordion.

Eating is serious business. The speciality of one house, which describes itself as the oldest restaurant in Europe, is the "song without words."

It is a heaping platter of steak, wienerschnitzel, pork cutlet, fried egg, potatoes, vegetables, salad and fruit. It is billed to serve two. Cost: $4.

Another speciality is Salzburger nockerl, which consists of a dozen eggs whipped into a huge, frothy dessert.

Some restaurants, playing the field, have added Chinese shark-skin soup to the menu.

Central was sparked by the brilliant shooting of Rick Shelton and C. D. Bodam. Shelton sent 35 points crashing thru the nets and Bodam added 28. South's Ron Schwab, the league's leading point-maker going into the weekend, topped the Colts with 21.

The contest was close for a period with South holding a 15-14 lead going into the second quarter. Then came the explosion as Central ripped off 31 points in the eight minutes before halftime to take a 45-35 lead to the dressing room. The Wildcats led 68-50 after three quarters and then added 28 points in the final quarter.

Trinidad broke away from a 17-17 tie after one quarter to hold a narrow 30-29 lead at halftime and then outscored Junction 22-12 in a decisive third period. Jim Toupal hit 22 points for the Miners and Mike Vecchio 17. Joe Brack topped Junction with 13.

Zany Trotters Slated Here Monday Night

The World's zaniest basketball players, Abe Saperstein's Harlem Globetrotters, make an annual appearance at the City Auditorium Monday night to taunt and trade baskets with the San Francisco Golden Gaters.

* * *

TROTTERS' DRIBBLE MARVEL—Murphy Summons, the Harlem Globetrotters dribble marvel, will invade the City Auditorium in Colorado Springs Monday night when the Trotters play the San Francisco Golden Gaters. The local show, arranged by promoter Abe Marylander, is slated to kick-off at 8 p.m. Top comedian of the Globetrotters is Bob (Showboat) Hall, who has been a favorite among local sports fans in the past.

* * *

The local show, arranged by promoter Abe Marylander, will include the usual wealth of variety entertainment preceeding and at half-time of the "basketball" contest. The Globetrotters themselves are scheduled for an 8 p.m. showing and Marylander anticipates the same type of packed house that has greeted them at the City Aud each winter.

The Globetrotter team is actually a three unit aggregation and the one appearing here includes several of the finer players. Top comedian of the group is Bob "Showboat" Hall, one of the finest ball-handlers to ever take a dribble. He, along with rapid-fire dribbler, Murphy Summons, will highlight the local show.

Hall, among the better-known of the Trotter stars, is six feet-two inches of teeth and hands on the court. His magic with a basketball is legendary as is the taunting laugh which accompanies the majority of his feats. Hall performs the majority of the stunts which are in the act of "Meadowlark" Lemon, his counterpart with the top unti which tours the major cities.

Also on the team appearing locally will be 6-2 Ernie Eagner of Wayne State, 6-5 Dave Hicks, a high school star from Connecticut, 6-8 Walter Kennedy from Florida A & M, 6-4 Grady McCollum from Western Illinois, 6-6 Kenneth Glenn from Niagara University, 6-5 Mel Davis from Tennessee A&I, and 6-5 Do las Hines from Prairie View A&M.

The San Francisco team which will provide opposition is also made up of top college players. The roster includes 6-0 Tike Karavas of El Caminos Junior College in California, 6-4 Bill Leedom from Cal Poly in San Luis Obispo, 6-8 Bob Stoermer of Oklahoma University, 6-0 Bob Akeo from the University of Hawaii, 5-10 Jim Ibrao of Los Angeles State, 6-0 Wilbert Alexander of Florida A & M, and 6-5 Harry Dinnell of Pepperdine College.

Monday's performance will also include a number of variety acts. Bob Foy and Lilly Steele, unicyclists; Jackie Coconut, who has a balancing act; juggler Ramon Esqueda; the Jovers, comic acrobats; equilibrist Princess Elena; and trampolinists, the Parry Kids, will all present routines during the evening.

The Globetrotters are in their 37th season of providing offbeat basketball entertainment for fans all over the globe. Their travels include showings in 82 nations, including most of those behind the Iron Curtain.

Their appearance here has been a sellout in each of the past several seasons. Advance man, Eddie McGuire, said early this week that the unit of the team which will play here Monday had proven especially popular this winter and has been drawing some of the biggest crowds in its history.

Tribe Manager Rates Team as Contender

By BIRDIE TEBBETTS
Manager, Cleveland Indians

—BRADENTON BEACH, Fla. (AP)—I believe the Cleveland Indians have rounded the corner in their quest for a contending position in the American League pennant race.

Last year's Indians finished in a tie for fifth place, which means we must have had some problems. However, before discussing 1964 and how we are prepared to face our problems, I would like to point out some of our 1963 mishaps.

Shortstop Dick Howser suffered a serious leg injury in June and was virtually useless for the rest of the season. Our center fielder, Vic Davalillo, has his forearm broken in June 12 and missed eight weeks. Catcher John Romano fractured his hand in May and was out for several weeks. Woodie Held sustained a fractured finger and was on the bench for three weeks.

These were our more serious injuries and we had several lesser ones. While every club has some injuries in the course of a season, I believe we had far more than our share.

In addition, Dick Donovan, a 20-game winner in 1962, had a sub-standard year as did Tito Francona, who bated 50 points under his lifetime average.

I feel confident that Fred Whitfield, Larry Brown and Max Alvis of our infield and Vic Davalillo of the outfield, all first year men for us in 1963, will continue to improve in 1964.

Joe Azcue, who enjoyed a great season for us, together with Romano, gives us fine depth in the catching department. A healthy Howser, plus Davalillo, improves our team speed considerably.

Our club has good over-all power. Leon Wagner, Held, Alvis, Whitfield, Romano, Azcue, Al Luplow and Al Smith can break up a ball game with one long blow. Held, a player's player, will make every position competitive because he'll find a position to play and he can play them all well.

None of our infielders can ease up knowing that a versatile performer like Jerry Kindall is sitting on the bench. Bob Chance, the Eastern League's Most Valuable Player last season, showed me that he can hit major league pitching in his brief spell with us last September.

Our reports on another rookie, Ruthford (Chico) Salmon, who led the Pacific Coast League in hitting, are outstanding and young Tommie Agee has unlimited potential.

We should start the 1964 season with practically the same pitching staff which broke the American League record by striking out 1,018 batters last year. It is versatile, deep and talented.

Donovan, Jim Grant, Jack Kralick, Pete Ramos, Gary Bell Jerry Walker and Don McMahon are seasoned veterans and they are joined by youngsters such as Tommy John, Sam McDowell, and Gordon Seyfried. Sonny Siebert and Floyd Weaver are two others who have impressed me.

Last year, we were fortunate in having tow top rookies in Alvis and Davalillo develop into top-notch major leaguers. This year it may be John, Chance, Salmon or Agee. We must try to improve our defense and be ready to handle left-handed pitching. It takes talent and patience to develop a winner and we think we have both.

Death of Lion Rookie Stuns NFL Team Players

By MIKE TROJANOWSKI
United Press International

DETROIT (UPI) — "His loss is hard for me to comprehend."

That was the way John Gordy, veteran guard of the Detroit Lions, today attempted to explain the sudden death of Lucien Reeberg, the 21-year-old rookie tackle of the Lions who died Friday of "cardiac failure brought on by uremic poisoning."

"Only a few weeks ago Lucien was telling me that he was going to get married soon," Gordy said with tears in his eyes. "It's a great loss to the Lions . . . and to all who knew Lucien."

Reeberg, a native of New York, was one of the biggest men in the National Football League. He packed 290 pounds on his 6-4 frame.

A stunned William Clay Ford who recently took over as sole owner of the NFL club, said Reeberg's death came as a "great shock to me." Ford said neither he nor any members of the team "had any indication that Lucien was ill when he checked into the hospital ten days ago."

Dr. Richard A. Thompson, team physician who also attended Reeberg at the Detroit Osteopathic Hospital where he died, said "Lucien had a long history of uremia, but as in the case of so many young people, it was what we call a 'fluctuating' disease.

"The disease will crop up one day and not the next," Thompson said, "and as a result of this, the young people tend to ignore the disease."

Thompson said further tests would be performed on Reeberg's body.

Ford said Reeberg's death "was a grat loss to his family, to me, the Detroit Lions and the National Football League. Lucien had great promise as a pro footballer."

Drafted 19th by the club, Reeberg won a starting role midway through last season at offensive tackle with his spirited play and jarring blocks.

Liston Wears Crown With Humor

By OSCAR FRALEY
UPI Sports Writer

SURFSIDE, Fla. (UPI) — A year and a half as heavyweight champion of the world has worked a change in Charles (Sonny) Liston which is obvious as he works out today at Surfside Auditorium.

Back then, before he demolished Floyd Patterson in one whirlwind round, a feat he subsequently repeated in their return match, Liston was a hostile and suspicious man. Withdrawn and sullenly quiet, he glared at the world and held it off.

These days, as he prepares to battle Cassius Clay on Feb. 25 at nearby Miami Beach Convention Hall, he is a man with a smile who fires quips faster than an extrovert comedian.

A crowd of more than 250 was on hand for his intial workout and Liston, clad in red tights which covered his legs, blue trunks and a white T-shirt, was in a jovial mood.

"It seems a shame to do all this training for one round," he told the crowd between grunts produced by a medicine ball thrown into his midsection by trainer Willie Reddish.

"What do you weigh?" someone shouted from the lavender colored seats below the stage on which Liston skipped rope to the recorded strains of "Night Train."

"Well, man," Liston replied with a piano key smile, "I weigh just enough."

"Don't worry about me running," said Liston quickly, although he did four miles of roadwork in the morning. "Worry bout how far that Cassius might run."

Clay Calls Himself the Gambler's Dream

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Heavyweight challenger Cassius Clay is making the most out of his underdog status in the Feb. 25 title bout.

To his self - given title of "the greatest," he has added "the gambler's dream."

"Everybody's gonna get rich betting on Cassius Clay," the Louisville lip said Friday, after learning he was a 6-1 underdog against Sonny Liston.

While the 22-year-old challenger was talking, the heavyweight champion was pounding away at sparring partner Jesse Bowdry.

At one point, Liston drove his first into Bowdry's stomach, doubling up the sparring mate.

Later, sitting on the edge of the stage and wearing a heavy pair of paratroop boots, the champion explained why he wore the massive shoes.

"That Clay is gonna be on a bicycle," he said. "Well, old Sonny's gonna be on a motorcycle."

Asked who he might fight next, Liston scowled and said he would like Eddie Machen, who clutched and waltzed the distance against him in a previous meeting.

He turned serious as someone asked him just what being the heavyweight champion had meant to him.

"It means a lot of things" he said, wrinkling his forehead. "But the most is the kids. I'll never get over the way those children look at me. I got to go for the kids."

He does, too. As he left the gym a group of youngsters surrounded him, asking for autographs. Liston pulled out a huge fistful of wallet-sized autographed pictures from his hip pocket.

"I got one of those," said a boy of 11. "I want your autograph — personal."

Soberly Liston complied and then, as the boy walked away, chuckled. "How about those kids."

The man has come a long way.

FIRST RUN WINNER—Richard Homes, of Aspen, was timmed the fastest during the first run of the Class A boys competition, Saturday during the 1964 Southern Rocky Mountain Ski Association (SRMSA) Junior slalom championships conducted at Ski Broadmoor. Some 100 contestants from the five-state SRMSA area were expected to compete in the two-day meet. The competition was slated to conclude today.

Casper, Courtney Tie For Palm Springs Lead

By HAL WOOD
UPI Sports Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — (UPI) — Young Chuck Courtney, playing in only his fourth PGA tournament, deadlocked with fellow San Diegan Billy Casper for the fourth round lead in the $100,000 Palm Springs Golf Classic with 72 hole scores of 279.

Courtney, a 23-year-old redhaired ex-collegian from San Diego State, came from far back to catch the faltering leaders Saturday with a spectacular five-under-par 67.

Casper moved ahead with a two-under-par 70 at Bermuda Dunes as Charlie Sifford, co-leader for the first three rounds dropped two strokes back with a 73 to 281.

That tied him with British Open champion Bob Charles, who had a 73, and Randy Glover, 22-year-old newcomer from Florence, S.C., who had a 71.

The final 18 holes in this 90-hole marathon will be played Sunday.

Courtney, who has won $195 in prize money since he started playing in the San Diego Open three weeks ago, stole the show from the season names on the circuit.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus stayed within range of the leaders with a 72 for 286. And Arnold Palmer, after firing an outgoing 33, had to settle for a 69 for a 290 total.

Courtney, a long ball hitter, had a great day with his three and four woods as he hit his approaches under the greens on all four par-five holes. He then two-putted for birdies on each. He had six birdies and single bogey. The other birds were with short putts.

He hit 16 greens in regulation figures.

Among those deadlocked at 282 were 53-year-old Jimmy Demaret, Dave Marr and French Open champion Bruce Devlin.

Casper, dogged every step of the way by his seven-year-old son, had an unspectacular 70 at Bermuda Dunes with three birdies and a bogey.

He got one birdie on the front nine with a 20-foot putt. Twice on the back nine he nearly holed out approach shots but had to settle for birdies. His lone bogey came when he caught a trap on the 17th.

It took a score of 292 to qualify for the fifth round Sunday. Most of the big names made the grade.

Tied at 283 came first round co-leader Tommy Jacobs, Don January, George Knudson, Gene Littler and Tony Lema.

CIGAR-CHOMPING SIFFORD—Charlie Sifford stares bleakly into space after missing a short put for a birdie on the third green at Elorado Country Club during Saturday's fourth round of the $100,000 Palm Springs Golf Classic. Despite a rash of missed putts, Sifford made the turn one under par while trying to stay in the lead he's shared for three straight days.

Noted Eye Doctor Claims Beer Improves Golf Game

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI)—If you must drink, don't drive—but it's perfectly okay to go ahead and putt.

That's the word from a noted eye doctor who claims one glass of beer often can improve a golfer's putting.

Notice carefully, he said only ONE.

Dr. William W. Vallotton, a leading ophthalmologist at the Medical College of South Carolina, reported his findings before the 57th annual meeting of the Southern Medical Association.

He said that alcohol increases convergence tone and may convert exophoria into orthophoria.

For the benefit of any non-golfers in the crowd, the doctor means one beer may make a golfer see better.

The theory works out fine on paper, but to see what it actually does on the green, an experiment, strictly in the interests of medical science, you understand, will be conducted at the Doral Country Club in Miami, Fla., home of the $50,000 Doral Invitational.

Golfers who wish to take part in the experiment will be asked to drink a beer, write down their average putting score and then their actual number of putts after completing 18 holes.

Howard Kaskel, president of the Doral Club and a ranking New York staee amateur golfer, says the experiment will be conducted for one month beginning Saturday.

Maybe the doctor's principle sounds far-fetched, but there could be something to it," Kaskel said. "Anyway, golfers have done much more drastic things to cut down their scores."

Dr. Vallotton's theory concerns itself with one beer and makes no provision for other alcoholic beverages.

The doctor said a beer may create normal condition of balance of the ocular muscles of the two eyes in which their visual lines meet at the object toward which they are directed.

This would compensate for inefficient action of one or more of the eye muscles which causes one eye to deviate from the correct direction.

And if that isn't all quite clear, then blame it on the beer.

Action Is Expected In Trial of Hoffa

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) —Government attorneys predict they will complete their jury-tampering charges late next week against Teamsters President James R. Hoffa and five others.

"We definitely expect to finish up next week," said chief prosecutor James Neal of Washington at the conclusion Friday of the trial's second week before U.S. Dist. Court Judge Frank Wilson.

Defense attorneys said they cannot estimate how much time they will take until the government rests its case.

The six are accused of trying to influence jurors in Hoffa's 1962 conspiracy trial at Nashville. That trial ended with a hung jury.

Lowered Birth Rate Reported For Americans

By JOHN BARBOUR

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid declining birth rates, the United States still has a baby crop of over 4 million a year, say the population experts.

And the future is so potentially fertile they dread to think about it.

The U.S. Public Health Service reported this week that November yielded only 327,000 babies to Americans, the lowest November since 1953.

The Population Reference Bureau says the birth rate has declined some 14 per cent since 1957.

But these figures hardly tell the story.

The postwar baby boom is about to bring its multitude of offspring into the marrying years. A girl born in 1957 is 17 years old this year.

The prospect of what this could mean to the U.S. population in terms of growth is impressive. Even with fewer babies per mother, there will be many more mothers, hence many more babies.

For instance, there were 11 million women in their 20s, the prime reproductive age, in 1960. By 1970, there will be 15 million women in this age group says the Population Reference Bureau. By 1980, 20 million.

If U.S. women have the 3.1 children they currently seem to plan on, it could push the U.S. population to 249 million by 1980, to 344 million by the year 2000, and to over a billion by year 2065.

YMCA Not Selling Candy for Camp Money

The Colorado Springs YMCA is not selling candy to raise money for the summer encampment at Shadybrook, H. M. Hotchkiss, membership director, said Saturday.

"We have heard," he said, "that some persons, we think from Denver, have been selling candy, saying that it was to raise money for the YMCA Camp. We have had nothing to do with this. The YMCA in Colorado Springs is on the United Fund and does not carry on any money raising activity for the camp."

GOLD SPRAY

SEATTLE (UPI) — A technique for spraying gold on — like paint is sprayed — may result in wider use of the precious metal, says a Lockheed Missiles and Space Co., scientist.

The scientist, D. J. Levy, inventor of the technique, says the process has already been used successfully in the design of antennas for space vehicles.

PRACTICING A HOLD — Bill Long, instructor, demonstrates a judo hold on Ron Randolph. New YMCA members enrolled in the current membership campaign will have a wide assortment of activities to choose from. While the swimming program, gym classes and most of the other activities are free of charge to members, the judo class and certain other special activities are offered on a fee basis. YMCA members may receive a sixteen lesson judo course for $3.00 while non-members may enroll for an $8.00 fee. An allocation from the Pikes Peak United Fund helps keep membership costs and fees low.

Boycott of Classes Is Proposed at CU

BOULDER (UPI) — Student leaders at the University of Colorado have asked undergraduates to boycott classes next Wednesday to protest Gov. John Love's proposed tuition hikes at state colleges and universities.

Student Body President Carlton Stoiber said students were asked to cut classes from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. He called the action a "recess for redress."

C U officials refused to comment on the proposed boycott other than to say it was the first time in years that such a drastic step had been called for by student leaders.

HAMBURG — Hamburg is to have Europe's biggest animal home. Accommodation will be chiefly for dogs and cats, but there will also be a farm where old horses can live in retirement.

READY, LET'S GO—Jimmy and Bobby Lyon listen intently as instructor Bill Lang explains the importance of limbering up exercises. The two boys are the youngest members of the judo class for elementary school students at the YMCA. The class meets at 7 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays.

BUNNY HOP—Bill Lang, left, followed by Ron Randolph lead the judo class at the YMCA in a limbering up exercise. His Tuesday and Thursday class at 8 p.m. is attended by a varied group from business men to teenaged boys.

Cuba Charged With Protestant Persecution

By THEODORE A. EDIGER

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Exiled Cuban church officials asked the World Council of Churches today to investigate what they called increasing persecution of Protestants in Cuba.

They cited newly imposed restrictions, harassment of pastors and closing of churches.

The Movement for Christian Action, headed by the Rev. Manuel Viera, exiled Methodist pastor now in Tampa, Fla., told the council in Geneva, Switzerland, that Protestants "have been persecuted, first in subtle and silent ways, later openly, and always in a systematic and implacable way by the Communist regime."

The movement urged the council to look into this "and let the world know the real situation."

The Rev. Germinal Rivas, information officer for the movement, said underground sources reported the Fidel Castro regime had just closed one of Cuba's largest Protestant churches, the Central Baptist in Santa Clara.

The minister had "decided not to let the church be used for communism," Rivas said.

About 40 per cent of Cuba's Protestant churches are closed, Rivas reported. He estimated that before Castro's take-over in 1959 about 800 operated in Cuba. These were mostly Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopal, Pentecostal and Jehovah's Witnesses congregations.

Under new Cuban regulations, unpublished but relayed to Protestant ministers, Rivas said, no person under 18 can become a church member, printed matter such as Bibles or church notices cannot be distributed, church groups must register as associations rather than as churches, lists of persons making church monetary pledges must be furnished the government, and religious activity outside churches is forbidden.

CC Senior Karate Teacher At YMCA

A Colorado College senior Bill Lang who received a first degree black belt last Spring, awarded by the Korean Judo Academy, is instructing judo at the YMCA.

Lang will accept more pupils in either the 8-12 year old class or the junior high through adult class on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

The younger group meets at 7 p.m. with the older group scheduled from 8 to 9 p.m. The current sessions will continue for another twelve lessons. Latecomers may enroll at a reduced fee. The full fee for a sixteen lesson course is $3.00 for YMCA members and $8.00 for non members.

Another 16 lesson series will begin in March.

Registration may be made by contacting physical director James Maul at the YMCA.

Lang, a pre-med student is the president of the judo club at Colorado College. His home is in Garden City, Kan.
